

1
2 3 4 5 6
7 8 9 10 11 12
13 14
15
16
17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

UNIONAMERICA INSURANCE CO., ) LIMITED, Successor-in- ) interest to ST. PAUL ) REINSURANCE, ) Plaintiff(s), )
v. )
THE FORT MILLER GROUP, INC., )
THE FORT MILLER CO. and ) BEECHE SYSTEMS CORP., ) Defendant(s). )
_____ )

No. C05-1912 BZ

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY
ADJUDICATION

Plaintiff Unionamerica Insurance Company ("Unionamerica") has moved for summary adjudication on its first and second causes of action, on the basis that it is entitled to rescind the Commercial General Liability Gap Insurance policies ("CGL gap policies") it issued in 2000 and 2001 to defendants The Fort Miller Group, Inc. ("Fort Miller") and its subsidiary Beeche Systems Corp. ("Beeche").<sup>1</sup> <sup>1</sup> All parties have consented to my jurisdiction for all proceedings including entry of final judgment, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c).

1 Unionamerica contends that Fort Miller failed to disclose in 2 its CGL gap policy applications the nature of its business as 3 it relates to the design and manufacture of custom 4 "engineered access systems" and misrepresented the value of 5 the products Beeche manufactured. Defendants contend that 6 they did not fail to disclose material information in 7 applying for the CGL gap policies, and alternatively, that 8 any misrepresentations or omissions in the CGL gap policy 9 applications were not material to Unionamerica's decision to 10 underwrite the policies. For the reasons set forth below, 11 Unionamerica's motion is DENIED.

12 Viewing the record in the light most favorable to Fort 13 Miller and drawing all reasonable inferences therefrom, the 14 factual background to this case is as follows:

15 Fort Miller is the parent of eight subsidiary companies, 16 including Beeche. Before acquiring Beeche in 1998, Fort 17 Miller manufactured and sold pre-cast concrete products and 18 sold fencing and gates. Beeche manufactures various 19 components for "access platforms" that allow construction and 20 remediation workers to access high structures, such as office 21 buildings and bridges. Beeche also sells entire access 22 platform systems, which are comprised of its components and 23 components manufactured by other companies, that it then 24 ships to its buyers who generally assemble the system on 25 site.

26 At some point after it acquired Beeche, Fort Miller, 27 assisted by an insurance broker from Associates of Glens 28 Falls, Inc. ("AGF"), sought to purchase a gap insurance

1 policy to cover any exclusions in its comprehensive general 2 liability policy.

3 In early March 1999, Barbara Marshall ("Marshall"), a 4 broker with AGF, prepared a preliminary, unsigned application 5 for a CGL gap policy on behalf of Fort Miller and submitted 6 it to U.S. Risk Underwriters, Inc. ("U.S. Risk"). U.S. Risk 7 placed gap insurance policies with London-based companies, 8 such as St. Paul Reinsurance Co., Unionamerica's predecessor-9 in-interest.<sup>2</sup>

10 On March 8, 1999, Marshall forwarded the unsigned 11 application to Sandy Hoffman ("Hoffman"), an underwriter for 12 U.S. Risk who handled the Fort Miller account in 1999 and 13 2000. The cover letter informed Hoffman that the unsigned 14 application was Fort Miller's "first quote of this type for 15 this coverage" and requested that Hoffman review the 16 application and advise AGF if there was any additional 17 information that Fort Miller needed to submit. The unsigned 18 application identified Beeche as one of the entities that 19 Fort Miller sought to have added as a named insured under the 20 CGL gap policy and described the nature of Fort Miller's 21 business as "manufacturing, construction and service 22 industries." Marshall sent Hoffman brochures describing Fort 23 Miller's products. None of the brochures found in U.S.

