UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

THE SIERRA CLUB, et al.,
Plaintiffs,
v.
UNITED STATES ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY,
Defendant.

Case No. 11-cv-00846-MEJ
ORDER RE: PLAINTIFFS’ PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS’ FEES AND COSTS
Re: Dkt. No. 77

I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiffs The Sierra Club and Environmental Integrity Project (“EIP”) (collectively, “Plaintiffs”) filed a complaint on February 23, 2011, against Defendant United States Environmental Protection Agency (the “EPA”), seeking the disclosure of certain government documents under the Freedom of Information Act (“FOIA”), 5 U.S.C. § 552, et seq. Compl. ¶ 1, Dkt. No. 1. After the parties completed briefing cross-motions for summary judgment in May of 2012, they entered into settlement discussions and eventually agreed to settle the case. Dkt. No. 69. Now before the Court is Plaintiffs’ Petition for Attorneys’ Fees and Costs. Dkt. No. 77 (“Mot.”). The EPA has filed an Opposition (Dkt. No. 90), and Plaintiffs have filed a Reply (Dkt. No. 94). The Court previously found this matter suitable for disposition without oral argument (Dkt. No. 107) and now issues the following order.

II. BACKGROUND

A. Initial FOIA Request

On February 25, 2010, Plaintiffs submitted a FOIA request to the EPA seeking information received by the EPA through its requests for information under Section 114 of the Clean Air Act (“CAA”), 42 U.S.C. § 7414, regarding Luminant Generation Company, LLC’s (“Luminant”) Texas coal-fired power plants. Jt. Stmt. ¶ 2, Dkt. No. 15; Adams Decl. ¶ 3, Dkt. No. 28. The

1 request was submitted to the EPA via email dated February 25, 2010, and assigned the tracking 2 number 06-FOI-00244-10. Jt. Stmt. ¶ 2; Adams Decl. ¶ 3. It comprised over 300,000 pages of 3 records that Luminant provided to the EPA in approximately 17 batches on a rolling basis over a 4 one and a half year period from September 2008 to February 2010. Adams Decl. ¶ 3; Harrison 5 Decl. ¶ 12, Dkt. No. 45-1; Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 5, Dkt. No. 91. By letter dated March 23, 6 2010, the EPA informed Plaintiffs that an extension to FOIA’s 20-business day decision deadline<sup>1</sup> 7 was required due to “the need to search for, collect and appropriately examine a voluminous
8 amount of separate and distinct records involved in [Plaintiffs’] request.” Jt. Stmt. ¶ 2. The EPA 9 letter extended its decision deadline to April 9, 2010.<sup>2</sup> Id.

10 A substantial portion of the information submitted by Luminant was marked as 11 confidential business information (“CBI”). Adams Decl. ¶ 3; Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 6. As such, 12 the documents required special handling under EPA FOIA regulations. See 40 C.F.R. § 13 2.204(d)(1); Adams Decl. ¶¶ 3-4. As part of making a confidentiality determination, the EPA is 14 first required to provide notice to each affected business that it is in the process of determining 15 whether the information is entitled to confidential treatment and provide the business an 16 opportunity to submit comments to support the CBI claims. Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 7.
17 Accordingly, on April 7, 2010, the EPA initially delivered responsive documents that were not 18 marked as CBI, along with a letter that, among other things, informed Plaintiffs that (1) certain 19 responsive records may be entitled to confidential treatment, (2) further inquiry by the EPA was 20 required before a final determination could be made regarding the releasability of additional 21 documents, (3) the EPA would consult with Luminant regarding the CBI claims, and (4) the 22 Office of Regional Counsel would issue a final confidentiality determination. Adams Decl. ¶ 4; Jt.
23 Stmt. ¶ 2. Pursuant to its regulations under 40 C.F.R. § 2.204(d)(1)(ii), the EPA is required to 24 initially deny the FOIA request until a final confidentiality determination has been issued. Adams 25

26 <sup>1</sup> FOIA requires an agency to issue a final determination resolving an information request within 27 20 business days from the date of its receipt. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(A)(i). It also requires an 28 agency to provide “an estimated date on which the agency will complete action on the request.”
Id. § 552(a)(7)(B)(ii).

<sup>2</sup> FOIA allows a decision deadline extension of up to 10 business days if certain limited “unusual circumstances” are present. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(B)(i).

1 Decl. ¶ 4; Harrison Decl. ¶ 6.

2 On May 7, 2010, Plaintiffs timely appealed, via email, the adverse action embodied by the 3 EPA's "initial denial" letter. Jt. Stmt. ¶ 2. By letter dated June 8, 2010, the EPA denied this 4 administrative appeal because EPA Region 6 Office of Regional Counsel was still in the process 5 of completing its confidentiality determination on the approximately 300,000 pages of records.
6 Id.; Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 6. Plaintiffs attempted, via a number of communications with the 7 EPA, to discern when it intended to make a final determination on the continuing withholding of 8 approximately 350,000 pages of information responsive to their FOIA request, but EPA did not 9 provide "an estimated date on which the agency will complete action on the request," as required 10 by FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(7)(B). Jt. Stmt. ¶ 2.

11 Meanwhile, pursuant to 40 C.F.R. § 2.204(d)(1) and (e), the EPA provided Luminant the 12 opportunity to substantiate its confidentiality claims on over 300,000 pages of records. The EPA's 13 letters to Luminant of notice of opportunity to submit substantiation of its CBI claims were dated 14 June 25, 2010 and November 8, 2010. Adams Decl. ¶ 6. Luminant was given 15 working days 15 from receipt of the EPA's requests for substantiation, respectively, to provide its support for the 16 CBI claims on the approximately 300,000 pages of records. Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 8. Luminant 17 provided seven substantiation responses, totaling approximately 1,881 pages: (1) for the June 25 18 request for substantiation, it provided responses for July 21, July 26, September 3, October 29, and 19 December 10, 2010; and (2) for the November 8 request, it provided responses for December 10 20 and 21, 2010. Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 8; Second Adams Decl. ¶ 6, Dkt. No. 92.

21 B. Second FOIA Request

22 On May 19, 2010, after the administrative appeal, the EPA received a separate FOIA 23 request from attorney David Bahr on behalf of the Sierra Club for all communications between the 24 EPA and Luminant regarding the initial February 25, 2010 request for documents. Lane Decl. ¶ 5, 25 Dkt. No. 27. The request was assigned tracking number 06-FOI-00342-10. Id. On June 11, 2010,
26 the EPA provided notice to the Sierra Club in accordance with 40 C.F.R. § 2.104(a), that it had no
27 responsive records. Id. ¶ 7. The EPA's request for substantiation to Luminant was still in draft 28 form during the pendency of the Sierra Club's request and had not yet been sent to Luminant.

1 Second Adams Decl. ¶ 4. There is no indication that the Sierra Club appealed the EPA’s June 11, 2 2010 response, and Plaintiffs’ Complaint does not address the Sierra Club’s request. Id.

3 C. Procedural Background

4 On February 23, 2011, Plaintiffs filed this action pursuant to FOIA and the Administrative 5 Procedure Act (“APA”), 5 U.S.C. § 701, et. seq. Compl. ¶ 1. In addition to disclosure of 6 documents, Plaintiffs sought declarations from the Court that: (1) the failure to disclose documents 7 was unlawful under FOIA; (2) the EPA’s determinations regarding which documents would be 8 disclosed were untimely; (3) the EPA’s determinations regarding appeal were untimely; (4) the 9 EPA’s actions constituted unlawful withholding and unreasonable delay pursuant to the APA; and 10 (5) the EPA’s decisions were arbitrary, capricious an abuse of discretion, and not in accordance 11 with the law in violation of the APA. Id. at 14. Plaintiffs filed their Complaint two months after 12 the EPA received its last substantiation response from Luminant on December 21, 2010. Second 13 Harrison Decl. ¶ 10. The EPA maintains that it “was still evaluating and preparing the claim-14 withdrawn pages of information for release, while also continuing to review the seven 15 substantiation responses and the over 250,000 pages of records still claimed as CBI.” Id.

16 Upon filing of the Complaint, the parties agreed to explore settlement via the Court’s 17 mediation program. Dkt. No. 20. As part of their stipulation, the parties agreed that the EPA
18 would release all documents responsive to Plaintiffs’ FOIA request for which the Luminant
19 corporation had withdrawn its exemption claims by July 6, 2011, and the EPA agreed to disclose
20 non-CBI documents at the rate of 1,600 pages per month. Id. at 2. During this time, Luminant 21 withdrew its confidentiality claims on certain released pages, and the EPA was able to produce 22 five additional disclosures during the pendency of this lawsuit. Second Harrison Decl. ¶¶ 11-12.
23 In sum, over 44,000 pages of responsive documents were released pursuant to the initial FOIA 24 request. Adams Decl. ¶ 9; Bahr Decl. ¶ 28, Dkt. No. 78. The parties were unable to resolve their 25 dispute regarding the remaining approximately 300,000 pages of documents; thus the Court set a 26 summary judgment briefing and hearing schedule. Order dated Nov. 21, 2011, Dkt. No. 23.

