13 as to the N.F.L.P.A., such as to support management fees for 14 Mr. Upshaw and others. What they're trying to do now is limit 15 that information. And I don't think that they should be able 16 to limit that information. We need the broadest scope of 17 information possible.

18 They've given us several arguments why they think 19 they should not have to give us this information. And I'd be 20 happy to go into those right now, if your Honor would like.

21 THE COURT: Well, what is the information -- I'm not 22 going to grant what you want if you just say you're entitled to 23 the broadest scope possible. First, that's not the law. You
24 haven't been around long enough, but the rules were changed.
25 it's now more limited to the issues in the case. Now, that

1 doesn't mean you lose, but you ought to at least cast a
2 legitimate argument. In state court, it might be broad as 3 possible, but this is federal court.

4 That having been said, I'm trying to understand what 5 the purpose is of why you want all these records. What are you
6 trying to prove with these records?

7 MR. HILBERT: All right. Well, let me give you --
8 well, a scenario that we allege. We believe that plaintiffs 9 like Herb Adderley and Bernie Parrish signed G.L.A.s.

10 Upon signing those G.L.A.s, the defendants went off
11 and purported to represent those people. They went and entered 12 into license agreements with companies like Topps and 13 Electronic Arts.

14 Those agreements, on their face, seemed to suggest 15 that they represent -- well, those agreements, on their face,
