UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

WILLIAM J. WHITSITT, Plaintiff,
v.
AMAZON.COM,
Defendant.

No. 2:14-cv-00416-TLN-CKD

ORDER

Plaintiff is proceeding pro se in this action. The matter was referred to a United States Magistrate Judge pursuant to Local Rule 302(c). On July 14, 2017, the magistrate judge filed findings and recommendations (“the F&R”) herein, which contained notice that any objections to the F&R were to be filed within fourteen days. (ECF No. 56.) Defendant Amazon.com, Inc. (“Amazon”) has filed objections to the F&R.¹ (ECF No. 59.) The magistrate judge recommended that (i) Amazon’s motion to dismiss (ECF No. 33) be denied, and (ii) Amazon be directed to answer the Second Amended Complaint (ECF No. 13). After carefully reviewing the record, the Court adopts these recommendations, as supplemented, modified, and clarified herein.

I. ANALYSIS

This Court dismissed Plaintiff’s Second Amended Complaint. (ECF No. 16.) The Ninth

¹ Defendant indicates Amazon.com, Inc. is incorrectly named in the caption as “Amazon.com.” (ECF No. 34 at 5 n.1.)

1 Circuit affirmed dismissal of all claims but one: failure-to-hire in violation of the Age
2 Discrimination in Employment Act (“ADEA”) against Amazon. (ECF No. 23.) At this point, 3 Amazon moved to dismiss this claim under Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure
4 for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, as well as Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to sufficiently plead 5 exhaustion of his ADEA claim. (ECF Nos. 33 & 34.) The F&R set out the standard of review for 6 such motions. (See ECF No. 56 at 2:10–3:19.) The Court adopts that portion of the F&R, so 7 there is no need to set it out again here.

8 As the magistrate judge correctly summarized, Amazon’s Rule 12(b)(1) argument is this 9 Court lacks jurisdiction because, in Defendant’s view, Plaintiff has not exhausted his 10 administrative remedies for his failure-to-hire claim against Amazon. (ECF No. 56 at 4.) 11 Amazon’s Rule 12(b)(6) argument is that Plaintiff has not sufficiently plead exhaustion, even if 12 he has actually exhausted his claim. (ECF No. 56 at 4.) Thus, at a minimum, Amazon contends 13 Plaintiff should be required to amend his complaint to attach his EEOC charge and plead specific 14 facts showing exhaustion. (ECF No. 56 at 4.) The magistrate judge correctly summarized the 15 two arguments Plaintiff offered in response: First, Plaintiff argues he was not required to exhaust 16 administrative remedies as to his ADEA claim. (ECF No. 56 at 4–5.) Second, Plaintiff contends 17 he did exhaust his claim against Amazon. (ECF No. 56 at 5.)

18 As the magistrate judge’s analysis demonstrates, Plaintiff’s first argument is plainly 19 wrong. The ADEA imposes a requirement to exhaust administrative remedies. (See ECF No. 56 20 at 3–4 (quoting 29 U.S.C. § 626(d)(1) (“No civil action may be commenced by an individual 21 under this section until 60 days after a charge alleging unlawful discrimination has been filed with 22 the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.”) and citing Albano v. Schering-Plough Corp., 23 912 F.2d 384, 386 (9th Cir. 1990) (“The filing of an EEOC charge is a prerequisite to bringing a 24 civil action under the [ADEA.]”)).

25 Under Ninth Circuit precedent, substantial compliance with the administrative exhaustion 26 requirement is a jurisdictional prerequisite to such a claim. Sommatino v. United States, 255 F.3d 27 704, 708 (9th Cir. 2001) (emphasis removed). The jurisdictional scope of an ADEA plaintiff’s 28 civil action depends upon the scope of the charge filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity

1 Commission (“EEOC”) and the agency’s subsequent investigation. See Sosa v. Hiraoka, 920 2 F.2d 1451, 1456 (9th Cir. 1990). A district court also “has jurisdiction over any charges of 3 discrimination that are ‘like or reasonably related to’ the allegations made before the EEOC, as 4 well as charges that are within the scope of an EEOC investigation that reasonably could be 5 expected to grow out of the allegations.” Leong v. Potter, 347 F.3d 1117, 1122 (9th Cir. 2003).