27 After summary judgment was fully briefed, the undersigned vacated oral argument and 28 ordered the parties into her Chambers to meet and confer. Order dated May 15, 2012, Dkt. No. 50.

1 From this second round of settlement discussions, the EPA agreed to timely process a revised 2 FOIA request that targeted information in the EPA’s possession at that time and which was the 3 type of information Plaintiffs had been seeking in their original request. Saxonhouse Decl. ¶ 17, 4 Dkt. No. 79. Pursuant to the parties’ Settlement Agreement and Release, they agreed to the 5 following: (1) the EPA would cease work on FOIA Request 06-FOI-00244-10 as the request was 6 withdrawn; (2) Plaintiffs would narrow and submit a new FOIA request; (3) after Plaintiffs 7 submitted a new request, the EPA would process the request consistent with its regulations under 8 40 C.F.R. part 2, subpart B, and within 140 days of receiving the new FOIA request; (4) Plaintiffs 9 would dismiss this action; and (5) Plaintiffs released the EPA from liability for claims related to 10 the litigation. Settlement Agreement, Dkt. No. 69.

11 In response to the revised request, the EPA released 61 of the 65 documents it identified as 12 responsive and non-exempt under FOIA.<sup>3</sup> Bahr Decl. ¶ 30. Plaintiffs therefore stipulated to the 13 dismissal of this case, and the Court so ordered on March 3, 2014. Stipulated Dismissal and 14 Order, Dkt. No. 72.

15 Plaintiffs filed the present motion for attorneys’ fees and costs on June 9, 2014. Dkt. No.
16 77. In their motion, Plaintiffs maintain that they have prevailed in this action “because their suit 17 caused the release of over 44,000 pages of records responsive to their [FOIA] request.” Mot. at 1.
18 Plaintiffs further argue that their “agreement to dismiss their case while over 300,000 pages of 19 additional information remained to be processed by [the EPA] was expressly conditioned on the 20 Agency’s settlement promise to swiftly complete the processing of a second FOIA request by a 21 date certain, an obligation Defendant satisfied,” and that “[t]hese events would not have occurred
22 without the filing of this action and they materially benefitted the Plaintiffs’ and the public’s 23 oversight of EPA’s . . . regulatory and enforcement programs.” Id. They seek $187,906.06 in 24 attorneys’ fees and costs. Bahr Sec. Suppl. Decl. ¶ 9, Dkt. No 108.

26 <sup>3</sup> On April 25, 2014, Luminant commenced an action under the APA for judicial review of the 27 EPA’s adverse determination and to prevent the release of its information claimed as CBI. See 28 Luminant Generation Co., LLC v. U.S. EPA, 4:14-cv-00172 [Dkt. No. 1] at ¶¶ 1, 19 (E.D. Tex., Sherman Division); Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 16. To date, the Sierra Club has not received any of the 61 records responsive to FOIA Request EPA-R6-2014-000290. Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 16.
Luminant’s lawsuit against the EPA is still pending.

1 III. LEGAL STANDARD

2 The fee-shifting provision of FOIA states that a “court may assess against the United 3 States reasonable attorney fees and other litigation costs reasonably incurred in any case under this 4 section in which the complainant has substantially prevailed.” 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(E).

5 “Substantially prevailed” in this context means that a “complainant has obtained relief through 6 either . . . a judicial order, or an enforceable written agreement or consent decree; or . . . a 7 voluntary or unilateral change in position by the agency, if the complainant’s claim is not 8 insubstantial.” Id. Fee and cost awards are not automatically awarded to a prevailing party under 9 FOIA. See Church of Scientology of Cal. v. U.S. Postal Serv., 700 F.2d 486, 489 (9th Cir. 1983).
10 Rather, plaintiffs “must present convincing evidence” that they are both eligible for an award of 11 attorney’s fees and that they are entitled to such an award. Id. at 489, 492; see also Long v. U.S.
12 I.R.S., 932 F.2d 1309, 1313 (9th Cir. 1991) (“In order to receive an award of fees, a prevailing 13 party in a FOIA action must demonstrate both eligibility for and entitlement to such a recovery.”).

14 The Ninth Circuit has crafted a two-step process for determining whether a party may be 15 awarded fees and costs under 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(E). To be eligible for an award, a party must 16 show both that “(1) the filing of the action could reasonably have been regarded as necessary to 17 obtain the information,” and that “(2) the filing of the action had a substantial causative effect on 18 the delivery of the information.” Church of Scientology, 700 F.2d at 489 (emphasis in original).

19 Once a court deems a party eligible to recover fees and costs, it then exercises its 20 “discretion to determine whether the plaintiff is entitled to fees.” Or. Natural Desert Ass’n v.
21 Locke, 572 F.3d 610, 614 (9th Cir. 2009) (emphasis added). Entitlement to an award of fees under 22 FOIA is a separate analysis; a “determination of eligibility does not automatically entitle the 23 plaintiff to attorney’s fees.” Church of Scientology, 700 F.2d at 489.

24 If a court determines that a party is both eligible and entitled to receive fees, that party 25 “must submit his fee bill to the court for its scrutiny of the reasonableness of (a) the number of 26 hours expended and (b) the hourly fee claimed.” Long, 932 F.2d at 1313-14. If these two figures 27 are reasonable in light of the difficulty of the case and the skill of the attorneys involved, there is a 28 “strong presumption” that their product “represents a reasonable award.” Id. at 1314. A court

1 may revise upward or downward the resulting “lodestar figure” if “factors relating to the nature 2 and difficulty of the case overcome this strong presumption and indicate that such an adjustment is 3 necessary.” Id.<sup>4</sup> However, once a party is deemed both eligible and entitled to fees, “the award 4 must be given and the only room for discretion concerns the reasonableness of the amount 5 requested.”<sup>5</sup> Id. A district court awarding fees and costs “should provide a detailed account of 6 how it arrive[d] at appropriate figures for the number of hours reasonably expended and a 7 reasonable hourly rate.” Id.

8 IV. DISCUSSION

9 A. Standing

10 As a preliminary matter, the EPA raises for the first time in its Opposition the issue of 11 Sierra Club’s standing to bring this case. Specifically, the EPA argues that Sierra Club lacks 12 standing because it was not a requesting party to the initial FOIA request (06-FOI-00244-10).
13 Opp’n at 19. The EPA notes that Sierra Club made a separate FOIA request (06-FOI-00342-10)
14 on May 19, 2010, and argues that Sierra Club is therefore not entitled to attorneys’ fees and costs 15 related to the initial February 25, 2010, FOIA request. Id.

16 In response, Plaintiffs assert that the EPA acknowledged Sierra Club as a proper party to 17 this lawsuit by: (1) submitting to personal jurisdiction of this Court based on Sierra Club’s

19 <sup>4</sup> The Long Court cited with approval twelve factors that may be considered in revising a fee
20 award. They are (1) the time and labor required, (2) the novelty and difficulty of the questions 21 involved, (3) the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly, (4) the preclusion of other 22 employment by the attorney due to acceptance of the case, (5) the customary fee, (6) whether the 23 fee is fixed or contingent, (7) time limitations imposed by the client or the circumstances, (8) the 24 amount involved and the results obtained, (9) the experience, reputation, and ability of the attorneys, (10) the “undesirability” of the case, (11) the nature and length of the professional relationship with the client, and (12) awards in similar cases. 932 F.2d at 1314 (citing Kerr v.
Screen Extras Guild, Inc., 526 F.2d 67, 70 (9th Cir. 1975)). These factors may, however, overlap to some degree with the “lodestar figure” if they served as a basis for the calculation of that initial amount. Id. at 1314 n.4.

25 <sup>5</sup> A court may reduce the amount of hours used to calculate a fee award “where documentation of 26 the hours is inadequate; if the case was overstaffed and hours are duplicated; if the hours expended 27 are deemed excessive or otherwise unnecessary.” Chalmers v. City of Los Angeles, 796 F.2d 28 1205, 1210 (9th Cir. 1986). Chalmers examined an award of fees and costs under the fee-shifting provision for civil rights actions provided by statute under 42 U.S.C. § 1988. The Ninth Circuit cites approvingly to Chalmers and other § 1988 cases in discussing the metrics of fee-shifting under FOIA. See, e.g., Long, 932 F.2d at 1314. Indeed, Rosenfeld v. United States, 859 F.2d 717, 724 (9th Cir. 1988) explicitly holds that FOIA and § 1988 are “comparable” where awards of attorney’s fees are concerned.

1 location in San Francisco; (2) admitting in its Answer that Plaintiffs had timely appealed the 2 EPA’s initial denial letter; (3) admitting that Plaintiffs had exhausted all administrative remedies
3 required by FOIA; (4) receiving communications regarding the FOIA request from Plaintiffs’
4 attorney, Ilan Levin, on behalf of the Sierra Club and EIP; (5) providing responsive information 5 regarding the initial FOIA request directly to Sierra Club; and (6) explicitly naming Sierra Club as 6 a party to the request in its denial letter. Reply at 10-11.

