MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER TO STAY
DISCOVERY

Date: December 14, 2007
Time: 10:00 a.m.
Courtroom: 1

Introduction

24 Pursuant to Rule 26(c), Fed. R. Civil P., defendants move for a protective order, staying 25 discovery for a short period of time until the Court rules on defendants' pending Motion to 26 Dismiss. On September 25, 2007, defendants moved to dismiss plaintiffs' complaint, asserting 27 several arguments for why the court for lacks subject matter jurisdiction and why plaintiffs' 28

1 claims are legally insufficient. That motion will be fully briefed shortly and is scheduled to be 2 argued on December 14, 2007. Courts have broad discretion to stay discovery where a 3 dispositive motion may resolve some or all claims, thus promoting the interests of judicial 4 economy. See Argument I, infra.

5 It is particularly appropriate for the Court to exercise its discretion to stay discovery in 6 this instance because plaintiffs' discovery requests are unreasonably overbroad and unjustified, 7 even to support the wide-ranging attack on the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) and its 8 programs plaintiffs wish to mount. The VA has quickly reviewed the discovery requests in the 9 short time available and will demonstrate their overbroad nature, to which it would be 10 prohibitively expensive to respond, and which would cause grave disruption to VA's ability to 11 serve its constituent veterans.¹

12 Background

13 1. Plaintiffs' Claims

14 Plaintiffs, two advocacy organizations, have filed a complaint for injunctive and 15 declaratory relief that broadly challenges the benefits adjudication programs of the VA as they 16 relates to providing benefits to veterans with post traumatic stress syndrome (PTSD). Plaintiffs 17 challenge the entire process by which VA provides medical services and benefits to veterans with 18 PTSD and their survivors, alleging violations of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment, 19 the Access to Courts Clause of the First Amendment, section 504 the Rehabilitation Act and 38
20 U.S.C. § 1710(e)(1)(D).

21 2. Defendants' Motion to Dismiss

22 As noted, defendants moved to dismiss, identifying numerous jurisdiction and other legal 23 deficiencies with plaintiffs' claims. First, the only possible waiver of sovereign immunity that 24 might apply is the Administrative Procedure Act, (APA) however, the APA is inapposite because 25 plaintiffs have failed to identify any "final agency action" that they challenge. The Supreme 26

27 ¹Counsel for defendants have discussed this motion with counsel for plaintiffs who has 28 informed defendants' counsel that plaintiffs' will oppose this motion.

1 Court has held that the APA does not allow the type of wholesale, “programmatically” challenge 2 plaintiffs seek to bring in this Court. See Norton v. Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance, 542 U.S.
3 55, 64 (2004); cf. Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737, 759-61 (1984) (a federal district court “is not 4 the proper forum” to seek “restructuring of the apparatus established by the Executive Branch to 5 fulfill its legal duties.”).

6 Second, the only plaintiffs in this action are two advocacy organizations that have failed 7 to identify any individual veterans with standing to sue and whose direct participation is 8 unnecessary. For that reason, the plaintiff organizations lack Article III standing. See Smith v.
9 Pacific Properties and Dev. Corp., 358 F.3d 1097, 1101 (9th Cir. 2004).

10 Third, to the extent plaintiffs do allege harm from concrete agency actions, policies, or 11 procedures related to veterans benefits, Congress, in the Veterans’ Judicial Review Act 12 (“VJRA”), Pub. L. No. 100-687, 102 Stat. 4105 (1988), has unambiguously barred district courts 13 from hearing such challenges and, instead, crafted an exclusive review process through the VA, a 14 specially created Article I court, and the Federal Circuit. See 38 U.S.C. §§ 502, 511(a). Plaintiffs 15 attempt to state a facial constitutional challenge to the VJRA itself, but that challenge fails to 16 state a claim upon which relief may be granted. See Defendants’ Memorandum in Support of 17 Motion to Dismiss at 14-23. For example, plaintiffs’ facial challenge to a statute that limits the 18 fees veterans may pay attorneys who represent them at the earliest stage of the VA adjudicatory 19 process is foreclosed by binding Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedents that upheld a more 20 restrictive fee limitation. See e.g. Walters v. National Ass’n of Radiation Survivors, 473 U.S.
21 305 (1985). Finally, plaintiffs also claim that the VA is failing to meet recently returning 22 veterans’ statutory entitlement to free health care for two years, but this claim also fails as the 23 relevant statute makes it plain on its face that it creates no such entitlement.

24 In sum, defendants’ motion to dismiss identifies numerous threshold jurisdictional and 25 other legal problems with plaintiffs’ complaint, all of which can be resolved without fact-finding 26 or discovery. In effect, plaintiffs’ lengthy Complaint reflects a variety of policy disagreements, 27 but it does not present any claim cognizable in this Court as opposed to the halls of Congress, or 28

1 the exclusive judicial and administrative review system that Congress has created.

