UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

CHARLES M. BROWN,

Plaintiff,

v.

WIRELESS NETWORKS, INC.,

Defendant.

No. C 07-4301 EDL

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT’S MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY ADJUDICATION

Now before the court is Defendant’s Motion for Partial Summary Adjudication of Plaintiff’s Defamation Claim. Having carefully reviewed the parties’ papers and considered their arguments and the relevant legal authority, the Court hereby grants Defendant’s motion for the following reasons.

Relevant facts

On September 7, 2007, almost two months after Plaintiff filed this lawsuit, Defendant, through its Chairman Ruy Rothschild de Souza, sent a letter to shareholders regarding this litigation. See Declaration of Ruy Rothschild de Souza at Ex. A. The letter outlines some of Plaintiff’s actions before filing suit and while he was employed with Defendant. The letter notes that in addition to claiming money damages in this lawsuit, Plaintiff requested that the Court attach Defendant’s source code and refuse access to Defendant, and that Plaintiff’s “tactics are costing the Company time and money.” Id. The letter notes that “[w]e intend to vigorously defend against the litigation commenced by Mr. Brown” and instructs shareholders to direct questions regarding to legal action to Mr. de Souza, and that the lawyers will respond to the questions. Id.

United States District Court
For the Northern District of California

1 Plaintiff filed an amended complaint on November 16, 2007, adding a claim for defamation 2 based on Mr. de Souza's September 7, 2007 letter. Specifically, the complaint alleges that the 3 following statements from the letter were defamatory:

- 4 a. that plaintiff "did not cooperate, and frustrated attempts to implement the 5 operation."
- 6 b. that plaintiff was "using the Company's engineers and resources to develop a 7 new generation of systems to render the same services WNI renders to the 8 market through a new company, unrelated to WNI, to be owned by him and 9 some new investors"
- 10 c. that plaintiff "has attempted to raise obstacles to thwart the success of the 11 Company. . . . [including] delaying access to the Company's corporate records 12 and documents."

13 See Nov. 16, 2007 Amended Compl. at ¶ 19.

14 Discussion

15 Defamation is "the intentional publication of a statement of fact which is false, unprivileged, 16 and has a natural tendency to injure or which causes special damage." Ringler Assocs. v. Maryland 17 Cas. Co., 80 Cal.App.4th 1165, 1179 (2000) ("Publication, which may be written or oral, is defined 18 as a communication to some third person who understands both the defamatory meaning of the 19 statement and its application to the person to whom reference is made. Publication need not be to the 20 public or a large group; communication to a single individual is sufficient."). "It is an essential 21 element of defamation that the publication be of a false statement of fact rather than opinion." Id.
22 "In all cases of alleged defamation, whether libel or slander, the truth of the offensive statements or 23 communication is a complete defense against civil liability, regardless of bad faith or malicious 24 purpose." Id. ("It is sufficient if the substance of the charge is proven true, irrespective of slight 25 inaccuracy in the details, 'so long as the imputation is substantially true so as to justify the 'gist or 26 sting' of the remark.'") (internal citations omitted).

27 Defendant argues that even if Mr. de Souza's statements in the September 7, 2007 letter were 28 defamatory, the statements were made to persons with common interest and without malice, which bars Brown's defamation claim. The common interest privilege states that a privileged communication is one made:

In a communication, without malice, to a person interested therein, (1) by one who is also interested, or (2) by one who stands in such a relation to the person interested as to afford a reasonable ground for supposing the motive for the communication to be innocent, or (3) who is requested by the person interested to give the information.

1 Cal. Civ. Code § 47(c). Application of the common interest privilege involves a two-step inquiry:

2 The first question is whether the factual predicate for the privilege was 3 present-whether, in traditional terms, the “ ‘occasion’ ” was “ ‘privileged.’ ” (Taus v.
4 Loftus (2007) 40 Cal.4th 683, 721, 54 Cal.Rptr.3d 775, 151 P.3d 1185.) At trial the 5 defendant bears the burden of proof on this question. ( Ibid.) If he succeeds, the 6 burden shifts to the plaintiff to show that the statement was made with malice. ( Ibid.)
7 On summary judgment, of course, the defendant bears the burden of showing in the 8 first instance that there is no triable issue of fact as to either issue-that the statement 9 was made on a privileged occasion, and that it was made “without malice.”

