IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

MEDICAL DEVELOPMENT
INTERNATIONAL,

Plaintiff,

v.

CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF
CORRECTIONS AND REHABILITATION, et al.,

Defendants.

NO. C10-0443 TEH

ORDER GRANTING RECEIVER'S MOTION TO DISMISS AND MOTION TO STRIKE

This matter came before the Court on May 17, 2010, on a motion to dismiss and a motion to strike brought by Defendant J. Clark Kelso, sued in his official capacity as the Receiver appointed by this Court in Plata v. Schwarzenegger, Case No. C01-1351 TEH. After carefully considering the parties' written and oral arguments, the Court now GRANTS the Receiver's motion to dismiss the tort claims asserted by Plaintiff Medical Development International ("MDI"), as well as the Receiver's motion to strike MDI's claims for attorneys' fees under California Code of Civil Procedure section 1021.5, for the reasons discussed below.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Medical Development International ("MDI") is a Delaware corporation that formerly provided, and contends that it had a valid contract to provide, medical services at two California prisons: California State Penitentiary, Los Angeles ("LAC") and California

1 Correctional Institution in Tehachapi (“CCI”). In this action, MDI challenges actions taken 2 by the Receiver appointed by this Court in Plata to “exercise all powers vested by law in the 3 Secretary of the CDCR [California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation] as they 4 relate to the administration, control, management, operation, and financing of the California 5 prison medical health care system.” Feb. 14, 2006 Order in Plata at 4.

6 MDI originally sought to intervene in Plata and have its motion for intervention heard 7 on shortened time. This Court denied MDI’s motion on April 16, 2007, explaining that there 8 was no basis to hear the motion on shortened time. MDI did not re-file its motion to 9 intervene to be heard on a regularly noticed schedule.

10 Instead, MDI sued the Receiver in California Superior Court for the County of 11 Sacramento, and the Receiver removed the case to the United States District Court for the 12 Eastern District of California. That court dismissed the case because MDI failed to get 13 permission from this Court to sue the Receiver. MDI appealed the court’s decision to the 14 United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

15 MDI subsequently filed a motion in this Court for leave to sue the Receiver. The 16 Court denied that motion on June 24, 2008, on grounds that the Receiver would be immune 17 from suit as a judicial officer. MDI also appealed that decision to the Ninth Circuit.

18 On October 30, 2009, the Ninth Circuit issued a decision that affirmed in part and 19 vacated in part both district court orders. MDI v. CDCR, 585 F.3d 1211 (9th Cir. 2009). The 20 court held that removal to federal court was proper, that MDI did not need permission from 21 this Court to sue the Receiver, and that the Receiver did not enjoy absolute judicial immunity 22 from suit. The case was remanded to the Eastern District of California.

23 Following remand, the Eastern District granted the Receiver’s motion to transfer 24 venue to the Northern District, and this Court found the case to be related to Plata. MDI 25 filed its first amended complaint on February 23, 2010, asserting eleven causes of action 26 sounding in both contract and tort under California state law.

27 The Receiver now seeks dismissal of MDI’s tort causes of action, numbers eight 28 through eleven. In the eighth cause of action for negligent misrepresentation, MDI alleges

1 that the Receiver knew “that he would not pay MDI for services rendered under any 2 circumstances” but misrepresented to MDI on February 16, 2007, that it “could be paid for 3 services rendered if it [was] determined that MDI needed no medical license.” First Am.
4 Compl. (“FAC”) ¶ 145. The “representations by the Receiver that MDI had an opportunity 5 to correct any alleged problems or defects regarding the issue of the corporate practice of 6 medicine or medical licensure issues were untrue,” id. ¶ 146, and “were made with the intent 7 to induce MDI to continue performing services at LAC and CCI without pay,” id. ¶ 148. The 8 ninth cause of action for false promise alleges that the above misrepresentation was also a 9 “promise made without an intent to honor or perform it.” Id. ¶¶ 157-58.

