2 TO ALL PARTIES AND COUNSEL OF RECORD:

3 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on Monday, November 21, 2005 at 8:15 a.m., or as soon
4 thereafter as this matter may be heard by the Honorable Judge Derek Woodhouse at Department 5 14 of the Superior Court of California, County of Santa Clara, located at 191 N. First Street, San 6 Jose, California 95113, Plaintiff TheFacebook, Inc. ("Facebook") hereby applies ex parte for an 7 order compelling Defendants Cameron Winklevoss', Tyler Winklevoss', Howard Winklevoss', 8 and Divya Narendra's (collectively "Individual Defendants") to submit to depositions on or before 9 December 23, 2005.

10 Individual Defendants jointly filed a motion to quash on October 26, 2005, claiming that 11 they are not subject to personal jurisdiction in this Court, and set the matter for hearing on 12 November 17, 2005. On November 3, 2005, the Court (Hon. William J. Elfving) granted
13 Facebook's ex parte application to delay the hearing on the motion to quash until January 17, 14 2006 so that Facebook could obtain discovery related to personal jurisdiction.¹

15 The Facebook's application, which the Court granted, attached the proposed 16 interrogatories, document requests, and the depositions of the various Defendants – each of which 17 are necessitated, under California law, in order to oppose the Individual Defendants' motion.
18 Facebook has noticed depositions of the Individual Defendants and ConnectU between December 19 12 and December 16, 2005. Despite the fact that these deposition notices, as proposed, were filed 20 with the Court and specifically discussed at hearing, Defendants have now clearly indicated that 21 they intend to seek protection from these deposition notices. However, upon checking the Court's 22 calendar, Facebook and Defendants were both informed by Court personnel that the earliest 23 hearing date before Judge Woodhouse is January 6, 2006. If Facebook waits for Defendants to 24 file a motion for a protective order preventing them from attending the noticed depositions, the 25 hearing on any Defendant motion would not be heard in time. Based on the current January 17, 26 2006 hearing date, Facebook's opposition is due Tuesday, January 3, 2005 making it necessary
27 for Facebook to depose the Individual Defendants and ConnectU by approximately December 23, 28 ¹ On November 14, 2005, the Individual Defendants filed an amended motion to quash.

1 2005.

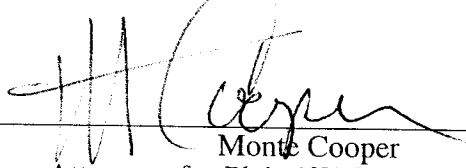

2 Facebook is therefore forced to seek immediate relief from this Court pursuant to 3 California Rule of Court 379, to compel all Individual Defendants and ConnectU to submit to 4 depositions on or before December 23, 2005.

5 This ex parte application is based on this application, the memorandum of points &
6 authorities and the declaration of Monte Cooper ("Cooper Declaration"). The parties have met 7 and conferred on and in advance of this application but were not able to resolve the matter. (See 8 Cooper Decl. ¶¶ 7-9; Exs. E, F, G (detailing prior telephonic conference attempting to resolve 9 matter and e-mail notices to Defendants).) Additional notice of this ex parte application has been 10 given to Defendants' counsel on Sunday, November 20, 2005. Defendants' counsel in this matter 11 is:

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS & AUTHORITIES

I. STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Background

The Facebook, Inc. ("Facebook") filed its Complaint on August 17, 2005, alleging common law misappropriation and violations of California Penal Code § 502(c) arising out of the Defendants' unauthorized access and use of data from the Facebook website. After Facebook extended two extensions of time for all of the Defendants to respond, on October 25, 2005, Cameron Winklevoss, Tyler Winklevoss, Howard Winklevoss, and Divya Narendra (collectively "Individual Defendants") filed and served their Motion to Quash Service of Complaint and Summons for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction ("Motion"); and Defendant ConnectU LLC ("ConnectU") filed and served its demurrer. Each of the four Individual Defendants submitted a substantive declaration in support of their Motion to Quash, alleging no basis exists to assert personal jurisdiction over them. (E.g., Mot. at 2.)

In exchange for Plaintiff's liberal grant of additional time for all named Defendants to respond to its Complaint, Defendants agreed to allow discovery on personal jurisdiction. (See Cooper Decl. Ex. A, at 1 – 3). Defendants then reneged on their agreement, refusing all discovery on personal jurisdiction (in the face of clear California law allowing such discovery), and attempted to force what was supposed to have been a provisional November 17, 2005 hearing date on both the demurrer and their motion to quash. (Id.) Therefore, on November 3, 2005, Plaintiff applied ex parte for a rescheduling of the hearing on the motion to quash, so that it could obtain discovery related to personal jurisdiction. (Id.) The Court granted Facebook's application. (Cooper Decl. Ex. B.)