10 Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc., 165 Cal.App.4th 686, 729 (2008).

11 Plaintiff argues that there is a triable issue of fact as to whether Mr. de Souza’s statements 12 were made with malice:

13 For purposes of a statutory qualified privilege, “[t]he malice referred to ... is actual 14 malice or malice in fact, that is, a state of mind arising from hatred or ill will, 15 evidencing a willingness to vex, annoy or injure another person. [Citation.] The 16 factual issue is whether the publication was so motivated. ‘Thus the privilege is lost if 17 the publication is motivated by hatred or ill will toward plaintiff [citations], or by any 18 cause other than the desire to protect the interest for the protection of which the 19 privilege is given’ [citations].”

20 Mamou, 165 Cal.App.4th at 729; see also Noel v. River Hills Wilsons, Inc., 113 Cal.App.4th 1363, 21 1370-72 (2003) (“Insofar as the common-interest privilege is concerned, malice is not inferred from 22 the communication itself. The malice necessary to defeat a qualified privilege is “actual malice” 23 which is established by a showing that the publication was motivated by hatred or ill will towards 24 the plaintiff or by a showing that the defendant lacked reasonable grounds for belief in the truth of 25 the publication and therefore acted in reckless disregard of the plaintiff’s rights (citations).”) 26 (internal citations omitted). Plaintiff argues that there is evidence of both types of malice here.

27 First, Plaintiff argues that traditional hatred or ill will has been shown because Mr. de Souza 28 retaliated against Plaintiff. See 5 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Torts, § 593 at p. 869 (2005 ed.) (“Malice must be ill will beyond the normal feeling toward a wrongdoer, i.e., a motive different from that which makes the communication privileged.”). However, the September 2007 letter was sent after Plaintiff resigned, which does not support retaliation since Plaintiff was no longer employed. Plaintiff also points to his own attempts to attach the source code and his participation as a deponent in litigation regarding attorney’s fees between Defendant’s former counsel and Defendant as showing hatred or ill will by Mr. de Souza. Plaintiff is the one, however, who engaged in this conduct, so it sheds no light on Mr. de Souza’s motivation.

1           Second, Plaintiff argues that the letter was motivated by “any cause other than the desire to 2 protect the interest for the protection of which the privilege is given.” Mamou, 165 Cal.App.4th at 3 729. As evidence of this motivation, Plaintiff points to this Court’s prior ruling on Defendant’s 4 Motion to Dismiss in which the Court stated that: “The letter itself does not request, for example, 5 shareholders to act as witnesses in the case,” and “It is also not clearly an attempt to mitigate 6 potential damage in the litigation, as it does not instruct the shareholders not to talk with Brown or 7 help him with his litigation.” See April 24, 2008 Order at 6-7. The Court’s prior order, however, 8 addressed the litigation privilege, not the common interest privilege, and, of course, does not 9 constitute evidence that can create a triable issue of fact as to whether Mr. de Souza acted with 10 malice.

11           Finally, Plaintiff argues that malice can be inferred because Mr. de Souza did not have 12 reasonable grounds for believing that his statements were true. See Noel, 113 Cal.App.4th at 1370;
13 see also Cuenca v. Safeway San Francisco Employees Fed. Credit Union, 180 Cal.App.3d 985, 998-14 1000 (1986) (affirming trial court’s ruling that Civil Code § 47 privilege applied based on the 15 plaintiff’s failure to raise a triable issue of fact, based also on declaration from author of statement 16 disavowing any malicious intent). However, “[m]ere negligence in inquiry cannot constitute lack 17 of reasonable or probable cause.” Id. (quoting Rollenhagen v. City of Orange 116 Cal.App.3d 414, 18 423 (1981)). Further, “[i]t is only when the negligence amounts to a reckless or wanton disregard 19 for or avoidance of accuracy, that malice is shown.” Id. (quoting Roemer v. Retail Credit Co., 3 20 Cal.App.3d 368, 371-72 (1970)). Significantly, malice may not be inferred merely from the 21 communication. See Lundquist v. Reusser, 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1205 (1994) (“ . . . malice is not inferred 22 from the communication.”) (citing Cal. Civil Code § 48); see also 5 Witkin, Summary of California 23 Law, § 593 at p. 870 (2005 ed.) (“Malice cannot be inferred from a mere communication by one 24 person to another, where it does not appear on the face of the communication. But actual malice
25 may be established either by direct proof of the defendant’s state of mind, or by circumstantial 26 evidence from which the jury might infer it as a fact.”) (internal citations omitted).