10 The tenth cause of action for economic duress is based on the same February 16, 2007
11 meeting, as well as an allegation that “[i]n or around January 2007, the Receiver unilaterally 12 declared that all payments to MDI by the CDCR for services rendered pursuant to the 13 contract were to be halted. However, the Receiver also demanded that MDI continue to 14 perform under the terms of the Contract Documents without payment.” Id. ¶ 168. MDI 15 alleges that, at the February 16 meeting, which was held “to discuss the ongoing relationship 16 between MDI and the CDCR and the Receiver’s unilateral declaration that all payments be 17 halted,” the Receiver “ordered MDI to continue to perform. MDI expressed reservations 18 about continuing work without receiving payment. In response, the Receiver threatened 19 MDI, stating that if MDI failed to continue providing services, he would make sure MDI 20 never worked in California again.” Id. ¶ 169. MDI contends that “[a]s a result of the 21 Receiver’s threat, and fearing for its future ability to do business in California, MDI was 22 forced to continue providing services to the CDCR without payment for the purpose of 23 protecting its business interests in the State of California and avoiding exclusion from 24 California’s prison health care market.” Id. ¶ 172.

25 The eleventh cause of action for abuse of process asserts that “[t]he Receiver’s threat 26 to exclude MDI from the California prison health care market while acting in the name of 27 this Court and under authority of a federal court, constituted an improper use of judicial 28 power intended to force MDI to perform services at CCI and LAC without pay.” Id. ¶ 185.

1 MDI further contends that “[t]he Receiver’s threat to MDI constituted a willful and 2 intentional act made in his capacity as a receiver.” Id. ¶ 186.

3 In addition to moving to dismiss the above four tort causes of action, the Receiver also 4 moves to strike from the complaint all claims for attorneys’ fees under California’s private 5 attorney general statute, California Code of Civil Procedure section 1021.5.

7 LEGAL STANDARD

8 I. Motion to Dismiss

9 Dismissal is appropriate under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) when a 10 plaintiff’s allegations fail “to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.” In ruling on a 11 motion to dismiss, courts may consider only “the complaint, materials incorporated into the 12 complaint by reference, and matters of which the court may take judicial notice.”¹ Metzler 13 Inv. GMBH v. Corinthian Colleges, Inc., 540 F.3d 1049, 1061 (9th Cir. 2008). Courts must 14 generally “accept all material allegations of fact as true and construe the complaint in a light 15 most favorable to the non-moving party,” Vasquez v. Los Angeles County, 487 F.3d 1246, 16 1249 (9th Cir. 2007), but “are not bound to accept as true a legal conclusion couched as a 17 factual allegation,” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949-50 (2009) (citation omitted).

18 A Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal “can be based on the lack of a cognizable legal theory or 19 the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory.” Balistreri v. Pacifica 20 Police Dep’t, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1990). To survive a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff 21 must plead “enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Bell Atlantic 22 Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). Plausibility does not equate to probability, but 23 it requires “more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Iqbal, 129 24 S. Ct. at 1949. “A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that 25 allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the 26 misconduct alleged.” Id. Dismissal of claims that fail to meet this standard should be with

27 ¹Thus, the Court GRANTS the Receiver’s motion to strike the Declaration of Garrett 28 E. Dillon filed by MDI in support of its opposition. At oral argument, counsel for MDI stated that MDI did not have any objections to this motion to strike.

1 leave to amend unless it is clear that amendment could not possibly cure the complaint's 2 deficiencies. Steckman v. Hart Brewing, Inc., 143 F.3d 1293, 1296 (9th Cir. 1998).

4 II. Motion to Strike

5 Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(f), a "court may strike from a pleading an 6 insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter." A 7 motion to strike may be used to remove "requested relief, such as punitive damages, which is 8 not recoverable as a matter of law." Wilkerson v. Butler, 229 F.R.D. 166, 172 (E.D. Cal.
9 2005); see also, e.g., K.H. v. Mt. Diablo Unified Sch. Dist., Case No. C 04-5400 SI, 2005 WL 10 1656895 (N.D. Cal. July 14, 2005) (granting motion to strike request for attorneys' fees that 11 lacked any legal basis).

