Re: Viacom International Inc. et al. v. YouTube, Inc. et al.

Dear Ms. Dunn:

As you are presumably aware, on March 13, 2007, Viacom International Inc., Comedy Partners, Country Music Television, Inc., Paramount Pictures Corporation, and Black Entertainment Television LLC, filed an action in federal district court for direct and secondary copyright infringement against YouTube, Inc., YouTube, LLC and Google, Inc., captioned Viacom International Inc., et al. v. YouTube, Inc., et al., Civil Action No. 07-CV-2103 (S.D.N.Y.) (the "lawsuit"). I am counsel to the plaintiffs in that lawsuit. For your reference, a copy of the complaint is attached to this letter.

Reserving all rights and without limiting in any way the potential scope of the discovery or other relief we may seek from Sequoia Capital, I am writing to remind you of the legal obligation, which arose no later than when Sequoia became aware of the lawsuit, to preserve all documents relating to this litigation. We understand that Sequoia Capital has documents, materials, correspondence, and other data, including emails and other electronically stored information, that may be used as evidence in the lawsuit ("documents"). We believe, for example, that Roelof Botha's communications with YouTube's officers, directors, managers, employees and/or agents may be relevant to the plaintiffs' claims of direct and secondary copyright infringement.

Sequoia Capital, including its officers, directors, managers, employees and agents, must preserve, protect, save and properly store and keep any and all materials that may be related in any manner whatsoever to the lawsuit, including, but not limited to, materials relating to YouTube, such as business models or plans, valuations of the company, or analyses of YouTube's growth, user base, or content; materials relating to Sequoia Capital's investment in YouTube; materials relating to Google's acquisition of YouTube; materials relating to any offers made to acquire YouTube; and any and all communications between Sequoia Capital and YouTube and/or Google. The foregoing subject areas are provided as examples only; the obligation to preserve documents extends to all relevant material within the meaning of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Do not destroy, alter, transfer, or in any way spoil any such documents or evidence.

Thank you in advance for your cooperation.

Very truly yours,

Donald B. Verrilli