Facebook's application attached the proposed interrogatories, document requests, and deposition notices for the Defendants – each necessitated under California law in order to oppose the Individual Defendants' motion. In granting the request over Defendants' objections, the Court (Hon. William J. Elfving) postponed the hearing on both the motion to quash and the demurrer until January 17, 2006 – specifically so that Facebook could obtain such discovery. (Cooper Decl. Ex. B.) The need and legal warrant for the depositions was specifically discussed at the

1 hearing, and Judge Elfving expressed no reservations about them despite the fact the Individual 2 Defendants argued they were not warranted. Facebook served all of the discovery requests and 3 notices of deposition that it had attached to its ex parte application immediately following the 4 hearing granting its request. (See Cooper Decl. H (notices of deposition)).

5 Now, without substantial justification, Defendants are once again seeking to avoid 6 personal jurisdiction-related discovery, notwithstanding the Court's earlier order. Facebook has 7 noticed depositions of the Individual Defendants and ConnectU between December 12 and 8 December 16, 2005. Despite the fact that these deposition notices were filed and specifically 9 discussed at the hearing where Plaintiff's application was granted (see id. Ex. A), Defendants 10 have in telephonic conferences informed Facebook's counsel that they intend to seek protection 11 from these deposition notices – though they have not done so to date.

12 However, upon checking the Court's calendar, Facebook and Defendants were both 13 informed by Court personnel that the earliest hearing date before the Discovery Judge is January 14 6, 2006. If Facebook waits for Defendants to file a motion for a protective order preventing them 15 from attending the noticed depositions, the hearing on any Defendant motion would not be heard 16 in time. Based on the current January 17, 2006 hearing date, Facebook's opposition is due 17 Tuesday, January 3, 2005 making it necessary for Facebook to depose the Individual Defendants 18 and ConnectU by approximately December 23, 2005. Defendants' only counter-proposal is to 19 further delay the hearing on the motion to quash and demurrer to permit additional briefing on the 20 deposition issue, even though it will have been more than five months since Facebook filed its 21 complaint before such briefing can be completed and the motions heard.

22 Facebook thus is forced to seek immediate relief from this Court pursuant to California 23 Rule of Court 379, to compel all Individual Defendants and ConnectU to submit to depositions on 24 or before December 23, 2005, as previously noticed.

25 B. Need for Depositions

26 Each of the Individual Defendants attached a personal declaration in support of their joint 27 motion. (E.g. Am. Mot. at 2.) The submission of these four declarations alone suggests that 28 Plaintiff should be able to cross-examine the Individual Defendants. Here, that need is 1 substantially increased by demonstrable inconsistencies and questions raised by both the 2 Individual Defendants' pleadings and the declarations themselves.

3 For instance, not one of the Individual Defendants denies having personally and 4 individually accessed Plaintiff's computer systems data or aiding in such access – such acts being 5 themselves independent violations of California Penal Code § 502(c) and independent grounds 6 for personal jurisdiction. Instead, as reflected by a recent amendment to the motion to quash, the 7 Individual Defendants appear to admit they engaged in the actions that form the underlying bases
8 for relief in the complaint, but contend that they only did so as the entity "ConnectU LLC."
9 Obviously, this is an issue open to interpretation, and due process concerns alone warrant that 10 Facebook be allowed to cross-examine the Defendants about the nature of their activities that they 11 alleged were done as the entity ConnectU LLC. Defendants must be deposed on the scope and 12 nature of their personal involvement in the acts alleged, because the full scope is relevant to the 13 Court's personal jurisdiction over them.²

14 Additionally, the Declarations do not appear to present all of the factual information 15 relevant to issues of personal jurisdiction. For instance, the Individual Defendants' assert that 16 none of them have ever:

- 17 • paid taxes "of any kind" in California (see Am. Cpt. at 2);
- 18 • performed any service or sold any goods in California (id.);
- 19 • derived substantial revenue from California goods or services; (id.);
- 20 • recruited employees in California (id.);
- 21 • signed any contracts in California (id.);
- 22 • "engaged in a business in California" (id.).³

23 Yet, in direct contradiction of such averments, Howard Winklevoss, for one, appears to have 24 engaged in business in California, paid at least business franchise taxes in California, based his 25 personal business in California, and personally served as a registered agent in California –

26 ² Furthermore, as must be fully explored at depositions, the Individual Defendants are seeking to hide behind an 27 entity of which they were not declared members or officers until August 5, 2005, after many of the alleged acts were 28 committed. In other words, the Individual Defendants' appear to be asserting official capacities which did not even exist throughout the relevant period. Again, the Individual Defendants must be cross-examined on this issue.