---

24
25 <sup>2</sup> During argument, Unionamerica conceded that U.S. Risk 26 was acting as Unionamerica's agent. Because U.S. Risk acted as 27 Unionamerica's agent, any knowledge that U.S. Risk and its 28 underwriters had regarding the applications for the CGL gap policy is presumed to be knowledge that Unionamerica also had.
See Culley v. New York Life Ins. Co., 27 Cal.2d 187, 192 (1945)
(citing Vanciel v. Kumle, 26 Cal.2d 732, 734 (1945)).

1 Risk's files describe Beeche's products.

2 Hoffman responded in writing on March 11, 1999. The 3 only questions she asked were what the average and the 4 largest values of the products that Fort Miller manufactures.<sup>3</sup> 5 That same day, Marshall answered that the average value was 6 less than $1,000 and that the largest value was $100,000.

7 Hoffman also went online to learn more about Fort 8 Miller's products. In March 1999, she telephoned Marshall 9 and told her that she was experiencing difficulty in locating 10 Fort Miller's products on its website.<sup>4</sup> Marshall informed 11 Hoffman that all of Fort Miller's subsidiaries had their own 12 websites, which listed their respective products, and that 13 each of these websites could be accessed via the main Fort 14 Miller website.

15 On April 1, 1999, U.S. Risk transmitted a premium quote 16 for CGL gap policy coverage to AGF. In May 1999, after 17 making several changes to the original draft application, 18 including the addition of the term "engineered access" to the 19 description of its business, Fort Miller executed the 20 application. The executed application was forwarded to U.S.
21 Risk on or about June 8, 1999; however, coverage under the

---

22
23 <sup>3</sup> The CGL gap policy application contains these same 24 questions; however, the original unsigned application left the answers to these two questions blank.

25 <sup>4</sup> Unionamerica's hearsay objection to Marshall's 26 testimony about her conversation with Hoffman is OVERRULED 27 pursuant to FRE 801(2)(D). Unionamerica's objection that 28 Marshall's testimony violates the parole evidence rule is OVERRULED. Her testimony is admissible as evidence that any omission was not material to Hoffman's decision to underwrite the policy since she had access to information about Beeche.

1 policy was for April 9, 1999 through April 9, 2000.

2 On March 17, 2000, before the gap policy was scheduled 3 to expire, AGF sent a letter to U.S. Risk requesting renewal.
4 The letter asked whether U.S. Risk needed any additional 5 information from Fort Miller to quote renewal pricing. On 6 March 28, 2000, Hoffman sent a memo to AGF attaching a 7 renewal quote based on the information provided by AGF in 8 1999. The CGL gap policy was renewed for coverage through 9 April 2001, with coverage to be provided by St. Paul 10 Reinsurance Company Limited, Unionamerica's successor-in-11 interest. Unlike the signed 1999 CGL gap policy application, 12 the signed version of the 2000 CGL gap policy application 13 contained no reference to "engineered access."

14 In January 2001, Fort Miller, again using AGF as its 15 broker, requested a third renewal. Hoffman no longer worked 16 for U.S. Risk, and Betty Prah ("Prah"), Hoffman's former 17 supervisor, became the underwriter for the third policy 18 issued to Fort Miller. In the 2001 application, Fort Miller 19 added the term "access platforms" to the list of products 20 manufactured by Fort Miller and its subsidiaries; the 21 remainder of the application was identical to those submitted 22 in the previous two years. The policy was renewed in 2001, a 23 claim ensued under the 2001 policy, and Unionamerica filed an 24 action for rescission of the 2000 and 2001 GCL gap policies.

25 The papers filed in connection with this motion stand 26 about 3 feet high and exemplify much of what can go wrong

27 ///

28 ///

1 with summary judgment motion practice.<sup>5</sup> Stripped to its 2 essentials, the motion boils down to two issues: 1) whether 3 Fort Miller concealed or misrepresented the value of the 4 products that it manufactured in the applications<sup>6</sup>; 2) whether 5 Fort Miller's failed to disclose "all it knew" about the 6 nature of Beeche's business by failing to list all of 7 Beeche's products and failing to attach Beeche's product 8 brochures and, if so, whether that failure was material such 9 that it entitles Unionamerica to rescission as a matter of 10 law.