6 The ADEA does not define the term “charge.” Federal Express Corp. v. Holowecki, 552 7 U.S. 389, 395 (2008). However, the Supreme Court concluded in Holowecki that:

8 In addition to the information required by the regulations, i.e., an 9 allegation and the name of the charged party, if a filing is to be 10 deemed a charge it must be reasonably construed as a request for 11 the agency to take remedial action to protect the employee’s rights or otherwise settle a dispute between the employer and the employee.

12 Id. at 402 (emphasis added).

13 The magistrate judge summarized the parties’ submissions in connection with Plaintiff’s 14 second argument as follows:

15 [Plaintiff] complained to Amazon’s human resources department 16 about the alleged age discrimination in October, November, and December 2013. [(ECF No. 13.)]

17 On January 6, 2014, [P]laintiff signed and mailed an EEOC intake 18 questionnaire answer sheet to the EEOC. (ECF No. 51 at 12, 14-25). In it, he described various incidents at Amazon and SMX 19 Staffing, including his application to Amazon in August 2013, his hire by SMX Staffing in September 2013, and his observation that 20 many permanent Amazon employees were younger and less qualified than he. (ECF No. 51 at 14.) Plaintiff made numerous 21 other allegations not relevant to the remaining claim and asserted retaliation, discrimination, and ADEA violations. From the 22 rambling and somewhat disorganized recitation of events in the answer sheet, it is not clear whether [P]laintiff is alleging certain 23 violations by Amazon, SMX Staffing, or both. Plaintiff does not ask the EEOC to take any specific remedial action against either 24 Amazon or SMX.

26 Notably, [P]laintiff’s intake questionnaire answer sheet is not on an EEOC form, nor does it answer EEOC questions. Rather, it is a 27 word processing document containing numerous allegations but making no specific request for relief.

28 It was initially unclear whether [P]laintiff filed another charge with 1 the EEOC, separate from the intake sheet. No copy of any such 2 charge is in the record, and Amazon never received notice of one.

3 At the hearing on the motion, [P]laintiff stated that he had no copy 4 of another charge and did not remember signing or filing such a 5 charge.

6 [Amazon] submits a “Notice of Charge of Discrimination” in 7 EEOC Charge No. 550-2014-00316, dated January 22, 2014 and 8 addressed to “SMX Staffing For Amazon.com.” (ECF No. 53-1, 9 Russell Decl., Ex. A.) The notification states that [P]laintiff filed a 10 charge of discrimination “against your organization” under Title 11 VII of the Civil Rights Act and the ADEA, alleging age 12 discrimination and retaliation. (Id.) The notification lists the 13 earliest date of alleged discrimination as December 1, 2013, nearly 14 four months after [P]laintiff applied to Amazon. (Id.) It lists the 15 violation as “continuing.” (Id.)

16 On April 4, 2014, the EEOC issued a Notice of Right to Sue in 17 Charge No. 550-2014-00316. (ECF No. 51 at 13.) The notice 18 informs [P]laintiff that “[t]he EEOC is terminating its processing of 19 this charge” and “closing your case,” giving [P]laintiff ninety days 20 to file suit in federal or state court under the ADEA. (Id.) The 21 Notice is cc’d to “SMX Staffing for Amazon.com.”

23 To summarize the record, [P]laintiff submitted a lengthy and 24 somewhat confusing intake sheet to the EEOC asserting various 25 violations by Amazon and SMX, but requesting no remedial 26 action. The EEOC construed this as a “charge,” but only against 27 SMX and only concerning actions beginning in December 2013 and 28 ongoing. The EEOC further construed the charge as asserting Title VII and ADEA claims against SMX; accordingly, it served notice on SMX. Amazon was never served with the charge and had no opportunity to take remedial action as to [P]laintiff. Three months later, the EEOC informed [P]laintiff that they were closing their case based on the charge, such that [P]laintiff had ninety days to file a lawsuit; again, this notice was cc’d to SMX but not to Amazon.

(ECF No. 56 at 5–7 (emphasis added) (footnotes omitted).)