7 1. Legal Standard

8 Standing is required in order to confer subject matter jurisdiction upon federal courts under 9 Article III of the Constitution. It is “the threshold question in every federal case.” Warth v.
10 Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 498 (1975). The Supreme Court has stated that the standing requirement 11 limits federal court jurisdiction to actual controversies so that the judicial process is not 12 transformed into “a vehicle for the vindication of the value interests of concerned bystanders.”
13 Valley Forge Christian College v. Ams. United for Separation of Church & State, Inc., 454 U.S.
14 464, 473 (1982). To satisfy the standing requirements imposed by the Constitution, a plaintiff 15 must show that (1) it has suffered an injury in fact that is concrete, particularized, and actual or 16 imminent; (2) the injury is fairly traceable to the defendant; and (3) it is likely to be redressed by a 17 favorable decision. Friends of the Earth, Inc. v. Laidlaw Env’tl. Servs. (TOC), Inc., 528 U.S. 167, 18 180-81 (2000).

19 Under FOIA, a party is deemed to have suffered an injury when the government agency 20 fails to respond to a FOIA request in a timely manner. Gilmore v. U.S. Dep’t of Energy, 33 F.
21 Supp. 2d 1184, 1189 (N.D. Cal. 1998) (citing Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 22 (1992)). Thus, any person who submits a FOIA request has standing to bring a FOIA challenge in 23 federal court if the request is denied in whole or part. United States v. Richardson, 418 U.S. 166, 24 204 (1974). However, a party must be adequately identified in the FOIA request to have standing.
25 Barragan v. Bd. of Governors of Fed. Reserve Sys., 2012 WL 1535820, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 30,
26 2012) (quoting Three Forks Ranch Corp. v. Bureau of Land Mgmt., Little Snake Field Office, 358
27 F. Supp. 2d 1, 3 (D.D.C. 2005)). “The identity of the requester is required under FOIA so that the 28 government has notice of the party or parties seeking the information.” Menasha Corp. v. U.S.

1 Dep't of Justice, 2012 WL 1034933, at *3 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 26, 2012).

2 2. Application to the Case at Bar

3 Although Sierra Club was not named in the initial request, the Court finds that the 4 correspondence between the EPA and Plaintiffs, and the EPA's subsequent actions in this case, 5 sufficiently identify Sierra Club as an interested party to the initial FOIA request (06-FOI-00244-6 10).

7 In Menasha, an attorney submitted a FOIA request to the Department of Justice ("DOJ")
8 seeking documents on behalf of two entities. 2012 WL 1034933, at *1. However, the attorney 9 failed to mention that the documents were being submitted on behalf of any particular entity and 10 instead listed himself as the sole requestor. Id. After the court ordered the documents released, 11 the plaintiffs sought attorneys' fees. Id. at *2. The DOJ opposed the fee petition, arguing that the 12 plaintiffs lacked standing to bring the claim because neither was mentioned in the FOIA request.
13 Id. at *3. The court disagreed and looked to the correspondence between the parties to determine 14 whether the plaintiffs had standing. Id. It observed that there were at least four communications 15 between the DOJ and the plaintiffs which noted that the request was being submitted on their 16 behalf. Id. Based on this correspondence, the court found the DOJ's position unconvincing, 17 stating, "[i]f Defendant truly believed Plaintiffs lacked standing to bring the request, it should 18 have asserted that in response to the request itself." Id.

19 In Olsen v. U.S. Dep't of Transp. Fed. Transit Admin., Olsen's attorney submitted a FOIA 20 request to the Federal Transit Administration, but failed to state that the request was made on his 21 behalf. 2002 WL 31738794, at *2 fn.2 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 2, 2002). Despite this, the court found that 22 any uncertainty as to the requester's identity was resolved during the administrative appeals 23 process, when the agency had acknowledged Olsen as the requester in its denial letter. Id. Thus, 24 although not named in the initial request, the court held that Olsen had standing. Id.

25 In contrast, when a party is not adequately identified in a FOIA request and there is no 26 correspondence between the parties indicating that the agency was on notice of the party, courts 27 have held that the party lacks standing. See Barragan, 2012 WL 1535820, at *2. In Barragan, the 28 plaintiff's attorney submitted a FOIA request to the Federal Reserve System on behalf of Barragan

1 and putative class members, but did not mention plaintiff's name or state that he was acting on 2 plaintiff's behalf. Id. The court found that the plaintiff lacked standing to bring a FOIA claim 3 because she was unnamed in the FOIA request. Id. at *2. Although the plaintiff attempted to rely 4 on the court's holding in Menasha, the court found the comparison unavailing because there was 5 no correspondence between the attorney and agency that named the plaintiff or stating that the 6 request was made on the plaintiff's behalf. Id. at *2 n.3.

7 In the present case, despite Sierra Club being unnamed in the initial FOIA request, the 8 Court finds that the EPA fully acknowledged Sierra Club as an interested party to the request and 9 has continually treated them as such. In a follow-up letter dated March 16, 2010, Plaintiffs 10 expressly stated that the request was submitted on behalf of EIP and Sierra Club. Levin Suppl.
11 Decl., Ex. E, Dkt. No. 95. On June 8, 2010, the EPA sent Plaintiffs a denial letter denying the 12 FOIA request "submitted by Sierra Club and the Environmental Integrity Project." Bahr Supp.
13 Decl., Ex. K, Dkt. No. 96 (emphasis added). The EPA never disputes in its denial letter that Sierra 14 Club was a party to the request. Id. To the contrary, like the defendant in Olsen, the EPA 15 explicitly identifies Sierra Club as a party. Id.

16 Further, the EPA continued to treat Sierra Club as a party to the request when it repeatedly 17 sent responsive documents directly to Sierra Club. The dates of these responses range from June 18 1, 2011 until April 26, 2012. See Sec. Harrison Decl., Exs. B; E-G. In the responses sent to Sierra 19 Club, the EPA specifically referenced the initial FOIA request number (06-FOI-00244-10). See 20 id. Additionally, since the initiation of this suit, the EPA has continually recognized Sierra Club 21 as a party to the initial FOIA request. In its Answer, the EPA admits to this district being a proper 22 venue based on Sierra Club's principal place of business in San Francisco. Answer ¶ 6, Dkt. No.
23 11.

24 Although the EPA argues that Sierra Club failed to exhaust its administrative remedies 25 with respect to the second FOIA request, it acknowledges that Sierra Club sought the identical
26 information in its May 19, 2010 FOIA request that was sought in the initial February 25, 2010 27 request. Opp'n at 19. The EPA states, "[t]he request sought documents regarding 28 communications between EPA and Luminant regarding EIP's February 25, 2010 requests for

1 documents.” Id. Given that it was the EPA that referenced the initial FOIA request number and 2 explicitly named Sierra Club in the denial letter, the Court finds that Sierra Club exhausted its 3 administrative remedies.

4 Thus, based on the EPA’s correspondence with Plaintiffs, its decision to send responsive 5 documents directly to Sierra Club, and its subsequent actions in this case, the Court finds that the 6 EPA had notice that Sierra Club sought the information in the initial FOIA request. Accordingly, 7 both Plaintiffs meet the standing requirements.

8 B. Eligibility

9 As noted above, a party has “substantially prevailed” under FOIA when it obtains “relief 10 through either . . . a judicial order, or an enforceable written agreement or consent decree; or . . . a 11 voluntary or unilateral change in position by the agency, if the complainant’s claim is not 12 insubstantial.” 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(E)(ii).

13 Plaintiffs argue that they are eligible for an award of attorney’s fees and expenses pursuant 14 to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(E)(ii)(II) because they have substantially prevailed in this lawsuit through 15 a “voluntary or unilateral change in position” by the EPA after the suit was filed that caused the 16 release of over 44,000 pages of documents responsive to their FOIA request. Mot. at 8. Plaintiffs 17 also argue that, in exchange for their stipulation to dismiss the case, the EPA entered into a quid 18 pro quo agreement to complete processing of a subsequent information request by a date certain.
19 Id. at 8-9.

20 In response, the EPA argues that Plaintiffs have not obtained the type of relief 21 contemplated under FOIA. Opp’n at 9. Specifically, the EPA contends that there has been neither 22 a determination on the merits nor any finding by this Court that the EPA is liable on any of 23 Plaintiffs’ claims, and therefore there has been no judicial order. Id. The EPA further argues that 24 Plaintiffs incorrectly argue that they are “prevailing parties” because, although the parties entered 25 into an agreement for Plaintiffs to dismiss the case if the EPA processed a subsequent request, 26 “Plaintiffs always had the right to submit another FOIA request, and the Settlement Agreement did 27 not change the legal relationship of the parties.” Id. at 9-10. Thus, “EPA’s agreement to process a 28 FOIA request within the parameters required by the law is not the sort of promise that justifies a

1 conclusion that the Plaintiffs have prevailed.” Id. at 10. The EPA also notes that the Settlement 2 Agreement dealing with the new FOIA complaint provides that it does not establish either of the 3 parties as a “prevailing party” for purposes of assessing attorney fees and costs. Id. (citing 4 Settlement Agreement ¶ 4 (“This clause of the Settlement Agreement does not establish either of 5 the Parties as a ‘prevailing party’ for purposes of assessing attorney fees and costs, and is not and 6 cannot under any construction be effective in doing so.”)).