2 3. Plaintiffs' Discovery Requests

3 On October 19, 2007, plaintiffs served a First Amended First Set of Requests for 4 Production of Documents on defendants (Attachment A, hereto) consisting of 129 separate 5 requests, seeking an enormous range of material purportedly related (often very tangentially) to 6 how the VA provides services to veterans with PTSD. For example, plaintiffs seek complete 7 claim files for several categories of veterans (Request numbers 31, 32 and 38) as well as all 8 documents containing certain categories of information about all PTSD-related claims (Request 9 numbers 4-17), that appears to require a review of all such claim files. In essence, in their 10 requests plaintiffs seek every document maintained by the VA (as well as some in the custody of 11 other the Defense Department and the Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims) related in any way 12 to claims for benefits or health care by veterans suffering from PTSD. As explained in the 13 Declaration of Thomas G. Bowman, the Chief of Staff of the Department of Veterans Affairs 14 (Attachment B, hereto, "Bowman Decl."), VA staff have attempted to estimate the cost of 15 searching for and producing all documents responsive to plaintiffs' requests and have concluded 16 that these costs would be enormous – searching and producing documents in response to twenty 17 seven of the requests will cost more than $ 1 million each, and of those, responding to 21 will 18 cost in excess of 2 $ million each. Bowman Decl. ¶ 7.

19 On November 2, 2007, plaintiffs served a deposition notice seeking to depose forty-seven 20 current and former employees of the VA and other government entities, beginning on January 8, 21 2008 and continuing into April of 2008. (Attachment C, hereto). Plaintiffs' proposed deponents 22 include the Acting Secretary of Veterans Affairs, numerous other senior VA officials, (including 23 the Deputy Secretary, the General Counsel and the Inspector General), the Attorney General of 24 the United States Department of Justice, a senior official of the Government Accountability 25 Office, and the current and former Chief Judges of the United States Court of Appeals for 26 Veterans Claims. Plaintiffs' deposition notice demands that all deponents produce any 27 documents they have that are responsive to plaintiffs' document requests, including documents 28

1 found “in each deponent’s working files, computer work stations, or other personal files,” 2 Attachment C at 1. Moreover, all of these depositions are noticed for San Francisco, even though 3 many of the deponents do not reside or work in the Northern District of California.

4 ARGUMENT

5 I. The Court Has the Discretion to Defer the Initiation of Discovery Pending
6 Resolution of a Motion to Dismiss Challenging the Court’s Subject Matter
7 Jurisdiction

8 It is of course well settled that district courts have sweeping discretion to control the 9 nature and timing of discovery. Herbert v. Lando, 441 U.S. 153, 177 (1979) (“[J]udges should 10 not hesitate to exercise appropriate control over the discovery process.”). Under Rule 26(c) of 11 the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, courts have discretion to issue protective orders upon a 12 showing of good cause. Rule 26(c) provides, in pertinent part, that:

13 Upon motion by a party or by the person from whom discovery is sought, 14 accompanied by a certification that the movant has in good faith conferred 15 or attempted to confer with other affected parties in an effort to resolve the 16 dispute without court action, and for good cause shown, the court in which 17 the action is pending * * * may make any order which justice requires to 18 protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or 19 undue burden or expense, including . . . (1) that the disclosure or discovery 20 not be had.

21 Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c). Courts have consistently exercised such discretion to order a stay of all 22 discovery where it appears that the case can be resolved through a dispositive motion. See e.g.
23 Jarvis v. Regan, 833 F.2d 149, 155 (9th Cir. 1987); B.R.S. Land Investors v. United States, 596
24 F.2d 353, 356 (9th Cir. 1979); Petrus v. Bowen, 833 F.2d 581, 583 (5th Cir. 1987) (“trial court 25 has broad discretion and inherent power to stay discovery until preliminary questions that may 26 dispose of the case are determined”); Patterson v. United States, 901 F.2d 927, 929 (11th Cir.
27 1990); Hahn v. Star Bank, 190 F.3d 708, 719 (6th Cir. 1999).