22 The SMX referenced in the above quoted paragraphs is a defendant who has since been 23 dismissed from this case. In a footnote, the magistrate judge suggested that, “[u]nder Holowecki, 24 the EEOC was ‘not required’ to treat [P]laintiff’s intake answer sheet as a charge against either 25 Amazon or SMX, because it did not seek remedial action.” (ECF No. 56 at 7 n.4.) For reasons 26 that will become clear from the discussion to follow, the Court does not adopt this footnote.

27 That being said, the F&R nevertheless treats Plaintiff’s submissions to the EEOC as a 28 charge without further discussion. This may be because the EEOC seems to have done so,

1 although this is not clearly stated. Whatever the reason, the magistrate judge concludes this 2 “charge” and the related “investigation did not encompass the failure-to-hire claim against 3 Amazon[, and t]here appears to be no meaningful addition to the record on this issue, such as 4 another EEOC charge filed by [P]laintiff.” (ECF No. 56 at 7–8.) Consequently, the magistrate 5 judge proceeded to the question of “whether the claim against Amazon is ‘like or reasonably 6 related to the claims [Plaintiff] presented to the EEOC.’” (ECF No. 56 at 8 (citing Leong, 347
7 F.3d at 1121).) Ultimately, the magistrate judge concluded as follows: “[P]laintiff’s allegations 8 of age discrimination by Amazon in the intake sheet are sufficiently related to EEOC Charge No.
9 550-2014-00316 so as to establish subject matter jurisdiction and/or fulfill the statutory 10 exhaustion requirement.” (ECF No. 56 at 8.)

11 In essence, Amazon’s objections are two-fold. First, Amazon argues that Plaintiff’s only 12 submission to the EEOC was not a “charge” in the relevant sense because it “lacked the requisite 13 request for remedial action or relief that the U.S. Supreme Court found critical to constitute a 14 charge in Federal Express Corp. v. Holowecki, 552 U.S. 389 (2008).” (ECF No. 59 at 2.) 15 Second, the magistrate judge “misapplies the ‘like or reasonably related’ test,” as it examines “the 16 relatedness between the EEOC charge and the present civil lawsuit[.]” (ECF No. 59 at 3.) The 17 Court will address these arguments in order.

18 With respect to the first argument, the Court will briefly return to Holowecki. As noted 19 above, Holowecki makes clear that “if a filing is to be deemed a charge it must be reasonably 20 construed as a request for the agency to take remedial action to protect the employee’s rights or 21 otherwise settle a dispute between the employer and the employee.” Holowecki, 552 U.S. at 402.
22 However, the Court did not stop there. The Court explained that a filer’s state of mind was not 23 determinative, but that the following would be in “accord with” the rule set out in the preceding 24 sentence: a filing with the EEOC should be examined “from the standpoint of an objective 25 observer to determine whether, by a reasonable construction of its terms, the filer requests the 26 agency to activate its machinery and remedial processes.” Id. The Supreme Court acknowledged 27 that “under this permissive standard a wide range of documents might be classified as charges.”
28 Id. However, the Supreme Court concluded “this result is consistent with the design and purpose

1 of the ADEA.” Id.

2 The Court has carefully reviewed the intake questionnaire (ECF No. 51 at 14–25). The 3 Court agrees with the magistrate judge’s characterization that it contains a rambling and 4 somewhat disorganized recitation of events. Likewise, the Court was unable to locate a place 5 where Plaintiff requested the EEOC to take any specific remedial action or specifically requesting 6 relief. However, Plaintiff repeatedly makes future-looking statements that he will prove that he 7 was subject to discriminatory treatment, at times attempting to use legal jargon. (See, e.g., ECF 8 No. 51 at 14 (“I applied for Amazon.com on or about 10th of August [2013] This is the fact
9 from where all Discrimination acts originate from I noticed . . . that Amazon had hired 800 10 Permanent Employees considerably younger and less qualified than myself I Objected to not 11 being hired by Amazon.com directly to their Human Resources Officers on or about October 17, 12 2013 . . . and again November 13, 2013[.]), 15–16 (“I will further prove that Considerably 13 younger and favorite workers Considerably younger less qualified workers where [sic] 14 treated much more favorably I witnessed this. . . . I witnesses [sic] all this and fully expect to 15 prove all this beyond a reasonable doubt. . . . I will prove [younger, less qualified workers were] 16 not promoted by Productivity and achievement; I will prove . . . this to be true. I witnessed this 17 and I have witnesses that will testify to these facts.”); 18 (“I thus, expect to prove by Subpoena of 18 Facts that I was singled out . . . by Amazon.com I will prove beyond any reasonable 19 doubt, Discriminatory and Retaliatory Intent in Disciplinary Actions and Termination action 20 taken against me. . . . I do believe . . . those numbers will prove beyond a Reasonable Doubt that 21 I was clearly treated less favorably and differently then [sic] other Considerably Younger workers 22”) (emphasis added) (capitalization is as in the original).