7 The EPA also argues that Plaintiffs have not obtained relief through “a voluntary or 8 unilateral change in position” as (1) there is no change in position by the EPA, and (2) Plaintiffs 9 did not obtain relief because of any such change. Id. Specifically, the EPA maintains that 10 Plaintiffs’ Complaint was premature because it was still diligently processing Luminant’s 11 responses (the last substantiation was received in late December 2010) when Plaintiffs filed suit
12 two months later in February 2011. Id. at 11. The EPA further argues that Plaintiffs are incorrect 13 to assert that it changed its position and agreed to release over 44,000 pages of records only after 14 Plaintiffs filed suit; rather, documents were released only after the EPA was able to process 15 Luminant’s responses to the EPA’s requests for substantiation in which Luminant withdrew its 16 confidentiality claims on the released pages. Id.

17 Finally, the EPA argues that there is no causal connection between the EPA’s position and 18 the release of documents. Id. at 12. It contends that “[t]he fact that Luminant withdrew its 19 confidentiality claims covering the information is the only catalyst that led to the release.” Id. It 20 maintains that when an intervening event outside the EPA’s control results in the release of 21 records, there is not a change in agency position under FOIA. Id.

22 Because the Court finds that Plaintiffs are eligible on the former ground (relief obtained 23 through a judicial order or an enforceable written agreement or consent decree), it need not reach 24 the latter. The record reflects that on June 27, 2011, the Court approved the parties’ stipulation
25 regarding mediation and briefing schedules. Order, Dkt. No. 20. As part of that Order, the Court 26 required the EPA to release to Plaintiffs “all documents responsive to their FOIA request for 27 which the Luminant corporation has withdrawn claims that they are exempt from disclosure” by 28 July 6, 2011, and required the EPA to release documents at the rate of “1,600 pages every four

1 weeks, until the process is completed.” Id. at 2. Even if this is not identical to the relief sought in 2 their Complaint, this judicial order still “changed the legal relationship of the parties.”
 3 Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home, Inc. v. W. Va. Dep’t of Health & Human Servs., 532 U.S. 598, 4 605 (2001) (substantially prevailing by judicial order means “judicially sanctioned change in the 5 legal relationship of the parties”).

6 Although the parties agreed on the deadlines, the fact that the Court required production by 7 a specified date changed the legal relationship between the parties and therefore qualifies Plaintiffs 8 as eligible for fees. See Davy v. C.I.A., 456 F.3d 162, 165 (D.C. Cir. 2006) (joint stipulation 9 granted plaintiff “some relief on the merits of his claim” and therefore “changed the ‘legal 10 relationship between [the plaintiff] and the defendant’” (quoting Buckhannon, 532 U.S. at 604)
 11 (alteration in original)); Citizens for Responsibility & Ethics in Wash. v. U.S. Dep’t of Justice, 820 12 F. Supp. 2d 39, 44 (D.D.C. 2011) (scheduling order requiring production by a specified date 13 qualifies plaintiff as eligible for fees, even if schedule adopted by court was proposed by the 14 defendant agency). Just as in those cases, the June 27, 2011 scheduling order in this case changed 15 the legal relationship between the parties because prior to its issuance the EPA “was not under any 16 judicial direction to produce documents by specific dates; the . . . order changed that by requiring 17 the Agency to produce all responsive documents by the specified dates.” Davy, 456 F.3d at 166.
 18 “If the Agency failed to comply with the order it faced the sanction of contempt.” Id.; see also 19 Judicial Watch v. F.B.I., 522 F.3d 364, 367-70 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (following Davy and finding 20 plaintiff to be a substantially prevailing party on basis of joint stipulation and order that required 21 documents to be released by date certain). Thus, “[e]ven though the parties arrived at a mutually 22 acceptable agreement, . . . the order memorializing the agreement created the necessary judicial 23 imprimatur for plaintiffs to be a prevailing party.” Judicial Watch, 522 F.3d at 368 (internal 24 punctuation and citations omitted). Further, even if Plaintiffs did not achieve all relief sought in 25 their Complaint, it is sufficient that Plaintiffs have “succeed[ed] on any significant issue in 26 litigation, achieving some of the benefits the parties sought in bringing the suit”). Edmonds v.
 27 F.B.I., 417 F.3d 1319, 1326-27 (D.C. Cir. 2005); Citizens for Responsibility, 820 F. Supp. 2d at 28 44.

1           The EPA argues that Plaintiffs cannot have prevailed because the Settlement Agreement
2 dealing with the new FOIA complaint provides that it does not establish either of the parties as a 3 “prevailing party” for purposes of assessing attorney fees and costs. Opp’n at 10. Specifically, 4 paragraph 4 of the Settlement Agreement provides as follows: “[t]his clause of the Settlement
5 Agreement does not establish either of the Parties as a ‘prevailing party’ for purposes of assessing 6 attorney fees and costs, and is not and cannot under any construction be effective in doing so.”
7 Dkt. No. 70. However, this language does not render FOIA inoperable. Wildlands CPR v. U.S.
8 Forest Serv., 558 F. Supp. 2d 1096, 1100 (D. Mont. 2008) (finding plaintiff substantially 9 prevailed, even though parties’ consent decree included language agreeing that the parties did not 10 intend the decree to establish a prevailing party). The parties cannot circumvent FOIA by 11 contract. Id. (“Here, the consent decree reflects the parties’ understanding that entering it would 12 not, by its terms, establish a prevailing party. It did not need to because the Act does.”).

13           The Court finds that Plaintiffs obtained relief through the parties’ written agreement, and 14 therefore, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(E)(ii), Plaintiffs have “substantially prevailed” and are 15 eligible to receive a fee award under FOIA.

16 C. Entitlement

17           If a plaintiff demonstrates eligibility for fees, the district court may, in the exercise of its 18 discretion, determine that the complainant is entitled to an award of attorney fees. Long, 932 F.2d 19 at 1313. In exercising its discretion, the district court must consider four criteria: (1) the public 20 benefit from disclosure, (2) any commercial benefit to the plaintiff resulting from disclosure, (3) 21 the nature of the plaintiff’s interest in the disclosed records, and (4) whether the government’s 22 withholding of the records had a reasonable basis in law. Id. (citations omitted). These four 23 criteria are not exhaustive. Id. Additionally, the court may take into consideration “whatever 24 factors it deems relevant in determining whether an award of attorney’s fees is appropriate.” Id.
25 (internal quotations and citation omitted). Courts look to the four factors described in Long as a 26 guide to exercising their discretion, keeping in mind “the basic policy of the FOIA to encourage 27 the maximum feasible public access to government information.” Nationwide Bldg. Maint., Inc. v.
28 Sampson, 559 F.2d 704, 715 (D.C. Cir. 1977); see also Church of Scientology, 700 F.2d at 494.

1           1.       Public Benefit

2           The public benefit factor takes into account the “degree of dissemination and the likely 3 public impact that might result from disclosure.” Church of Scientology, 700 F.2d at 493. An 4 award of attorneys’ fees is disfavored when it merely subsidizes private concerns. Id. (citing Blue 5 v. Bureau of Prisons, 570 F.2d 529, 533-34 (5th Cir. 1978)). However, “[a] public benefit may 6 result even though the specific document is for plaintiff’s sole use.” Id.

7           Plaintiffs argue that their work as environmental organizers creates benefits which 8 naturally flow to the public. Mot. at 5-6. They contend that public health is compromised by 9 pollutants discharged into the environment by companies who fail to comply with the CAA. Id. at 10 11. Plaintiffs further assert that the information sought allows for public oversight and 11 participation in ensuring enforcement and compliance with environmental laws. Id.

12           In its Opposition, the EPA argues that no public benefit has been conferred because 13 Plaintiffs failed to disseminate the documents they obtained to the public. Opp’n at 13. The EPA
14 further argues that absent evidence proving dissemination, Plaintiffs are in pursuit of their own 15 institutional agenda. Id. at 13-14. In response, Plaintiffs argue that actual publication is 16 irrelevant so long as the information is being used to fuel Plaintiffs’ efforts to seek compliance 17 with environmental laws. Reply at 6.

18           “Congress enacted § 304 of the Clean Air Act specifically to encourage ‘citizen 19 participation in the enforcement of standards and regulations established under this Act,’ S.Rep.
20 No. 91-1196, p. 36 (1970), and intended the section ‘to afford . . . citizens . . . very broad 21 opportunities to participate in the effort to prevent and abate air pollution.’” Pennsylvania v. Del.
22 Valley Citizens’ Council for Clean Air, 478 U.S. 546, 560 (1986) supplemented, 483 U.S. 711
23 (1987) (citing 1 Leg. Hist., p. 138 (Senate Consideration of the Report of the Conference 24 Committee, Dec. 18, 1970) (remarks of Sen. Eagleton)). With this legislative intent in mind, 25 FOIA’s provision for attorneys’ fees recognizes “a public interest group seeking information to 26 further a project benefitting the general public.” Davy v. C.I.A., 550 F.3d 1155, 1158 (D.D.C.
27 2008).