28 A stay is particularly appropriate where the dispositive motion challenges the court’s subject matter jurisdiction. Thus, the Supreme Court has noted that “[i]t is a recognized and appropriate procedure for a court to limit discovery proceedings at the outset to a determination of jurisdictional matters.” United States Catholic Conference v. Abortion Rights Mobilization, Inc., 487 U.S. 72, 79-80 (1988). Where a motion to dismiss presents questions of law for which

1 factual discovery is neither necessary nor appropriate, as is typically the case where the defendant 2 challenges the court's subject matter jurisdiction, discovery should be stayed pending a 3 resolution of the motion. See Wagh v. Metris Direct Inc., 363 F.3d 821, 829 (9th Cir. 2003)
4 (discovery at the pleading stage is only appropriate where factual issues are raised by a Rule 5 12(b) motion.); Florsheim Shoe Co. v. United States, 744 F.2d 787, 797 (Fed. Cir. 1984); Rae v.
6 Union Bank, 725 F.2d 478, 481 (9th Cir. 1984). See generally 6 Moore's Federal Practice §
7 26.105[3][c]. The obvious rationale for entering a protective order when disposition of a motion 8 may obviate the need for discovery is to conserve the parties' time and resources. See Scroggins 9 v. Air Cargo, Inc., 534 F.2d 1124, 1133 (5th Cir. 1976).

10 II. The Court Should Grant a Protective Order Staying Plaintiffs' Discovery Requests
11 Pending a Ruling on Defendants' Motion to Dismiss

12 Here, principles of sound case management counsel in favor of a short stay of discovery 13 to permit a ruling on defendants' Motion to Dismiss, which will avoid the waste of the Court's 14 and the parties' resources, with minimal prejudice to plaintiffs. First, defendants' Motion to 15 Dismiss raises strong jurisdictional defenses to plaintiffs' claims. Assuming jurisdiction in this 16 Court, plaintiffs' facial challenge to the constitutionality of the VJRA can be resolved without 17 the need for discovery. See Rae v. Union Bank, supra 725 F.2d at 481. Nor need the Court have 18 to conclude that defendants' motion will be successful in order to grant a stay. When a court can 19 conclude that a defendants' motion to dismiss "does not appear to be without some degree of 20 foundation in law and there is a possibility that defendant may prevail," a stay of discovery is 21 appropriate. Ameritel Inns v. Moffat Brothers, 2007 WL 1792323, *4 (D. Idaho 2007). See also 22 Johnson v. New York Univ. School of Educ., 205 F.R.D. 433, 434 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (stay of 23 discovery appropriate where dispositive motion has "substantial grounds"); GTE Wireless, Inc. v.
24 Qualcomm, Inc., 192 F.R.D. 284, 287 (S.D. Cal. 2000) (stay where defendants's motion has 25 around a "fifty percent chance of success).

26 Nor is this a case where the probable result of a favorable ruling on a defendants' motion 27 to dismiss will be an order granting plaintiffs leave to amend to address a pleading defect, thus 28

1 justifying the continuation of discovery in the interim. See e.g. In Re Valence Technology
2 Securities Litigation, 1994 WL 758688 (N.D. Cal. 1994). Plaintiffs' 278-paragraph complaint 3 includes numerous allegations invoking every relevant authority, hence, if defendants' motion to 4 dismiss is granted, it is doubtful plaintiffs will be able to cure any defects in their allegations.
5 Finally, a brief stay in discovery will not unduly prejudice plaintiffs since defendants' Motion to 6 dismiss will be argued on December 14, 2007 and discovery can be addressed shortly after a 7 ruling.

8 A stay is particularly appropriate here given the enormous burden that would be imposed 9 by plaintiffs' sweeping Requests for Production of Documents as well as their proposed 10 deposition schedule. As another judge of this Court has recognized, "staying discovery may be 11 particularly appropriate . . . where discovery tends to be broad, time-consuming and expensive."
12 In Re NetFlix Antitrust Litigation, 506 F.Supp.2d 308, 321 (N.D. Cal. 2007). As with the 13 antitrust claim at issue in NetFlix, the discovery plaintiffs seek here also promises to be "a 14 sprawling, costly and hugely time-consuming undertaking." NetFlix, supra 506 F.Supp 2d at 15 321, quoting Bell Atlantic v. Twombly, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 1967 n. 6 (2007).

16 As explained in the Bowman Declaration, employees of the VA have made preliminary 17 inquiries into the estimated cost, in time and funds, to search for and produce non-privileged 18 documents in response to plaintiffs' 129 Requests for Production. Bowman Decl. ¶ 7.² Mr.
19 Bowman briefly explains the burden that these requests impose on the VA, which maintains 57 20 Regional Offices, 209 Vets Centers, 153 hospitals, 135 nursing homes, 724 Community Based 21 Outpatient Clinics, and 46 Domiciliary Residential Rehabilitation Treatment Programs, all of 22 which are likely to have records relevant to the provision of services to veterans who suffer from 23

24 ²Given the exceptionally broad scope of plaintiffs' requests and the limited time available 25 for VA staff to conduct these inquiries, the responses received are, admittedly, no more than 26 rough estimates of the cost in time and money to respond to the requests. See Bowman Decl. ¶ 7.
27 In addition, VA staff attempted to calculate the cost of responding to each of plaintiffs' requests 28 as written, even though VA would assert overbreadth and relevancy objections to many of these requests. Nevertheless, these calculations do provide an approximate estimate of the aggregate cost of responding to the vast majority of plaintiffs' requests. Id.