23 In light of the foregoing, the Court thinks the permissive standard of Holowekci is plainly 24 met. Simply put, “an objective observer” would “reasonabl[y] constru[e]” Plaintiff’s submission 25 as requesting “the agency to activate its machinery and remedial processes[.]” Holowecki, 552 26 U.S. at 402. Put another way, “reasonably construed,” Plaintiff’s submission is “a request for the 27 agency to . . . otherwise settle a dispute between” him and those he contends discriminated 28 against him. Id. Consequently, Amazon’s first objection must be overruled.

1 The Court turns to Amazon’s second objection. However, there is a preliminary matter 2 that must be briefly addressed. Amazon suggests the F&R “construed . . . the ‘Notice of Charge
3 of Discrimination’ dated January 22, 2014” as the “actual EEOC charge.” (ECF No. 59 at 4.) 4 Candidly, this strikes the Court as an unreasonable characterization of the F&R. Rather, it seems 5 clear the magistrate thought the EEOC construed the intake sheet Plaintiff submitted as the charge
6 and that the magistrate judge took the same position. (See, e.g., ECF No. 56 at 6 (“It was initially 7 unclear whether the [P]laintiff filed another charge with the EEOC, separate from the intake
8 sheet.”) (emphasis added), 7 (“[P]laintiff submitted a lengthy and somewhat confusing intake 9 sheet to the EEOC asserting various violations. . . . The EEOC construed this as a ‘charge’”) 10 (emphasis added).) In any event, the Court holds the intake sheet (ECF No. 51 at 14–25) is a 11 “charge” within the meaning of the ADEA. To the extent anything in the F&R can be read as 12 contrary to this holding, that portion of the F&R is not adopted.

13 Amazon did not object to the magistrate judge’s conclusion “the EEOC charge and 14 investigation did not encompass the failure-to-hire claim against Amazon.” (ECF No. 56 at 7.) 15 The Court accepts this for purposes of the instant motion. This does not end the inquiry. Ninth 16 Circuit precedent on this point is as follows:

17 The EEOC’s failure to address a claim asserted by the plaintiff in 18 her charge has no bearing on whether the plaintiff has exhausted her 19 administrative remedies with regard to that claim. Similarly, as in 20 the present action, whether the EEOC in fact conducted any 21 investigation at all is not material for purposes of exhaustion.
Subject matter jurisdiction extends over all allegations of discrimination that either fell within the scope of the EEOC’s actual investigation or an EEOC investigation which can reasonably be expected to grow out of the charge of discrimination.

22 We construe the language of EEOC charges with utmost liberality 23 since they are made by those unschooled in the technicalities of 24 formal pleading. The crucial element of a charge of discrimination is the factual statement contained therein.”

25 B.K.B. v. Maui Police Dep’t, 276 F.3d 1091, 1099–1100 (9th Cir. 2002) (emphasis added) 26 (internal citations, alterations, and emphasis removed).

27 Amazon’s argument in favor of its second objection is premised on ignoring the contents 28 of the intake sheet. (ECF No. 59 at 3 (“Here, the Magistrate found that the intake questionnaire

1 did not meet the requirements of a charge, so the contents of that intake questionnaire do not 2 determine whether the EEOC charge is like or reasonably related to the remaining claim in this 3 lawsuit.”) The magistrate judge, of course, did not find the requirements of a charge were not 4 met. Perhaps, more importantly, the Court has demonstrated why such a conclusion would have 5 been incorrect. As the Court rejects the premise of Amazon’s argument in favor of its second 6 objection, the Court will not address the second objection on its own terms. As the magistrate 7 correctly notes, the “EEOC intake questionnaire answer sheet [Plaintiff submitted] to the EEOC .
8 . . . described various incidents at Amazon . . . , including his application to Amazon in August 9 2013 . . . and his observation that many permanent employees were younger and less qualified 10 than he.” (ECF No. 56 at 5.) Once it properly understood that the intake form (ECF No. 51 at 11 14–25) is the relevant “charge,” it is abundantly clear that the standard set out in B.K.B. is met.
12 For the foregoing reasons, Amazon’s second objection must also be rejected.