28           Here, it is undisputed that Plaintiffs are nonprofit public interest groups organized to alert

1 the public of issues concerning environmental and health risks. Plaintiffs’ effort to inform the 2 public of pollutants exposed to the air by noncompliant companies undoubtedly confers a benefit
 3 on the public. See Campaign for Responsible Transplantation v. U.S. Food and Drug Admin., 593
 4 F. Supp. 2d 236, 241 (D.D.C. 2009) (finding the public interest prong favors a nonprofit group 5 designed to alert the public of health risks); Del. Valley Citizens’ Council, 478 U.S. at 560 6 (“Congress found that Government initiative in seeking enforcement under the Clean Air Act has 7 been restrained . . . and urged the courts to recognize that in bringing legitimate actions under this 8 section citizens would be performing a public service and in such instances the courts should 9 award costs of litigation to such party.” (internal citation and quotations omitted)).

10 Although the EPA argues that no public benefit has been conferred because Plaintiffs did 11 not disseminate the documents, the Court finds that this ignores the broader purpose served by 12 disclosure. See O’Neil, Lysaght & Sun v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 951 F. Supp. 1413, 1424
 13 (C.D. Cal. 1996). In O’Neil, the plaintiffs sought release of documents from the Drug 14 Enforcement Agency regarding the misconduct and abusive practices of an informant. Id. at 1415.
 15 The information sought was for use in a criminal case related to the plaintiffs’ client. Id. at 1420.
 16 The court held that using the documents solely for a private purpose is not dispositive in 17 determining whether a public benefit is served, reasoning that the actual information sought “need 18 not be of public interest as long as there is a public benefit from the fact of its disclosure.” Id. at 19 1423. The court recognized a public benefit in urging government compliance with statutory 20 functions. Id.

21 Similarly here, the Court finds Plaintiffs’ failure to disseminate the documents they 22 obtained is not dispositive in determining whether their efforts served a public benefit. Given the 23 purpose of Plaintiffs’ organizations to oversee and enforce compliance with the CAA, the Court 24 finds that Plaintiffs provide a significant public benefit. Further, as Plaintiffs point out, even if 25 they have not publicly posted each of the 44,000 pages of documents obtained in this litigation, it 26 is evident that the data they contain is being used to inform Plaintiffs’ ongoing oversight and 27 enforcement efforts. Reply at 6. Thus, the public benefit factor weighs in favor of Plaintiffs’ 28 entitlement to attorney’s fees and costs.

1           2.       Commercial Benefit and Nature of Plaintiffs' Interests

2           The commercial benefit to the party resulting from disclosures and the nature of the 3 plaintiffs' interest are closely related and often considered together. Church of Scientology, 700 4 F.2d at 494. In general, “[i]f either commercial benefit will inure to the plaintiff from the 5 [obtained] information or plaintiff intends to protect a private interest, . . . an award of attorney’s
6 fees is not recoverable.” Id. Conversely, “where plaintiff is indigent or a nonprofit public interest
7 group, an award of attorney’s fees furthers the FOIA policy of expanding access to government 8 information.” Id. Ninth Circuit precedent instructs courts evaluating these two factors that they 9 “should generally award fees if the complainant’s interest in the information sought was . . .
10 public-oriented.” Long, 932 F.2d at 1316 (quoting Church of Scientology, 700 F.2d at 496 n.6).

11           In its Opposition, the EPA argues that Plaintiffs had ulterior motives in seeking 12 information about Luminant. Opp’n at 14. Specifically, the EPA asserts that Plaintiffs’ FOIA 13 request was initiated for the purpose of pursuing civil action against Luminant, and that Plaintiffs 14 abused FOIA by using it as a tool for civil discovery. Id. at 14-15. The EPA further suggests that 15 Plaintiffs’ litigation history with Luminant establishes an incentive to seek judicial relief for their 16 own commercial benefit. Id. at 14.

17           In response, Plaintiffs contend that the FOIA request was used as an investigatory tool to 18 determine compliance with the CAA. Reply at 7. Plaintiffs assert that there is no private 19 commercial benefit to be gained by providing the public with information to which it has a right.
20 Id. at 8. Plaintiffs further assert that there is nothing improper about using information they 21 obtained that they may not have otherwise had access to via the discovery process. Id. at 7.

22           “The Ninth Circuit has held, where a plaintiff is a ‘nonprofit public interest group, an 23 award of attorney’s fees furthers the FOIA policy of expanding access to government 24 information.’” Am. Civil Liberties Union of N. Cal. v. Drug Enforcement Agency, 2012 WL 25 5951312, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 8, 2012) (citing Church of Scientology, 700 F.2d at 494). In 26 contrast, the commercial benefit factor weighs heavily against a fee award when the plaintiff 27 “undertook [the] FOIA request for decidedly commercial purposes.” Hersh & Hersh v. U.S. Dep’t 28 of Health and Human Servs., 2008 WL 2725497, at *2 (N.D. Cal. July 10, 2008) (denying a fee

1 award where the plaintiff used FOIA to obtain documents solely for the purpose of litigating a 2 separate private lawsuit against a third party company).

3 Here, the Court finds that Plaintiffs do not have any commercial interests in the documents 4 requested. Sierra Club is an environmental organization dedicated to educating the public on 5 health problems that arise from environmental pollutants. Compl. ¶ 9. EIP is a nonprofit 6 organization that oversees compliance of environmental laws. Id. ¶ 10. Further, Plaintiffs were 7 not pursuing a separate private lawsuit against Luminant at the time they initiated the FOIA 8 request. To allege that Plaintiffs intended civil action at the outset of their FOIA request, without 9 supporting evidence, is speculation. Thus, as the EPA has provided no evidence supporting its 10 assertion that Plaintiffs have received a commercial benefit from their FOIA request, the Court 11 finds that these factors weigh in favor of Plaintiffs' entitlement to attorney's fees and costs.

12 3. Reasonable Basis in Law

13 In analyzing the third factor, courts consider "whether the government's withholding of the 14 records sought had a reasonable basis in law." Church of Scientology, 700 F.2d at 492. The 15 denial of a FOIA request must have a colorable basis in law and not merely for the purpose of 16 frustrating the requester. Rosenfeld v. U.S. Dep't of Justice, 904 F. Supp. 2d 988 (N.D. Cal. 2012)
17 (citations omitted). The burden is on the government to demonstrate that its conduct is reasonable.
18 Davy, 550 F.3d at 1162-63.

19 In their Motion, Plaintiffs argue that the EPA unlawfully refused to provide an estimated 20 completion date for the FOIA request. Mot. at 14. Plaintiffs further argue that EPA's failure to 21 describe the type of information contained within the targeted documents frustrated their attempts 22 to narrow the scope of the request. Id.

23 In its Opposition, the EPA maintains that it did not withhold documents, and any delay that 24 occurred was a result of Luminant's confidentiality claim. Opp'n at 15. The EPA argues it 25 needed to allow time for Luminant to substantiate its claim, which in turn resulted in an initial 26 denial of Plaintiffs' claim. Id. at 15-16. The EPA further argues that the records sought were 27 voluminous and that deciphering which records were confidential was a labor-intensive and time-
28 consuming process, which was done with limited staff resources. Id. at 16. Additionally, the EPA

1 claims its efforts were stifled by Plaintiffs’ unwillingness to narrow their claim to help expedite 2 the process. Id.

3 In their Reply, Plaintiffs argue that they did not refuse to narrow the scope of their FOIA
4 request. Reply at 9. Plaintiffs assert their attempt to narrow the scope was met with the EPA’s 5 unwillingness to describe the nature and content of the responsive documents. Id. They further 6 assert that the EPA halted processing of the FOIA request by falsely relying on a claim that 7 Plaintiffs failed to submit a fee waiver request. Id.

8 Based on the record before it, the Court finds that the EPA’s initial response was in 9 accordance with the statute,<sup>6</sup> in that it fell within the allotted time period. The EPA received 10 Plaintiffs’ FOIA request on February 25, 2010, and responded on March 23, 2010. Jt. Stmt. ¶ 2.
11 In its response, the EPA requested an extension<sup>7</sup> due to “the need to search for, collect and 12 appropriately examine a voluminous amount of separate and distinct records involved in 13 [Plaintiffs’] request.” Id. Again, the EPA responded within the specified time period, informing 14 Plaintiffs on April 7, 2010 that their request would be initially denied because Luminant claimed 15 the documents in question were classified as CBI. Id. The EPA properly withheld the information 16 originating from Luminant in order to determine the validity of Luminant’s confidentiality claim, 17 pursuant to FOIA exemption four.<sup>8</sup>

18 There is no dispute that the EPA was under an obligation to substantiate Luminant’s 19 confidentiality claim. Regardless of which type of confidentiality is asserted, the focus should 20 always be on whether the source of the information spoke with the understanding of

22 <sup>6</sup> 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(A) requires that “[e]ach agency, upon any request for the records made . . .
23 shall determine within 20 days (excepting Saturdays, Sundays, and legal public holidays) after the 24 receipt of any such request whether to comply with such request and shall immediately notify the 25 person making such request of such determination and the reasons therefor, and the right of such 26 person to appeal to the head of the agency any adverse determination.”

