Subject Historical Copyright-Related Materials

Dear Elaine,

In the course of supplementing its discovery responses and document production relevant to Oracle's copyrights, Oracle has located additional potentially responsive copyright-related materials. Some of these materials may potentially be responsive to outstanding discovery regarding PeopleSoft and J.D. Edwards copyright policies and procedures. The information is from two sources. The first source consists of some documents from the legal department that had been misfiled and mislabeled as documents relating to legacy PeopleSoft trademarks. The second source preliminarily appears to be a legacy PeopleSoft legal database that we are in the process of preparing to review to determine whether it has non-privileged, responsive information within it. These materials were identified in late December, and though they present substantial privilege issues, their review is being prioritized, so that any required production can begin as soon as possible. Finally, Oracle is also currently in the process of producing the back-end database for Customer Connection, which among other things is a large and detailed repository of information relating to software and support materials that were available for download from Customer Connection. Given that these materials will likely affect the scope and/or need of Defendants' anticipated motion to compel related to copyright issues, we wanted to alert you to this as early as possible.

Best regards,
Zac Alinder