13 One more item requires brief discussion. Amazon takes the position that the Court should 14 dismiss Plaintiff’s Second Amended Complaint and “order Plaintiff to amend his complaint to 15 properly assert satisfaction of his EEOC administrative prerequisites,” if the Court rejects the just 16 discussed objections, as the Court just has. (ECF No. 59 at 5.) This echoes its opening brief 17 where Amazon argued that “at a minimum the Court should require Plaintiff to amend his 18 complaint to attach his EEOC charge and otherwise plead specific facts that demonstrate he has 19 exhausted his administrative remedies with respect to his failure to hire claim against Amazon.”
20 (ECF No. 34 at 15 (emphasis added).) At the risk of stating the obvious, Amazon made this 21 argument in support of the Rule 12(b)(6) portion of its motion.

22 Amazon’s position presupposes that a plaintiff in an ADEA claim is obligated to 23 affirmatively plead exhaustion of its administrative remedies in his complaint. The Supreme 24 Court has explicitly held “that filing a timely charge of discrimination with the EEOC is . . . a 25 requirement that, like a statute of limitations, is subject to waiver, estoppel, and equitable tolling.”
26 Zipes v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 455 U.S. 385, 393 (1982). It is not immediately obvious why 27 failure to exhaust administrative remedies is not an affirmative defense. See, e.g., Guerrero v.
28 Vilsack, 134 F. Supp. 3d 411, 429 (D.D.C. 2015) (“Because untimely exhaustion of 1 administrative remedies [in the ADEA context] is an affirmative defense, a defendant bears the 2 burden of proof.”) Obviously, a plaintiff with an ADEA claim “is not required to anticipate and 3 plead around affirmative defenses.” Bridgeford v. Salvation Army, No. 3:17-CV-03180, 2018 4 WL 357801, at *3 (C.D. Ill. Jan. 10, 2018). Amazon did not meaningfully address this point in 5 its opening brief. (ECF No. 34 at 14–15.) Consequently, the Court is not obligated to address 6 this argument. See Kaur v. City of Lodi, 263 F. Supp. 3d 947, 974 n.7 (E.D. Cal. 2017) (“The 7 Court will not address arguments presented for the first time in a reply brief.”) The Court 8 declines to do so definitively here given the poverty of briefing on this point. Williams v.

9 Eastside Lumberyard & Supply Co., 190 F. Supp. 2d 1104, 1114 (S.D. Ill. 2001).

10 Even assuming for the moment that Plaintiff is required to plead exhaustion, it is not clear 11 to the Court why Plaintiff’s allegations in the instant case are deficient. Plaintiff clearly alleges 12 that he “filed for Hearing with Amazon.com I have filed Complaint with EEOC, on: January 13 10th, 2014. I can get a Right to Sue Letter upon your request.” (ECF No. 13 at 2.) Amazon does 14 not explain why this is insufficient. It was Amazon’s burden to do so. See 5B Charles Alan 15 Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1357 (3d ed. 2004) Candidly, the 16 Court is skeptical that physically attaching an EEOC charge is required to comply with Rule 8 of 17 the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, especially where, as here, the Court has denied Amazon’s 18 Rule 12(b)(1) motion. In any event, this point was not meaningfully addressed in Plaintiff’s 19 opening brief, so the Court declines to wade further into this thicket.

20 Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

- 21 1. The F&R filed July 14, 2017, are adopted, as supplemented, modified, and 22 clarified herein;
- 23 2. Amazon’s motion to dismiss (ECF No. 33) is DENIED; and
- 24 3. Amazon is directed to answer the Second Amended Complaint within 30 days.