27 <sup>7</sup> 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(B)(i) prescribes that in “unusual circumstances . . . the time limits 28 prescribed in . . . clause (i) . . . of subparagraph (A) may be extended by written notice to the 29 person making such request setting forth the unusual circumstances for such extension and the 30 date on which a determination is expected to be dispatched. No such notice shall specify a date 31 that would result in an extension for more than ten working days.”

32 <sup>8</sup> EPA relies on exemption 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4), which reads, “[t]his section does not apply to 33 matters that are trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and 34 privileged or confidential.”

1 confidentiality, not whether the document is generally thought to be confidential. Inst. for Policy
2 Studies v. C.I.A., 885 F. Supp. 2d 120, 151 (D.D.C. 2012) (citing U.S. Dep't of Justice v. Landano, 3 508 U.S. 165, 172 (1993)). However, the Court finds that the EPA acted unreasonably when it
4 failed to inform Plaintiffs of an estimated completion date while it substantiated Luminant's 5 confidentiality claim. Although there is no definitive deadline under FOIA exemption four, this 6 does not mean the exemption is permanent in nature. Africa Fund v. Mosbacher, 1993 WL 7 183736, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. May 26, 1993). In substantiating Luminant's claim, the EPA was 8 statutorily obligated to aid Plaintiffs in expediting their FOIA request.<sup>9</sup> While the Court 9 recognizes the EPA's challenge in reviewing the voluminous records, the statute cannot be 10 construed to provide an indefinite period for substantiating a confidentiality claim. Additionally, 11 the EPA acted unreasonably in failing to communicate and work with Plaintiffs to create an agreed 12 upon completion date.

13 Prior to filing the original FOIA request, Plaintiffs were working informally with the EPA 14 in an effort to obtain information related to Luminant's compliance with the CAA. See Levin 15 Decl. in Supp. of Pls.' Mot. for Summ. J. ¶¶ 5-7, Dkt. No. 35. Plaintiffs attempted, through 16 informal dealings dating back to May 2009, to obtain the documents informally from the EPA and 17 directly from Luminant. Id. ¶ 6. After the informal dealings failed, Plaintiffs brought a formal 18 FOIA request. Id. ¶ 8. After repeated efforts on the part of Plaintiffs to communicate with the 19 EPA, an estimated completion date for their request was still undetermined. See Bahr Decl. in 20 Supp. of Pls.' Mot. for Summ. J. ¶¶ 8-9, Dkt. No. 33. After issuing the initial denial letter, the 21 EPA directed Plaintiffs to its website to check the status of their request. Plaintiffs repeatedly 22 accessed the status website and were unable to ascertain an estimated date because their request 23 number was unlisted. Id. ¶ 9, Ex. E. On June 8, 2010, Plaintiffs were informed that the EPA was 24 denying their FOIA request. Second Harrison Decl. ¶ 6. From that date until they filed their

25 _____
26 <sup>9</sup> 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(B)(ii) instructs that "the agency shall notify the person making the request 27 if the request cannot be processed within the time limit specified un that clause and shall provide 28 the person an opportunity to limit the scope of the request so that it may be processed within that time limit or an opportunity to arrange with the agency an alternative time frame for processing the request or a modified request. To aid the requester, each agency shall make available its FOIA Liaison, who shall assist in the resolution of any disputes between the requester and the agency."

1 Complaint in February 2011, Plaintiffs made repeated efforts to communicate with EPA to 2 expedite their requests. Bahr Decl. ¶ 7.

3 Given this background, the Court finds that the EPA did not provide Plaintiffs with 4 sufficient information or support to aid in their efforts to expedite Plaintiffs' request. Further, the 5 documents that the EPA did provide to Plaintiffs were so heavily redacted that Plaintiffs could not 6 determine the subject matter to which they should narrow the scope of their request. See Simmons
7 Decl., Ex. 2, Dkt. No. 29. Additionally, Plaintiffs' attempts to check the status of their FOIA 8 request online were unfruitful because their FOIA case was unlisted on the EPA's website. Thus, 9 after eight months of unsuccessful attempts to communicate with the EPA regarding the status of 10 their FOIA request, Plaintiffs were warranted in bringing suit. Campaign for Responsible 11 Transplantation, 593 F. Supp. 2d at 245 (finding agency's eight month delay was unreasonable).

12 Based on this analysis, the Court concludes the EPA has failed to meet its burden of 13 showing an objectively reasonable basis in law for the delay. Davy, 550 F.3d at 1163 ("failing to 14 explain the basis for deferring its response" to a FOIA request "is exactly the kind of behavior the 15 provision was created to combat"). Therefore, this factor also weighs in favor of Plaintiffs, and 16 the Court finds that they are entitled to an award of attorneys' fees and costs.

17 D. Reasonableness of Fee Request

18 Having concluded that Plaintiffs are "both eligible for and entitled to recover fees, the 19 award must be given and the only room for discretion concerns the reasonableness of the amount 20 requested." Long, 932 F.2d at 1314. In making this assessment, the Court turns to Plaintiffs' fee 21 bill and scrutinizes the "reasonableness of (a) the number of hours expended and (b) the hourly fee 22 claimed. If these two figures are reasonable, then there is a 'strong presumption' that their 23 product, the lodestar figure, represents a reasonable award." Id. at 1313-14 (internal quotation 24 marks omitted). The Ninth Circuit has instructed the Court to "provide a detailed account of how 25 it arrives at appropriate figures for the number of hours reasonably expended and a reasonable 26 hourly rate." Id. (internal citations and quotations omitted). However, in light of the fact that 27 "awarding attorneys' fees to prevailing parties . . . is a tedious business," the court "should 28 normally grant the award in full" if the party opposing the fee request "cannot come up with

1 specific reasons for reducing the fee request.” Moreno v. City of Sacramento, 534 F.3d 1106, 2 1116 (9th Cir. 2008).

3 Plaintiffs have submitted several declarations in support of their fees request. See Dkt.
4 Nos. 78-83, 96, 108. The information contained in the declarations can be summarized as follows:

5 David A. Bahr

- 6 • 2010: 0.4 hours at $500 per hour = $200.00
- 7 • 2011: 39.5 hours at $550 per hour = $21,725.00
- 8 • 2012: 118.1 hours at $575 per hour = $67,907.50
- 9 • 2013: 27.1 hours at $600 per hour = $16,260.00
- 10 • 2014: 73 hours at $650 per hour = $47,450.00

11 Total Hours: 258.1                      Total Fees Requested: $153,542.50

12 Elena Saxonhouse

- 13 • 2011: 5.5 hours at $350 per hour = $1,925.00
- 14 • 2012: 53.1 hours at $400 per hour = $21,240.00
- 15 • 2013: 16 hours at $425 per hour = $6,800.00

16 Total Hours:74.6                      Total Fees Requested:$29,965.00

17 Kathleen Krust (Paralegal)

- 18 • 16.5 hours at $150 per hour = $2,475.00

19 Plaintiffs also request costs totaling $1,923.56. Thus, Plaintiffs seek a total award of 20 $187,906.06.

21 Plaintiffs maintain that the hourly rates claimed by counsel are those charged by attorneys 22 of comparable skill, experience, and reputation in this community for similar work. Mot. at 15.
23 They argue that the hours they are claiming are conservative and that they have applied 24 appropriate “billing judgment,” deleting approximately 24% of the total time actually expended by 25 Plaintiffs’ legal team in this case. Id. at 20.

26 The EPA objects to Plaintiffs’ fee request as unreasonable, arguing that they “did not 27 accomplish anything worthy of an award for attorneys’ fees,” and “have included multiple 28 categories of hours that are not compensable under the FOIA.” Opp’n at 20.

1. Number of Hours Expended

For the purposes of calculating the ‘lodestar’ figure, the Court has discretion in determining the number of hours reasonably expended on a case. Chalmers, 796 F.2d at 1212; see

1 also Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 437 (1983) (stating that a district court has discretion in 2 determining the amount of a fee award which is “appropriate in view of the district court’s 3 superior understanding of the litigation and the desirability of avoiding frequent appellate review 4 of what essentially are factual matters”). The fee applicant bears the burden of “documenting the 5 appropriate hours expended” in the litigation and therefore must “submit evidence supporting the 6 hours worked.” Hensley, 461 U.S. at 433, 437. Reasonably expended time is generally time that 7 “could reasonably have been billed to a private client.” Moreno, 534 F.3d at 1111. To this end, 8 the applicant must exercise “sound billing judgment” regarding the number of hours worked, and a 9 court should exclude from a fee applicant’s initial fee calculation hours that were not “reasonably 10 expended,” such as those incurred from overstaffing, or “hours that are excessive, redundant, or 11 otherwise unnecessary.” Hensley, 461 U.S. at 433.

12 Given the scope of this case and the detailed nature of the billing records submitted by 13 Plaintiffs’ counsel, the number of hours proposed by Plaintiffs for inclusion in the initial lodestar 14 figure appears reasonable. Accordingly, the Court turns to the EPA’s objections.