11 In a diversity action that involves interpretation of an 12 insurance contract, California law governs. Conestoga Servs.
13 Corp. v. Executive Risk Indem., Inc., 312 F.3d 976, 981 (9th 14 Cir. 2002). In California, a material misrepresentation or

---

16 <sup>5</sup> The parties did not follow the Court's order 17 requesting the filing a joint statement of undisputed facts.
18 Instead, both parties have filed separate statements of 19 undisputed facts, which are accompanied by numerous requests 20 for judicial notice, motions to strike, and objections to facts 21 that are of no material significance. Rather than rule on each 22 individual objection, motion to strike, and request for 23 judicial notice, I will simply state that I am satisfied that 24 the few material facts set forth in this Order are based on 25 admissible evidence.

26 <sup>6</sup> In its reply brief, Unionamerica alleged an 27 alternative ground for rescission based on Fort Miller's 28 misrepresentation of the premiums Fort Miller paid for its CGL coverage. Because this argument was neither raised by Unionamerica in its opening brief nor raised by Fort Miller in its opposition brief, I have not taken it into consideration as an alternative theory for rescission, and have only considered it for rebuttal purposes. See Glenn K. Jackson Inc. v. Roe, 273 F.3d 1192, 1201 (9th Cir. 2001) (stating that the district court has discretion to consider an issue raised for the first time in a reply brief); Zamani v. Carnes, 491 F.3d 990, 997 (9th Cir. 2007) (stating that the district court "need not consider arguments raised for the first time in a reply brief.").

1 concealment in an insurance application, whether intentional 2 or unintentional, entitles the insurer to rescind the 3 insurance policy ab initio.<sup>7</sup> O'Riordan v. Federal Kemper Life 4 Assurance, 36 Cal.4th 281, 286-87 (2005); Barrera v. State 5 Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co., 71 Cal.2d 659, 665, fn.4 6 (1969). This rule has been codified in the California
7 Insurance Code.<sup>8</sup> See West Coast Life Ins. Co. v. Ward, 132
8 Cal.App.4th 181, 187 (2005) (citing Imperial Casualty &
9 Indemnity Co. v. Sogomonian, 198 Cal.App.3d 169, 179-180
10 (1988)). Under California Insurance Code § 334, "materiality 11 is to be determined not by the event, but solely by the 12 probable and reasonable influence of the facts upon the party

---

14 <sup>7</sup> Fort Miller erroneously argues that the clause that 15 appears at the end of the CGL policy applications, which states 16 in relevant part that "[a]ny person who knowingly and with 17 intent to defraud any insurance company or other person files 18 an application for insurance . . . for the purpose of 19 misleading . . . commits a fraudulent insurance act . . .", 20 modifies the normal rule and permits rescission only where 21 concealment or misrepresentations are intentional. In support 22 of its position, Fort Miller cites Clarendon Nat'l Ins. Co. v.
23 Ins. Co. of the West, 442 F.Supp.2d 914, 928 (E.D. Cal. 2006).
24 The clause that Clarendon included in its coverage application 25 is distinguishable from the clause Unionamerica included, in 26 part because the clause in Clarendon specifically stated that 27 the coverage form would be "void" in the event of an 28 intentional concealment or misrepresentation of a material fact. Here, Unionamerica does not speak of voiding the application or policy, but instead informs the insured that it will be subject to criminal penalties for fraudulent statements. I therefore find Clarendon to be factually distinguishable. A California court has found "Clarendon's rescission analysis * * * unpersuasive . . .". LA Sound USA, INC. v. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 156 Cal.App.4th 1259, 1270 n.4 (2007)

<sup>8</sup> Thus, under California Insurance Code § 331,
"[c]oncealment, whether intentional or unintentional, entitles the injured party to rescind insurance." Concealment is defined in § 330 as "[n]eglect to communicate that which a party knows, and ought to communicate."

