| 1  | licensees were using retired players for much of |     |
| 2  | anything we were just trying to convince them    |     |
| 3  | that it added value to their product and to      |     |
| 4  | their company to use retired players.            |     |
| 5  | I think once we got a little bit of              |     |
| 6  | momentum with licensees wanting to use retired   |     |
| 7  | players to make appearances or to sign           |     |
| 8  | autographs, then I think it really was probably  |     |
| 9  | the result of market forces that we were able to |     |
| 10 | obtain a higher price. The prices though are     |     |
| 11 | always negotiated between the player, and I am   |     |
| 12 | talking about ad hoc agreements. The prices are  |     |
| 13 | always negotiated between the player through     |     |
| 14 | Players, Inc., but with the player and the       |     |
| 15 | company.                                         |     |
| 16 | Player's Inc. doesn't set the prices.            | i   |
| 17 | Players, Inc. takes an offer from let's say a    |     |
| 18 | trading card company, for example, they are      |     |
| 19 | willing to pay Player A X amount of dollars and  |     |
| 20 | we call Player A, we say, "This trading card     |     |
| 21 | company is willing to pay you X amount of        |     |
| 22 | dollars." He either says yes or no and maybe he  | 1   |
| 23 | makes a counter offer.                           | :   |

224 1 than less, weren't they? 2 Α. If anything for sure more. Certainly your interest was aligned 3 0. 4 with the retired players and not with the 5 licensees, right, in terms of them playing less 6 as opposed to more. 7 MR. FEHER: With all of these the same 8 instructions. 9 THE WITNESS: Well, I don't think that 10 is a fair characterization. I mean we value our 11 licensees, they are partners of ours, and that 12 is exactly why we don't get involved in 13 negotiations. 14 I want that player to get as much money as he can, but I am not part of the negotiation. 15 16 It is between the player and the licensee. We 17 are not trying to drive up the price on our 18 licensees. 19 BY MR. LeCLAIR: 20 So you viewed the NFLPA as neutral Q. 21 between the licensees and the retired players. Not really advocating for the retired players. 22 23 Just neutral. 24 MR. FEHER: Objection to form. 25 Non-legal. Non-30(b)(6).
