I looked at Target.com and have seen a lot worse. I actually can get around.

Try signing up for a bank account with ING Direct and then logging on. I had an account with them, but they put this graphic pin pad on the screen making it impossible for me to log in on my own.

So, I moved to Emmigrant bank.

I do understand that security is an issue and that this pin pad will stop key logging programs from getting people's information, but at the cost of customers?