1 to whom the communication is due, in forming his estimate of 2 the disadvantages of the proposed contract, or in making his 3 inquiries." The test is subjective in the sense that "the 4 critical question is the effect truthful answers would have 5 had on [the particular insurer], not on some 'average 6 reasonable' insurer." Sogomonian, 198 Cal.App.3d 169 at 181.
7 Materiality may be determined as a matter of law where no 8 reasonable person can disagree as to the materiality of the 9 misrepresentation. See Cummings v. Fire Ins. Exch., 202 10 Cal.App.3d 1407 (1988). "The fact that the insurer has 11 demanded answers to specific questions in an application for 12 insurance is in itself usually sufficient to establish 13 materiality as a matter of law." Thompson v. Occidental Ins.
14 Co., 9 Cal.3d 904 (1973) (citations omitted).

15 Summary judgment of rescission may be properly granted 16 for the insurer where the only reasonable inference to be 17 drawn from the evidence presented is that "the false negative 18 answers and omissions of [the applicant] were material to 19 [the insurer's] decision to provide insurance coverage."
20 Sogomonian, 198 Cal.App.3d at 182; Lundardi v. Great-West 21 Life Assurance Co., 37 Cal.App.4th 807, 827 (1993); Wilson v.
22 Western National Life Ins. Co., 235 Cal.App.3d 981, 995-96 23 (1991). The burden of proof is on the insurer to establish 24 concealment or misrepresentation. Thompson, 9 Cal.3d at 915; 25 see also Casey by & Through Casey v. Old Line Life Ins. Co.
26 of Am., 996 F.Supp. 939, 944 (N.D. Cal. 1998).

27 ///

28 ///

1                                   Fort Miller's Alleged Misrepresentation
2                                   of the Value of Its Products

3           Questions 4 and 5 of the CGL gap policy applications 4           asked for the highest value of any product that Fort Miller 5           "manufactured" and the average value of the products that 6           Fort Miller "manufactured". Fort Miller answered $100,000 7           and "less than $1,000", respectively.<sup>9</sup> Unionamerica argues 8           that there "is no question" that Fort Miller misrepresented 9           both of these values, and contends that the values are in 10          fact much higher.

11          Viewing the evidence and all reasonable inferences in 12          the light most favorable to Fort Miller, I cannot say as a 13          matter of law that Fort Miller misrepresented its answers to 14          the policy application questions. The policy applications 15          inquired as to the highest value of a product that Fort 16          Miller "manufactured", not the highest value of a product 17          that it "sold."<sup>10</sup> Fort Miller has offered evidence that while 18          it "manufactures" many of the component parts for the access

---

19
20           <sup>9</sup>       These same questions were asked as questions 5 and 6 21          in the 2001 application. In the 2001 application, Fort 22          Miller's responses were identical to those in the 1999 and 2000 23          applications.

24           <sup>10</sup>       The applications ask the following four questions in 25          sequence: "What are your estimated product sales for the next 26          12 months; What is the highest value of a product that you 27          manufacture and describe that product; What is the average 28          value of a product that you manufacture; During the last five 29          years, do you know of a product that you manufactured or sold 30          which was damaged or destroyed as a result of a condition 31          within the product itself?" Fort Miller asserts and supports 32          with evidence, that the use of the disjunctive in the last 33          question caused it to believe that the drafter of the 34          application understood there to be a difference between the 35          word "manufacture" and the word "sell."

1 systems that it assembles and sells, no component part that 2 it "manufactures" has a maximum value that exceeds $100,000.
3 While the systems that Beeche ultimately "sells" may have a 4 retail value that exceeds $100,000, Fort Miller was not asked 5 that question.