15 a. Waiver Issue, Settlement, and Time Spent Pursuing Luminant’s Involvement

16 As part of their request, Plaintiffs seek $4,845 (9.4 hours) for a “Fee Waiver Issue” and 17 $64,170 (141.1 hours) for fees attributed to “Settlement.” Bahr Decl., Ex. C. The EPA argues 18 that the Court should exclude this as “nonproductive time” because it did not result in furthering 19 the lawsuit in any way and was “expended on issues on which plaintiff did not prevail.” Opp’n at 20 20-21. The EPA maintains that the settlement agreement clearly states that the settlement does not 21 deem either of the Plaintiffs a “prevailing party” for purposes of attorneys’ fees under FOIA. Id.
22 at 21. However, as discussed above, the Court finds that Plaintiffs obtained relief through the 23 parties’ written agreement, and therefore, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(E)(ii), Plaintiffs have 24 “substantially prevailed” under FOIA.

25 The EPA also argues that Plaintiffs should not be reimbursed for time pursuing Luminant 26 to be involved in the case. Opp’n at 21. However, the EPA does not dispute that all parties agreed 27 to try to involve Luminant in the settlement efforts so that information about what was in the 28 documents could be shared more freely, thereby speeding a narrowed request and facilitating

1 settlement. Bahr Suppl. Decl. ¶ 4. The EPA agreed with this approach, but Luminant ultimately 2 refused to participate. Id. Thus, although ultimately unsuccessful, it does not appear that these 3 negotiations were nonproductive time. Moreover, time spent on negotiations—even if 4 unsuccessful and even with third parties—is still recoverable. Sorenson v. Concannon, 161 F.
5 Supp. 2d 1164, 1169 (D. Or. 2001) (“the federal defendant asks this court to assume, contrary to 6 common sense, that the extensive settlement negotiations between plaintiffs and the state yielded 7 nothing of use to the ultimate resolution of the litigation. I decline[ ] to make that assumption.”);
8 see also Richardson v. Rest. Mktg. Assocs., Inc., 527 F. Supp. 690, 700 n.5 (N.D. Cal. 1981)
9 (“Defendants also argue that time spent on settlement negotiations not be allowed. In light of the 10 strong public policy favoring settlement, the court considers this argument to be without merit.”).

11 Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiffs’ request for fees related to the waiver issue and 12 settlement are reasonable.

13 b. Post-Production Document Review

14 Next, the EPA argues that the Court should deduct $7,980 (25.4 hours) from fees requested 15 by Plaintiffs for the time spent reviewing documents after they were produced. Opp’n at 21-22;
16 Bahr Decl., Ex. A at 24 and Ex. B at 1-2. Specifically, the EPA argues that even if the Court 17 determines that Plaintiffs prevailed on their FOIA procedural claim, the time spent reviewing the 18 documents requested is not related to the claim on which they prevailed. Opp’n at 21. The EPA 19 contends that such review is post-relief activity, separate from litigation. Id. at 21-22.

20 The Court agrees that Plaintiffs are not entitled to recover for time spent reviewing the 21 documents they instituted this lawsuit to obtain. As Plaintiffs received, at least in part, the relief 22 they sought when the EPA produced the documents, the time they expended reviewing the 23 documents was is properly characterized as post-relief activity, separate from the litigation. See 24 Citizens for Responsibility & Ethics in Wash. v. U.S. Dep’t of Justice, 825 F. Supp. 2d 226, 231 25 (D.D.C. 2011) (Review of documents “is simply the price of making [a FOIA] request.”); see also 26 Steenland v. C.I.A., 555 F. Supp. 907, 911 (W.D.N.Y. 1983) (compensation for work performed 27 after records were released “would assess a penalty against defendants which is clearly 28 unwarranted”).

1 Plaintiffs maintain that the Court should permit fees for the time incurred reviewing the 2 documents because it “was directly in support of the litigation and more specifically, the 3 settlement efforts.” Reply at 12. However, Plaintiffs provide no authority in support of their 4 position. Regardless, it is undisputed that Plaintiffs would have had to expend this time if the EPA 5 timely produced the documents without litigation; “the cost of reviewing documents produced in 6 response to a FOIA request is simply the price of making such a request.” Citizens for 7 Responsibility & Ethics in Wash., 825 F. Supp. 2d at 231. Therefore, the Court finds that 8 Plaintiffs should not recover the $7,980 they claim for reviewing the documents after they were 9 produced.

10 c. Reduction to Account for Plaintiffs’ FOIA Claims

11 The EPA argues that the Court should reduce any award because only Counts I and II of 12 Plaintiffs’ Complaint are eligible for recovery under FOIA. Opp’n at 22. In their Complaint, 13 Plaintiffs brought three causes of action, the first two under FOIA and the third under the APA.
14 Compl. ¶¶ 39-65. Even if Plaintiffs prevailed on their FOIA claims, the EPA argues that Plaintiffs 15 are not eligible for attorneys’ fees under one fee statute for claims brought under another statute.
16 Opp’n at 22. The Court agrees. See Forest Park II v. Hadley, 408 F.3d 1052, 1059-60 (8th Cir.
17 2005) (success on a Declaratory Judgment Act claim did not qualify for an award of attorneys’ 18 fees under civil rights fee shifting statute, 42 U.S.C. § 1988). However, the EPA does not cite to 19 any billing records from Plaintiffs that are specific to the APA claim.

20 Further, the Court recognizes that in litigation that involves more than one claim, 21 “unrelated claims [must] be treated as if they have been raised in separate lawsuits, and therefore 22 no fee may be awarded for services on unsuccessful claim.” Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434-35.
23 However, in some cases

24 claims for relief will involve a common core of facts or will be 25 based on related legal theories. Much of counsel’s time will be 26 devoted generally to the litigation as a whole, making it difficult to 27 divide the hours expended on a claim-by-claim basis. Such a 28 lawsuit cannot be viewed as a series of discrete claims. Instead the district court should focus on the significance of the overall relief obtained by the plaintiff in relation to the hours reasonably expended on the litigation.

1 Id. at 435. Here, the Court finds that Plaintiffs’ claims for relief involve such a common core of 2 facts, and counsels’ time was devoted generally to the litigation as a whole, with no billing
3 requests related specifically to the APA claim. As such, the EPA’s argument is without merit.

4 d. Media Relations

5 The EPA argues that the Court should not permit Plaintiffs to recover fees charged in 6 connection with media relations. Opp’n at 23 (citing Bahr Decl., Ex. A at 11 (requesting 0.2 hours
7 for “press inquiry re. EPA’s answer and background info; rev. answer/exhibit re same” and 0.2
8 hours for “Exchange email w/Elena S. re. her contact w/media and FOIA’s deadline provisions 9 and EPA’s regs. re. confidentiality determinations.”)). However, courts have found such time
10 compensable if, as here, it was incurred to further a client’s litigation goals. See, e.g., Bullfrog 11 Films, Inc. v. Catto, 815 F. Supp. 338, 344 (C.D. Cal. 1993) (time spent speaking with the press to 12 further a client’s litigation goals “was legitimately billed to the case and is reasonable”).

13 e. Joint Prosecution Agreement

14 Plaintiffs also billed 0.4 hours for draft joint prosecution agreements between Plaintiffs, 15 the EPA, and Luminant. Bahr Decl., Ex. A at 32-33. The EPA argues that these efforts were not 16 useful nor necessary to advance the litigation in this case. Opp’n at 23. However, as discussed
17 above, the EPA does not dispute that all parties agreed to try to involve Luminant in the settlement 18 efforts so that information about what was in the documents could be shared more freely, thereby 19 speeding a narrowed request and facilitating settlement. Bahr Suppl. Decl. ¶ 4. As such, the 20 Court finds that this nominal amount of time was reasonably and necessarily incurred, and the 21 EPA offers no rationale to support its exclusion from a fee award.

22 f. New FOIA Request

23 Plaintiffs seek 2.7 hours related to drafting the new FOIA request as part of the parties’ 24 settlement agreement. Bahr Decl., Ex. A at 41-42. The EPA again argues that these efforts were 25 not useful nor necessary to advance the litigation in this case. Opp’n at 23. However, as Plaintiffs 26 point out, “the second FOIA was an integral component of the settlement of this matter and sought 27 the same nature of information requested by the initial FOIA request.” Reply at 13. As such, the 28 Court finds that this time was reasonably incurred.

1                   g.       Fees Related to Summary Judgment Motion and Reply

2           The EPA argues that Plaintiffs are seeking reimbursement for too many hours related to 3 their summary judgment motion, noting that Plaintiffs charged 36.4 hours for a motion that dealt 4 with only one “remarkably simple” legal question—whether the EPA was processing quickly 5 enough the records responsive to Plaintiffs’ request. Opp’n at 23.