³ See also, e.g., Cooper Decl. Ex. C (Declaration of Defendant Howard Winklevoss submitted in support of Individual Defendants' motion, wherein Winklevoss unequivocally affirms that he personally has never done any of the following in California: "had an authorized agent or representative in California" (§ 7), nor "performed any services of sold any goods in California" (§ 10), nor derived substantial revenue from California goods or services (§ 11), nor recruited employees in California (§ 14), nor signed any contracts in California (§ 15), nor "engaged in business" in California (§ 12)).

specifically, in Palo Alto. See Cooper Decl. Ex. D (past filings of California stock corporation, subsequently dissolved, by a Howard E. Winklevoss and Carol J. Winklevoss (spouse), listing two Palo Alto addresses).⁴ If verified at deposition, such past business conduct would plainly contradict both Individual Defendants' pleadings and at least portions of their supporting declarations. Such omissions reflect that Facebook should be entitled to investigate both the accuracy and completeness Individual Defendants' declarations, and further supports Plaintiff's request for limited depositions on matters relating to both general and specific personal jurisdiction, especially since Judge Elfving's earlier Order generally authorized discovery on personal jurisdiction, and the Individual Defendants have offered no explanation why depositions somehow should be excluded from that ruling given that they were specifically raised. The depositions are warranted.

II. DUE PROCESS AND CALIFORNIA DISCOVERY LAW MANDATES LIMITED DEPOSITIONS ON PERSONAL JURISDICTION

As Judge Elfving's earlier ruling intimates, California law dictates that Plaintiff is entitled to depositions and other discovery relating to issues of jurisdiction when they are faced with a motion to quash based on an alleged lack of jurisdiction. See Mihlon v. Super. Ct., 169 Cal. App. 3d 703, 710 (App. 2 Dist. 1985) ("[t]he plaintiff has the right to conduct discovery with regard to the issue of jurisdiction to develop the facts necessary"); Ziller Elec. Lab. v. Super. Ct., 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1234 (App. 2 Dist. 1988) (court specified that its ruling for reconsideration of a motion to quash would not preclude plaintiff from conducting discovery regarding jurisdiction) (citing 1880 Corp. v. Super. Ct., 57 Cal. 2d 840, 843 (1962)); Goehring v. Super. Ct., 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 911 (App. 4 Dist. 1998) (citing Mihlon, 169 Cal. App. 3d at 711); Orchid Biosciences, 198 FRD 670 (SD Cal. 2001) (allowing depositions on personal jurisdiction).⁵ Cf. Warburton/Buttner, 103 Cal. App. 4th 1170 (App. 4 Dist. 2002) (allowing limited depositions on ⁴ His apparent creation of a California corporation in the past also makes it unlikely that he could have avoided ever entering into a contract in California, per his declaration. It is possible Defendant Winklevoss may explain or refute the glaring omission in his declaration, but he must do so under oath at deposition. The California contacts of Individual Defendants and their myriad family businesses – including ConnectU LLC's – must be explored, along with the true nature of their direct and personal involvement in the alleged acts.

1 subject matter jurisdiction). Jurisdiction over the individual defendants that act on behalf of a 2 business entity depends on their individual actions and connections to California, including their 3 acts on behalf of the entity. Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp., 217 Cal. App. 3d 103, 117 (1st App.
4 D. 1990); Goehring, 62 Cal. App. 4th 894 (court can allow discovery on individual defendants 5 purporting to act on behalf of a business entity). Indeed, depositions are necessary to fully 6 determine the extent to which each Individual Defendant authorized, directed, or actively 7 participated in the wrongful acts, since such involvement, even on behalf of the corporation, 8 would personally subject them to jurisdiction. See, e.g., Seagate Technology v. A.J. Kogyo Co., 9 219 Cal.App.3d 696 (1990) (“where corporate officers are alleged to have engaged in intentional 10 tortious activity, directed at a California resident, jurisdiction over them is proper”).

11 The limited deposition notices Facebook issued include notice upon ConnectU, as well as 12 upon the Individual Defendants, because all of the Individual Defendants admittedly are 13 “members” of ConnectU and appear to have acted on ConnectU’s behalf in ways related to this 14 litigation. (See, e.g., Am. Mot. at 1.) Moreover, the Individual Defendants declare only that they 15 did not take data in their individual capacities. (Id. at 6.) Thus, they imply that (i) Individual 16 Defendants took Facebook data on ConnectU’s behalf, and (ii) have committed other acts in their 17 individual capacities, such as illegally accessing Facebook’s computers, or aiding and abetting 18 illegal access and misappropriation of data. Testimony that was obtained in a deposition of 19 ConnectU in a separate federal action in Boston confirms such activity See Cooper Decl. Ex. I, at 20 147:24-151:3.

21 The Individual Defendants’ submission of incomplete and controverted declarations 22 practically mandates limited depositions on personal jurisdiction, because such depositions would 23 be uniquely likely to uncover additional contacts by the Individual Defendants with California, 24 including their personal wrongful conduct. Since the depositions also are sanctioned by 25 California precedent, the Individual Defendants should be compelled to respond and testify.

26 III. CONCLUSION

27 For the reasons set forth above, the Court should authorize limited depositions of 28 all Defendants.