12 Motions to strike are regarded with disfavor, as they are often used as delaying tactics, 13 and should not be granted "unless it is clear that the matter to be stricken could have no 14 possible bearing on the subject matter of the litigation." Colaprico v. Sun Microsystems, 15 Inc., 758 F. Supp. 1335, 1339 (N.D. Cal. 1991). "However, where the motion may have the 16 effect of making the trial of the action less complicated, or have the effect of otherwise 17 streamlining the ultimate resolution of the action, the motion to strike will be well taken." 18 California ex rel. State Lands Comm'n. v. United States, 512 F. Supp. 36, 38 (N.D. Cal.
19 1981). When considering a motion to strike, a court must view the pleadings in a light most 20 favorable to the non-moving party. Id. at 39.

21
22 DISCUSSION

23 I. Motion to Dismiss

24 The Receiver moves to dismiss MDI's tort causes of action on a variety of state law 25 immunity and other grounds. As an initial matter, the Court rejects MDI's argument that 26 questions of immunity cannot be decided at the pleadings stage. Even the authority relied on 27 by MDI demonstrates that courts may make immunity determinations when considering only 28 the pleadings. E.g., Harmston v. City & County of San Francisco, Case No. 07-1186 SI,

1 2007 WL 2814596, at *4-*7 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 25, 2007) (granting motion for judgment on the 2 pleadings as to certain claims on immunity grounds, but finding that further factual 3 development was necessary as to other claims). The Court’s discussion below assumes the 4 allegations in the complaint to be true, as required when considering a motion to dismiss.

5 With the exception of California Government Code section 820.2, MDI does not 6 contest that the Receiver may invoke immunity under state law; it argues only that the 7 claimed immunities do not apply in the specific factual circumstances alleged. For the 8 reasons discussed below, the Court finds that immunity under California Government Code 9 section 818.8 applies to MDI’s negligent misrepresentation and false promise claims, and 10 that immunity under California Government Code section 821.6 applies to MDI’s economic 11 duress and abuse of process claims. The Court therefore need not and does not reach the 12 Receiver’s other arguments.

13 A. California Government Code § 818.8

14 The Receiver argues that California Government Code section 818.8, which provides 15 that “[a] public entity is not liable for an injury caused by misrepresentation by an employee 16 of the public entity, whether or not such misrepresentation be negligent or intentional,” 17 shields him from liability for all of MDI’s tort causes of action. The statute “grants public 18 entities immunity for negligent misrepresentation but not for negligence.” Jopson v. Feather 19 River Air Quality Mgmt. Dist., 108 Cal. App. 4th 492, 495 (2003).

20 Although “the articulation of an easy formula may prove difficult, the facts of the state 21 and federal immunity cases provide clear guidance.” Id. at 497. In cases where immunity 22 has been found to apply, the plaintiff “couched his allegations as a claim for either 23 intentional misconduct or negligence, not misrepresentation. . . . Essential to each claim was 24 the plaintiff’s reliance upon misinformation communicated to him by the government.” Id. at 25 498. For example, city inspectors were immune from liability when they allegedly signed off 26 on building inspections stating that a residence under construction met all applicable building 27 codes when they, in fact, knew that it did not, and the plaintiffs subsequently had to pay 28 nearly $300,000 to bring their residence up to code. Harshbarger v. City of Colton, 197 Cal.

1 App. 3d 1335, 1342 (1988). Similarly, immunity applied to bar a fraud claim “based on 2 allegations that defendants told [plaintiff] her application [for disability benefits] would be 3 ruled upon fairly and within three to five months, but that these representations were false.”
4 Masters v. San Bernadino County Employees Ret. Ass’n, 32 Cal. App. 4th 30, 37 (1995).
5 Immunity was also found to apply where plaintiffs purchased real property in reliance on a 6 city’s representation “that the property included two dwelling units which were legally 7 authorized under the city zoning law,” when, in fact, “two dwelling units were not authorized 8 under the city zoning regulations” and “the second unit on the property could not lawfully be 9 rented.” Grenell v. City of Hermosa Beach, 103 Cal. App. 3d 864, 867-68 (1980).