6 The term "manufacture" is not defined in the 7 application. Fort Miller has submitted evidence that it 8 interpreted "manufacture" to mean creating a product from raw 9 materials and that it honestly, even conservatively, answered 10 the questions as it understood them. On summary judgment, I 11 cannot interpret a term, which Unionamerica itself chose not 12 to define, against the insured where the insured's 13 interpretation is not unreasonable. At most the questions in 14 the application created an ambiguity, which must be construed 15 against Unionamerica. See Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., 16 43 Cal. 2d 420, 424 (1954) (provisions of an application 17 clause that are susceptible to two different constructions 18 must be resolved against the insurer); State Farm Mut. Ins.
19 Co. V. Partridge, 10 Cal. 3d 94, 102 (1973)("all ambiguities 20 in an insurance policy are construed against the insurer - 21 draftsman.") Unionamerica's motion for summary adjudication 22 that it is entitled to rescission because Fort Miller 23 misrepresented the value of its products is DENIED.

24 Fort Miller's Alleged Failure to Provide

25 Requested Information About Beeche's Products

26 Unionamerica next argues that defendants had a duty to 27 disclose "all facts within their knowledge" that may have 28 been material to the risk, which included a duty to disclose

1 every one of Fort Miller's and its subsidiaries' products on 2 the application as well as attach all product brochures and 3 promotional materials. Unionamerica contends that Fort 4 Miller's alleged failure to list Beeche's products or provide 5 product brochures was a material concealment that entitles it 6 to rescission as a matter of law.<sup>11</sup>

7 Neither side has cited any California case which 8 analyzes the duties of the insurance company and the insured 9 in the context of a commercial policy application, and the 10 Court has found none. Instead, both sides cite to cases 11 analyzing applications principally for health and life 12 insurance. For example, Unionamerica cites repeatedly to 13 Thompson v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 9 Cal.3d 904, 915 14 (1973) for the proposition that Fort Miller had a duty to 15 tell Unionamerica "all it knew" about its business. While 16 this may make sense in the context of answering questions 17 about one's medical history, it makes less sense in the 18 context of Fort Miller answering questions about its eight 19 subsidiary companies-- which make thousands of products-- 20 especially when it is given two or three lines in which to do 21 so in a form application that provides no additional 22 instructions.<sup>12</sup>

---

23 24 <sup>11</sup> During argument, Fort Miller conceded that Beeche had product brochures in 1999.

25 <sup>12</sup> The only case cited to by Unionamerica outside of the 26 context of life or health insurance is Imperial Casualty and Indemnity Co. v. Sogomonian, 198 Cal.App.3d 169 (1988) 27 similarly is distinguishable. Sogomonian, dealt with 28 misrepresentations by a homeowner who failed to disclose that his house had suffered damages in a landslide in his application for fire insurance.

1 Another line of health and life insurance cases holds 2 that an insurer has a duty to investigate the accuracy of the 3 information provided by the insured, if it knows or should 4 know the information is untrue.<sup>13</sup> Rutherford v. Prudential 5 Ins. Co. of America, 234 Cal.App.2d 719, 735 (1965) (stating 6 that if an insurer has facts that put it on notice that the 7 application is incomplete or inaccurate in material respects, 8 the insurer should conduct further inquiry); see also 9 DiPasqua v. California Western States Life Ins. Co., 106 10 Cal.App.2d 281, 284-85 (1951) (insurer could not rescind 11 policy it issued knowing that insured had falsely or 12 negligently answered questions in the application). In the 13 context of a commercial insurance application such as this, I 14 see some of the parties respective duties as follows: the 15 insured has a duty to truthfully and completely answer the 16 questions on the application; the insurer should ask 17 questions to elicit information that it knows will be 18 material to its underwriting decision; the insurer does not 19 have a duty to investigate the accuracy of the insured's 20 answers; the insurer does have a duty to ask the applicant to 21 provide further information if it knows or should know that 22 the application is inaccurate or incomplete.<sup>14</sup>

---

23 24 <sup>13</sup> In part, these cases rely on Section 336 of the 25 Insurance Code which provides: "The right to information of 26 material facts may be waived, either (a) by the terms of insurance or (b) by neglect to make inquiries as to such facts, where they are distinctly implied in other facts of which information is communicated."

