

EXHIBIT FF

Message

From: CN=Andrew Nelson/O=TomorrowNow
Sent: 3/1/2004 2:01:16 PM
To: TomorrowNow - All
Subject: TOMORROWNOW WINS! Lockheed Martin Corporation

Team -

It is with very great pride, excitement, and pleasure that I announce that Lockheed Martin Corporation has executed a TomorrowNow Extended Support Agreement. TomorrowNow will be providing Lockheed Martin with Extended Support for its HRMS 7.51 Human Resources and Payroll products covering the United States and operating on an Oracle/Unix environment.

About the Deal:

Seth has been working with Lockheed Martin executives for over eighteen months to get Lockheed Martin on board as a TomorrowNow client. While this is normally a complex and difficult sales process for every large client, Lockheed Martin was the most conservative, skeptical, and suspicious prospect TomorrowNow ever engaged. In fact, Lockheed Martin was a staunch PeopleSoft supporter, and had - in the first months - actually shared information about TomorrowNow with PeopleSoft to help PeopleSoft better understand who TomorrowNow is and what services we offer. Lockheed Martin did not even seriously consider TomorrowNow after the first few discussions in 2002 - we were too small, had no track record, and so there was simply no way that Lockheed Martin would trust us with their huge payroll system.

Not to be deterred in the face of seemingly impossible odds and some hostility, Seth continued contact with Lockheed Martin executives, and Lockheed Martin executives kept an eye on TomorrowNow's success and growing list of impressive clients. Small breakthroughs occurred along the path - including unsolicited friendly calls from Lockheed Martin managers and quietly given referrals from smaller TomorrowNow clients saying we are "people who could help them" stay on PeopleSoft 7.5. Well, all of this persistence and growing market reputation began paying dividends when Lockheed Martin's PeopleSoft 8 upgrade plan required some adjustments.

Lockheed Martin began its upgrade to PeopleSoft HCM 8 several months ago, and it is a huge project. Facing the reality that they would not likely finish before PeopleSoft's Supplemental Support program ended, and with our demonstrated track record, Lockheed Martin entered into dialogue with Seth and began seriously considering TomorrowNow Extended Support as a "bridge" solution until the HCM 8 upgrade could be completed. Then...from out of the blue, a senior PeopleSoft representative recommended Lockheed Martin consider TomorrowNow Extended Support as a solution! Backed with internal staff recommendations - and PeopleSoft's direct referral - Lockheed Martin executives, Lockheed Martin Purchasing, and Seth moved into serious discussions. A deal was put together, and a unanimous vote by Lockheed Martin executives recently approved the deal.

About the Client:

With more than $31 Billion in sales and more than 125,000 employees, Lockheed Martin Corporation (NYSE: LMT, S&P 500, #56 on Fortune 500) is the world's #1 defense contractor (ahead of Northrop Grumman and Boeing). Over 80% of Lockheed Martin's business comes from United States government contracts. Its principal businesses are: Electronic Systems (missiles and fire control); Space Systems (communication satellites, submarine-launched missiles); Aeronautics, Integrated Systems and Solutions; and IT Services (management, engineering, and logistic services). High-tech offerings include missiles for both offense (Trident II) and defense (Theater High Altitude Area Defense) and high-profile planes such as the F-16 and F/A-22 jet fighters and the C-130J transport. Lockheed is the main contractor for the Joint Strike Fighter (J-35), the largest defense contract ever. Lockheed Martin is also building the new X-33 reusable space transport vehicle, and builds the payload carrying Titan and Atlas rockets used to put many satellites in space).

I want to congratulate all of us on this marathon comeback victory. Marketing brought Lockheed Martin to the table, Sales persisted and closed the business against all odds, and Service Delivery and support staff created the awesome client reputation for outstanding service that gave Sales the ammunition they needed to make the deal happen.

Lockheed Martin now becomes our third-largest active payroll client. I know we will all do everything in our power to show them a level of service, reliability, and commitment to their success unmatched by any other mission-critical supplier.

Tenacity to overcome obstacles, passion to serve our clients, and commitment to unsurpassed quality all sum up our values and our formula for success. Go the extra mile. It will pay off every time.

Regards,

Andrew

Andrew Nelson
President and CEO
TomorrowNow Inc.
Tel: (979) 571-6386
Fax: (979) 595-1301
andrew_nelson@tomorrownow.com