27           Here, Plaintiff has not raised a triable issue of fact as to Mr. de Souza’s reasonable belief in 28 the truth of his statements. Mr. de Souza testified in his declaration that the letter reflected his knowledge “of various acts undertaken by Brown, that [he] believed in good faith had detrimentally

1 or otherwise affected WNI, and were relevant to the present litigation.” de Souza Decl. ¶ 7. He also 2 stated that he wrote the letter pursuant to his duty as the Chairman of the Board. See id. He stated 3 that he had no malicious intent in sending the latter, and was not reckless with regard to the truth.
4 See id. at ¶ 9. He stated that he was reporting what he learned about Plaintiff’s actions and how that 5 knowledge affected Mr. de Souza’s actions. See id. He stated that the communication was for the 6 common interest of the recipients and that the statements were truthful. See id. ¶ 9-10. Mr. de 7 Souza’s statement evidence a reasonable belief in the truth of his statements in the September 2007 8 letter and that the letter was sent for a business purpose, and Plaintiff has provided no evidence to 9 the contrary.

10 Moreover, the showing of malice here is dramatically different from the malice shown in 11 Mamou, the case on which Plaintiff principally relies. In Mamou, the court noted that the plaintiff 12 was referred to as a “raghead” and part of the “Syrian regime,” that an employee said he was going 13 to “get” or “get even” with the plaintiff, that managers instructed employees to shun the plaintiff, 14 and that an employee called the plaintiff a thief lacking integrity or ethics. See Mamou, 165 15 Cal.App.4th at 729-731. This evidence raised a triable issue of fact as to malice. By contrast, here, 16 such evidence is lacking.

17 Objection to e-mail evidence

18 Plaintiff objects to the admissibility of e-mails contained in the Declaration of Jessica La 19 Londe at exhibit E as lacking authenticity. First, Plaintiff does not dispute the authenticity of any e-20 mails there were sent by Plaintiff. Second, the remaining e-mails are authenticated because of their 21 distinctive characteristics. See FRE 901(b)(4) (authentication by “appearance, contents, substance, 22 internal patterns, or other distinctive characteristics, taken in conjunction with circumstances.”); see 23 also, e.g., United States v. Safavian, 435 F. Supp. 2d 36, 40 (D. D.C. 2006) (“The e-mails in 24 question have many distinctive characteristics, including the actual e-mail addresses containing the 25 “@” symbol, widely known to be part of an e-mail address, and certainly a distinctive mark that 26 identifies the document in question as an e-mail. In addition, most of the e-mail addresses 27 themselves contain the name of the person connected to the address, such as 28 “abramoffj@gtlaw.com,” “David.Safavian@ mail.house.gov,” or “david.safavian @gsa.gov.” See, e.g., Exhibits 101, 105, 106. Frequently these e-mails contain the name of the sender or recipient in

1 the bodies of the e-mail, in the signature blocks at the end of the e-mail, in the “To:” and “From:”
2 headings, and by signature of the sender. The contents of the e-mails also authenticate them as being 3 from the purported sender and to the purported recipient, containing as they do discussions of 4 various identifiable matters, such as Mr. Safavian's work at the General Services Administration 5 (“GSA”), Mr. Abramoff' s work as a lobbyist, Mr. Abramoff' s restaurant, Signatures, and various 6 other personal and professional matters.”) (internal citations omitted). Plaintiff’s objection based on 7 authenticity is overruled.

8 Conclusion

9           Accordingly, even assuming that the statements were defamatory, an issue that the Court 10 need not reach, the statements come within the common interest privilege. Plaintiff has not raised a 11 triable issue of fact with respect to the showing required for malice. Therefore, Defendant’s Motion 12 for Partial Summary Adjudication is granted. In addition, as stated at the hearing, the expert 13 discovery cutoff date is extended to December 24, 2008.