10 By contrast, cases where the immunity was not found to apply all “involved an alleged 11 breach of duty arising from governmental conduct completely divorced from any attendant 12 communication,” Jopson, 108 Cal. App. 4th at 499; that is, in each case, “the governmental 13 entity became integrally involved in causing the plaintiff’s damage, not merely by inflating 14 the plaintiff’s expectations,” id. at 501. Thus, for example, in Guild v. United States, 685 15 F.2d 324 (9th Cir. 1982), the Ninth Circuit found that 28 U.S.C. § 2680(h), a federal 16 immunity statute analogous to section 818.8, did not shield the government from liability.
17 The court explained that “[t]he Government is liable for injuries resulting from negligence in 18 performance of operational tasks even though misrepresentations are collaterally involved. It 19 is not liable, however, for injuries resulting from commercial decisions made in reliance on 20 government misrepresentations.” Id. at 325. Applying that rule to the facts of the case, the 21 court held that:

22 In our case the Government engaged in a species of engineering 23 malpractice. It undertook the design and planning for the dam 24 and reservoir. Designing the dam and reservoir was an 25 operational task and the Government performed it negligently.
26 Any communication of misinformation was collateral. The misrepresentation exception does not apply on these facts because the essence of the complaint is one for failure to take due care in the performance of a voluntary task.

27 Guild, 685 F.2d at 326. In other words, “the essence of the complaint” was not “reliance 28 upon misinformation communicated by the Government.” Id.

1 Based on the above framework, this Court concludes that the Receiver is immune 2 from liability under section 818.8 for MDI’s causes of action for negligent misrepresentation 3 and false promise, but not for the economic duress or abuse of process causes of action. In 4 the former two causes of action, the claimed injuries arose from allegations that MDI relied 5 on the Receiver’s false statements that MDI would be paid for services rendered. As made 6 clear in a case relied on by MDI, the government “is not liable . . . for injuries resulting from 7 commercial decisions made in reliance on government misrepresentations,” Guild, 685 F.2d 8 at 325 – precisely the allegations here.

9 The economic duress and abuse of process claims, on the other hand, stem from the 10 Receiver’s threats that MDI must continue to perform the terms of the contract without 11 payment and that, if it did not, the Receiver would ensure that MDI would be excluded from 12 future contracts with California prisons. These claims do not stem from alleged 13 misrepresentations and, instead, involve alleged misconduct “completely divorced from any 14 attendant communication.” Jopson, 108 Cal. App. 4th at 499. Accordingly, section 818.8
15 does not shield the Receiver from liability for these two causes of action.

16 B. California Government Code § 821.6

17 However, the Court finds merit to the Receiver’s argument that he is immune from 18 liability for MDI’s economic duress and abuse of process claims under California 19 Government Code section 821.6.² That statute provides that “[a] public employee is not 20 liable for injury caused by his instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative 21 proceeding within the scope of his employment, even if he acts maliciously and without 22 probable cause.” Cal. Gov’t Code § 821.6.

27 _____
28 ²The Receiver does not contend that section 821.6 applies to MDI’s negligent misrepresentation or false promise claims.

1 MDI's only argument against application of section 821.6 is that the immunity does 2 not apply because the Receiver was acting outside the scope of his authority.³ When the 3 Ninth Circuit rejected the Receiver's claim for judicial immunity, the court explained that:

4 MDI's claim does not challenge his authority as a Receiver, nor 5 does it seek to recover for any act for which specific instructions 6 were received from the court. The Northern District could not 7 simply declare CDCR immune from legal obligations. Neither 8 could it assign plenary power to the Receiver to refuse to permit 9 CDCR to pay its legal obligations.

10 MDI, 585 F.3d at 1222 (footnote omitted). While this discussion arose in a different context, 11 it makes clear that – assuming the allegations in the complaint to be true, as this Court must 12 at this stage of the proceedings – the Receiver acted outside the authority granted him by the 13 Court.

14 However, the question is not whether the Receiver was acting within the scope of his 15 authority; the issue is whether he was acting within the scope of his employment. MDI relies 16 heavily on a statement from the California Supreme Court that “a public officer is liable for 17 injuries caused by acts done outside the scope of his authority,” but reading that statement in 18 context reveals that, by “authority,” the court appears to have meant “duties of employment.” 19 White v. Towers, 37 Cal. 2d 727, 733 (1951). The plaintiff argued that the defendant “was 20 acting outside the scope of his authority in instituting proceedings in the federal court.” Id.
21 The court rejected that argument, finding that the defendant “was no less discharging his duty 22 to enforce the laws for the protection of fish and game by instituting the proceeding in the 23 federal court than he would have been if all proceedings had been instituted in the state 24 courts.” Id. The court went on to explain that “[d]uties of public office include those lying 25 squarely within its scope, those essential to accomplishment of the main purposes for which 26 the office was created, and those which, although only incidental and collateral, serve to 27 promote the accomplishment of the principal purposes.” Id. (citation omitted).