27 <sup>14</sup> In the context of automobile insurance, the law 28 requires an insurer to undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable period of time

1 With these respective duties in mind, Fort Miller has 2 offered evidence that even though it did not list Beeche's 3 individual products on the policy applications, in the 1999 4 application it disclosed Beeche's business as "engineered 5 access", and in the 2001 application, it added "access 6 platforms" to the list of products. If Unionamerica, knowing 7 that Beeche was one of the Fort Miller companies it was being 8 asked to insure, did not, as it contends, get any brochures 9 or other information which sufficiently described Beeche's 10 products so that it could make an informed underwriting 11 decision, it could have asked for further information.
12 Likewise, if Unionamerica did not understand the meaning of 13 terms such as "engineered access" or "access platforms" that 14 Fort Miller used, it could have asked.

15 In any event, there is evidence that Hoffman conducted 16 an independent investigation into Fort Miller's products 17 using the internet, and that during her investigation, she 18 was directed by Marshall to the individual websites of Fort 19 Miller's subsidiary companies. It is reasonable to infer for 20 summary judgment purposes that Hoffman was satisfied with 21 what she learned about the nature of the risk that Fort 22 Miller sought to insure since she decided to place the 23 insurance.

24 _____
25 from the acceptance of the application and the issuance of the 26 policy, so as to protect third persons who may be injured by 27 the insured. See Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co., 71 28 Cal.2d 659, 678 (1969). No California court has yet extended this line of reasoning to other types of insurance, such as the gap insurance policy at issue in this case, which also protect injured third parties.

1           Finally, Fort Miller submitted evidence that 2 demonstrates that even if AGF failed to send Beeche brochures 3 to U.S. Risk or sufficiently list Beeche's products on the 4 CGL gap policy applications, there is a genuine issue of 5 material fact concerning whether its failure to do so was 6 material to Unionamerica's decision to underwrite the risk.

7           Fort Miller submitted evidence that U.S. Risk's 8 underwriters' primary focus, when deciding whether to 9 undertake an insurance risk, is on the value of the 10 applicant's products, as opposed to the number of products 11 manufactured or sold, or even each product's individual risk 12 factor.<sup>15</sup> For example, Fort Miller submitted portions of 13 Prah's deposition testimony in which Prah was asked the 14 following question: ". . . [s]o it doesn't really matter what 15 the access platform is, provided it's not individually valued 16 at more than $100,000?" In response, Prah answered "[t]hat's 17 correct." (Miller Decl. Exh. G 125:23-25-126:1.)

18           As previously stated, summary judgment of rescission may 19 be properly granted for the insurer where the only reasonable 20 inference to be drawn from the evidence presented is that 21 "the false negative answers and omissions of [the applicant] 22 were material to [the insurer's] decision to provide 23 insurance coverage." Sogomonian, 198 Cal.App.3d at 182. In 24 California, this requires the insurer to demonstrate that, 25 had the true facts been disclosed, they would have caused the 26 insurer's underwriters to reject the application or accept it

---

27           <sup>15</sup> (See Miller Decl. Exh. G 90:21-91:5, 123:4-10, 131:5-28 24, 153:19-154:8.)

1 only under different terms. Old Line Life Ins. Co. v.
2 Superior Court, 229 Cal.App. 3d 1600, 1604-06 (1991). In 3 light of the evidence offered by Fort Miller, there is an 4 issue to be tried as to the materiality of Fort Miller's 5 failure to list Beeche's products on the policy applications 6 or its failure to provide U.S. Risk with any Beeche product 7 brochures.

8 For the foregoing reasons, Unionamerica's motion for 9 summary adjudication is DENIED.

10 Dated: December 22, 2008

Bernard Zimmerman
United States Magistrate Judge

11
12 G:\BZALL\BZCASES\UNIONAMERICA V. FORT MILLER\MSJv.9.BZ VERSION.wpd

13
14
15
16
17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28