1 PTSD. Bowman Decl. ¶ 8c; 10. The VA provides numerous and significant services to veterans 2 with PTSD, and consequently the staff at its approximately 1300 care-providing facilities will be 3 required to search for documents responsive to PTSD issues, such as “diagnostic criteria for 4 PTSD applied by VA.” (Request number 33). Id. ¶ 10. As Mr. Bowman notes, responding to 5 these requests “would significantly burden the VA health system and distract employees, 6 particularly health care providers, from delivering health care services to veterans.” Id. This 7 diversion from providing services to veterans is particularly serious given that disability claims 8 have increased 45% from 2000 to 2007. Id. ¶ 14.

9 Additionally, all of plaintiffs’ requests seek “documents,” which plaintiffs define to 10 include any tangible thing on which a “communication” has been recorded, and typically make 11 no attempt to identify the personnel who may have authored such communications. Bowman 12 Decl. ¶ 8a. Consequently, each request will require a search of emails (communications, by 13 definition) , thus requiring a review of some or all of VA’s 320,000 e-mail accounts. Id. This 14 will impose a significant burden, because “in order to conduct a search of the active e-mail 15 system for messages containing particular words or phrases, each mailbox would need to be 16 searched separately,” and hence, searching email records will be inordinately time consuming.
17 Id.

18 At least eight of plaintiffs’ requests (Request numbers 16, 17, 31, 32, 38, 103, 104 and 19 115) will undoubtedly require a search of individual claim files, which are maintained in VA’s 20 57 Regional Offices as well as at its Records Management Center, and another nineteen (Request 21 numbers 1-15, 21, 96-98) may require such searches of individual files. Bowman Decl. ¶ 8b.
22 Searches of such paper files would require VA to write and run a computer program to attempt to 23 locate the relevant claim files, physically retrieve the files and then assign staff to review them 24 for responsive documents. Bowman Decl. ¶ 8c. To take one example, VA estimates that the cost 25 of searching files for death certificates (Request number 115) will require over 73,000 staff-26 hours, costing $ 2.5 million. Bowman Decl. ¶ 8c.

27 Based on the numerous separate inquiries made by VA staff as to the burden in time and 28

1 expense to search various paper files and electronic data bases for plaintiffs' requests, it is 2 estimated that twenty-seven of plaintiffs' 129 requests will each impose in excess of $ 1 million
3 in costs on VA and in the case of twenty of those requests, the cost will exceed $ 2 million.
4 Bowman Decl. ¶ 7. As Mr. Bowman explains, this diversion of resources will directly and 5 significantly impact the VA's mission of providing health care and benefits to the veterans it 6 serves. See Bowman Decl. ¶¶ 10-15. For example, responding to the requests "would divert 7 many of [VA's] regional office employees from their primary mission of delivering benefits to 8 veterans and their survivors to searching records and reviewing files." Id. at ¶ 15. The burden of 9 responding to plaintiffs' requests goes far beyond imposing administrative burdens and 10 inconvenience on the VA; it will have an immediate adverse impact on veterans and their 11 families.³

12 Finally, the requests also seek the production of medical treatment files relating to mental 13 health services, which records are exceptionally sensitive and are subject to statutory 14 confidentiality protections and potentially covered by the psychotherapist-patient privilege.
15 Bowman Decl. ¶ 9. Even if steps are taken to protect veteran confidentiality (steps which will 16 further add to the time and expense of responding), there is always the possibility that veteran 17 confidentiality will be compromised. As Mr. Bowman notes, "Vet Center program 18 administrators are concerned that such a disclosure would undermine the Vet Center Program's 19 hard won trust with the combat veteran population and could cause serious barriers to care for 20 new veterans needing readjustment counseling services." Id. Plaintiffs' excessively broad 21 requests, which make no effort to balance the need for the materials sought against the damage 22 that disclosure will cause, should not be permitted until threshold legal issues have been 23 resolved.

25
26 ³Defendants' objections to the extremely burdensome nature of plaintiffs' discovery 27 requests are offered in support of their request for a stay of discovery pending a ruling on their 28 motion to dismiss. In the event that some or all of plaintiffs' claims survive the motion to dismiss, defendants reserve the right to reassert these and other objections to plaintiffs' document production requests and deposition notices.

1 CONCLUSION

2 For all of the foregoing reasons, the Court should grant defendants' Motion for Protective 3 Order and stay discovery until after a ruling on defendants' Motion to Dismiss. A Proposed 4 Order is attached.