28 ³Indeed, MDI cannot argue that the Receiver's actions did not concern “instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding” since the basis for its abuse of process claim is that the Receiver's actions constituted use of the judicial process.

1 In this case, the Court specifically granted the Receiver the power “to control, 2 oversee, supervise, and direct all administrative personnel, financial, accounting, contractual, 3 legal, and other operational functions of the medical delivery component of the CDCR.” 4 Feb. 14, 2006 Order in Plata at 2. “The Receiver also shall be empowered to negotiate new 5 contracts and to renegotiate existing contracts, including contracts with labor unions, in the 6 event that such action is necessary for the Receiver to fulfill his duties under this Order.” Id.
7 at 4. Thus, the Receiver was clearly acting within the scope of his employment when 8 engaging in the conduct alleged by MDI. In fact, as the Ninth Circuit noted, “MDI has 9 conceded that it is suing the Receiver over the performance of his court-appointed duties.”
10 MDI, 585 F.3d at 1216.

11 Although the Receiver did not have authority from this Court to engage in tortious 12 misconduct, that does not eviscerate immunity under section 821.6. As one district court 13 persuasively explained:

14 The public policy behind immunity from civil liability for public 15 officials is to free them from any fear of litigation or harassment 16 while performing essential duties. Such immunity applies even if 17 the public officials engage in a malicious abuse of their power, 18 proceed without probable cause or conceal exculpatory evidence.
19 “[I]n the end it is better to leave unredressed the wrongs done by dishonest officers than to subject those who try to do their duty to the constant dread of retaliation.” Hardy v. Vial, 48 Cal. 2d 577, 583, 311 P.2d 494 (1957) (quoting Gregoire v. Biddle, 177 F.2d 579, 581 (2d Cir. 1949)).

20 Garcia v. County of Merced, 637 F. Supp. 2d 731, 751-52 (E.D. Cal. 2008) (citations 21 omitted). The court therefore concluded that section 821.6 immunity shielded officials from 22 an abuse of process claim based on obtaining arrest warrants – “an activity conducted in the 23 process of an investigation and . . . routinely within the scope of a prosecutor’s and officer’s 24 employment” – even though they allegedly did so “by using false evidence and concealing 25 essential exculpatory evidence from the magistrate.” Id. at 750, 752. Similarly, in this case, 26 section 821.6 shields the Receiver from liability for MDI’s abuse of process and economic 27 duress causes of action, even though the Receiver was not authorized by the Court to use 28 threats to force a company to provide services without pay. “That the complaint alleges

1 improper conduct . . . does not alter the fact that the acts alleged fall within the scope of 2 employment. To hold otherwise would mean that an impropriety which provides a basis for 3 liability would also provide a basis for vitiating immunity from such liability, thus making a 4 mockery of section 821.6.” Randle v. City & County of San Francisco, 186 Cal. App. 3d 5 449, 457 (1986) (citation omitted).

7 II. Motion to Strike Claims for Attorneys’ Fees

8 In addition to moving to dismiss the tort causes of action, the Receiver moves to strike 9 all claims for attorneys’ fees under California Code of Civil Procedure section 1021.5, which 10 provides that:

11 Upon motion, a court may award attorneys’ fees to a successful 12 party against one or more opposing parties in any action which 13 has resulted in the enforcement of an important right affecting the 14 public interest if: (a) a significant benefit, whether pecuniary or 15 nonpecuniary, has been conferred on the general public or a large 16 class of persons, (b) the necessity and financial burden of private 17 enforcement, or of enforcement by one public entity against 18 another public entity, are such as to make the award appropriate, 19 and (c) such fees should not in the interest of justice be paid out 20 of the recovery, if any.

21 This statute “was not designed as a method for rewarding litigants motivated by their own 22 pecuniary interests who only coincidentally protect the public interest.” Beach Colony II v.
23 Cal. Coastal Comm’n, 166 Cal. App. 3d 106, 114 (1985). Instead:

24 The private attorney general theory recognizes citizens frequently 25 have common interests of significant societal importance, but 26 which do not involve any individual’s financial interests to the 27 extent necessary to encourage private litigation to enforce the 28 right. To encourage such suits, attorneys fees are awarded when a significant public benefit is conferred through litigation pursued by one whose personal stake is insufficient to otherwise encourage the action.

Id. (citations omitted). “It is within the trial court’s discretion to deny attorneys’ fees pursuant to section 1021.5 on the ground that the plaintiff’s personal stake in the outcome was not disproportionate to the burden of private enforcement, even where the litigation enforced an important right and conferred a significant benefit upon the public.” Satrap v.
Pac. Gas & Elec. Co., 42 Cal. App. 4th 72, 78 (1996).

1 MDI contends that its “motivation was to publicize and seek redress for the Receiver’s 2 trampling on the rights of CDCR contractors and violating the laws of the State of 3 California.” Opp’n at 22. The company also contends that it has incurred approximately 4 $750,000 in attorneys’ fees in this case and that “it will still be operating at a major loss 5 overall” even if it prevails. Id. Thus, according to MDI, any pecuniary interest it has is 6 outweighed by the “significant benefit conferred both upon the public, regarding the 7 provision of constitutionally mandated health care services to state inmates, and to a large 8 class of persons, specifically contractors dealing with the Receiver and state entities in 9 general.” Id. at 23.

10 MDI’s argument is not persuasive in light of the company’s contention that it is owed 11 $37,369,476.85 in damages, penalties, and interest, not including punitive damages.⁴ 12 May 10, 2010 Joint Case Mgmt. Statement at 6-7. Unquestionably, this amount – and even 13 the more than $2.6 million MDI claims it is entitled to as reimbursement for services 14 provided, id. at 6, were that to be considered alone – is more than sufficient financial interest 15 “to encourage private litigation to enforce the right.” Beach Colony II, 166 Cal. App. 3d at 16 114; see also, e.g., Satrap, 42 Cal. App. 4th at 78 (describing several cases where section 17 1021.5 attorneys’ fees were denied, including a case where the court held that “damages of 18 $60,000 was sufficient financial incentive for litigation challenging permit limiting on-site 19 performance of abortions, and fees [were] denied despite enforcement of public right of 20 access”). Accordingly, the Receiver’s motion to strike all claims for attorneys’ fees under 21 California Code of Civil Procedure section 1021.5 is GRANTED.

24 ⁴It is not clear that MDI is entitled to punitive damages. “California Government 25 Code § 818 bars any award of punitive damages against a public entity.” Westlands Water
26 Dist. v. Amoco Chem. Co., 953 F.2d 1109, 1113 (9th Cir. 1991). Thus, because this is a suit 27 against the Receiver in his official capacity and therefore a suit against the state, it would 28 appear that punitive damages are not available here. See, e.g., Mitchell v. Dupnik, 75 F.3d 517, 527 (9th Cir. 1996) (error to award punitive damages against county officials sued in official capacities when county is immune from punitive damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983).
However, the Receiver has not moved to strike the prayer for punitive damages, and, in any event, MDI only seeks punitive damages on the false promise and abuse of process claims that the Court dismisses in this order. See FAC at 32-36 (prayer for relief).

1 CONCLUSION

2 For the above reasons, the Receiver's motion to dismiss MDI's tort claims is 3 GRANTED. The Receiver is immune from liability for MDI's negligent misrepresentation 4 and false promise causes of action under California Government Code section 818.8, and 5 immune from liability for MDI's economic duress and abuse of process causes of action 6 under California Government Code section 821.6.

7 The motion to strike MDI's claims for attorneys' fees under California Code of Civil 8 Procedure section 1021.5 is also GRANTED. MDI does not meet the criteria for obtaining 9 fees under California's private attorney general statute because its financial interests are 10 sufficient to encourage private litigation.