6           Mr. Bahr billed a total of 61.8 hours under the category “Motion for Summary Judgment 7 and Reply,” while Elena Saxonhouse billed 5.7 hours. Bahr Decl., Ex. C. Many of the billing 8 entries simply state “Research for MOSJ” or “Draft MOSJ.” Id., Ex. A at 19, 21-23. From these 9 entries, it is difficult for the Court to determine the reasonableness of time spent on varying issues.
10 Despite this, Plaintiffs failed to provide any further explanation for the billing entries in response 11 to the EPA’s Opposition. Given Mr. Bahr’s experience as an attorney, having “drafted, reviewed 12 and submitted countless FOIA requests and appeals,” see id. ¶ 9, it is at least questionable that he 13 would spend as much time as he billed for drafting the motion. See, e.g., Audubon Soc. of 14 Portland v. U.S. Natural Res. Conservation Serv., 2012 WL 4829189, at *7 (D. Or. Oct. 8, 2012)
15 aff’d sub nom. Audubon Soc’y of Portland v. Natural Res. Conservation Serv., 573 F. App’x 640
16 (9th Cir. 2014) (deducting 20 of 34 hours claimed for Mr. Bahr’s work in drafting summary 17 judgment motion in FOIA case). As Plaintiffs failed to provide any further information regarding 18 these billing entries, the Court finds a reduction to 25 hours appropriate.

19           The same is true of Plaintiffs’ Reply brief. As the EPA notes, Plaintiffs request 21.5 hours 20 of attorney time for its preparation, but the Reply is approximately 10 pages and addresses many 21 of the same arguments as in Plaintiffs’ motion. See Dkt. No. 43. Accordingly, the Court finds a 22 reduction to 15 hours appropriate. See, e.g., Audubon Soc. of Portland, 2012 WL 4829189, at *7
23 (deducting 7 of 14 hours for Mr. Bahr’s work in drafting reply brief). Thus, the Court shall deduct 24 a total of 17.9 hours related to summary judgment briefing. As Mr. Bahr’s 2012 billing rate was 25 $575 per hour, this amounts to a reduction of $10,292.50.

26                   h.       Overall Exercise of Billing Judgment

27           Finally, the Court looks to Plaintiffs’ overall exercise of billing judgment. “Counsel for 28 the prevailing party should make a good faith effort to exclude from a fee request hours that are

1 excessive, redundant, or otherwise unnecessary, just as a lawyer in private practice ethically is 2 obligated to exclude such hours from his fee submission.” Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434. “[T]he fee 3 applicant bears the burden of establishing entitlement to an award and documenting the 4 appropriate hours expended and hourly rates. The applicant should exercise ‘billing judgment’ 5 with respect to hours worked.” Id. at 437.

6 Here, Plaintiffs have shown that they exercised good billing judgment by deducting 111.8
7 hours from the amount billed in this case. Bahr Sec. Suppl. Decl. ¶ 5. As such, the Court finds 8 that Plaintiffs have demonstrated that they exercised appropriate billing judgment and eliminated 9 inefficiencies. Therefore, no percentage reduction is necessary. See Walker v. U.S. Dep’t of Hous.
10 & Urban Dev., 99 F.3d 761, 770 (5th Cir. 1996) (“The proper remedy when there is no evidence 11 of billing judgment is to reduce the hours awarded by a percentage intended to substitute for the 12 exercise of billing judgment.”); see also Moreno, 534 F.3d at 1112 (a “district court can impose a 13 small reduction, no greater than 10 percent—a “haircut”—based on its exercise of discretion and 14 without a more specific explanation”).

15 i. Summary

16 Based on the analysis above, the Court finds that the number of hours proposed by 17 Plaintiffs for inclusion in the initial lodestar figure is reasonable, except for a total of $18,272.50
18 related to charges for reviewing the documents after they were produced and Plaintiffs’ summary
19 judgment motion and reply briefs. Accordingly, of the $185,982.50 Plaintiffs claim, the Court 20 finds $167,710.00 is a reasonable amount.

21 2. Hourly Fee Claimed

22 In assessing a reasonable hourly rate for the lodestar figure, courts should consider the 23 prevailing market rate in the community for similar services by lawyers of reasonably comparable 24 skill, experience, and reputation. Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 895-96 and n.11 (1984). The 25 relevant community for purposes of determining the prevailing market rate is generally the “forum 26 in which the district court sits.” Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin., Inc., 523 F.3d 973, 979 (9th Cir.
27 2008). “Affidavits of the plaintiffs’ attorney and other attorneys regarding prevailing fees in the 28 community, and rate determinations in other cases, particularly those setting a rate for the

1 plaintiffs’ attorney, are satisfactory evidence of the prevailing market rate.” United Steelworkers
2 of Am. v. Phelps Dodge Corp., 896 F.2d 403, 407 (9th Cir. 1990). “The defendant may introduce 3 rebuttal evidence in support of a lower hourly rate.” Sorenson v. Mink, 239 F.3d 1140, 1145 (9th 4 Cir. 2001).

5 Here, Plaintiffs claim that reasonable attorney rates for this case range from $350 to $650
6 per hour. Mot. at 20. David Bahr’s rates are $500 for 2010, $550 for 2011, $575 for 2012, $600 7 for 2013, and $650 for 2014. Elena Saxonhouse’s rates are $350 for 2011, $400 for 2012, and 8 $425 for 2013. Paralegal Kathleen Krust’s rate is $150.

9 The EPA argues that Plaintiffs are seeking reimbursement at an inflated billing rate.
10 Opp’n at 24. As to Mr. Bahr, the EPA notes that his billing statements demonstrate he bills his 11 client at the rate of $150 per hour, not the $500-$650 Plaintiffs seek. Id. It maintains that 12 Plaintiffs are not entitled to seek reimbursement for amounts greater than they were billed and are 13 not entitled to retroactively increase the amount billed because they have an opportunity to apply a 14 fee-shifting statute. Id. The EPA also notes that Plaintiffs do not provide a survey of the local 15 area or whether the fee agreement was contingent. Id. at 25.

16 The burden is on the fee applicant to produce satisfactory evidence “that the requested 17 rates are in line with those prevailing in the community for similar services by lawyers of 18 reasonably comparable skill, experience, and reputation.” Blum, 465 U.S. at 896. Plaintiffs have 19 submitted declarations establishing that David Bahr has 24 years of environmental and FOIA-20 related litigation experience, Elena Saxonhouse has practiced environmental law for eight years, 21 and Kathleen Krust has ten years of experience as a paralegal. Bahr Decl. ¶¶ 8-9, Saxonhouse 22 Decl. ¶¶ 7, 13. They have also submitted declarations from four California litigators with years of 23 experience in both private and public interest practices—James Wheaton, Mike Axline, Brian 24 Gaffney and Donald Mooney. All four attest that the rates charged by Plaintiffs’ counsel are 25 within the range of reasonable hourly rates awarded to counsel of similar skill and experiences in 26 the San Francisco legal market and in court awards. Axline Decl. ¶ 7, Dkt. No. 80 (requested rates 27 are “commensurate with the rates charged by other lawyers” with comparable experience or even 28 “modest” by comparison); Gaffney Decl. ¶¶ 10-11, Dkt. No. 81 (requested rates are “consistent

1 with attorneys of similar skill and experience” and are thus “reasonable and appropriate for 2 Plaintiff’s counsel in the San Francisco, California legal market”); Mooney Decl. ¶ 17, Dkt. No.
 3 82 (averring that requested rates represent the “fair-market value” for the San Francisco region); 4 Wheaton Decl. ¶ 15, Dkt. No. 83 (“The hourly rates requested by plaintiffs for their attorneys are 5 comfortably within or even below the ranges for reasonable rates charged by and awarded to 6 attorneys of comparable experience in federal and state courts in the San Francisco legal market 7 for the relevant years.”). “Affidavits of the plaintiffs’ attorney and other attorneys regarding 8 prevailing fees in the community, and rate determinations in other cases, particularly those setting 9 a rate for the plaintiffs’ attorney, are satisfactory evidence of the prevailing market rate.” United 10 Steelworkers, 896 F.2d at 407.

11 Further, judges in this district routinely award attorneys’ fees in similar cases at rates equal 12 or comparable to Plaintiffs’ request. See, e.g., Rosenfeld v. U.S. Dep’t of Justice, 903 F. Supp. 2d 13 859, 878 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (awarding fees at up to $700); Rosenfeld, 904 F. Supp. 2d at 1004 14 (same); Armstrong v. Brown, 805 F. Supp. 2d 918, 921 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (award of $575); Hajro v.
 15 U.S. Citizenship & Immigration Servs., 900 F. Supp. 2d 1034, 1054 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (awarding 16 fees at up to $625).

17 Although the EPA argues that Plaintiffs are seeking reimbursement at an inflated billing 18 rate, it has failed to introduce any rebuttal evidence in support of a lower hourly rate. Mink, 239
 19 F.3d at 1145; see also Gates v. Deukmejian, 987 F.2d 1392, 1397-98 (9th Cir. 1992) (Defendant 20 bears the “burden of rebuttal that requires submission of evidence . . . challenging the accuracy 21 and reasonableness of the . . . facts asserted by the prevailing party in its submitted affidavits.”).
 22 Although the EPA argues that the Court should not award Mr. Bahr his requested rates because his 23 billing statements demonstrate he bills his client at the rate of $150 per hour, this position was 24 directly addressed—and rejected—by the United States Supreme Court in Blum, wherein the 25 Court held that “Congress did not intend the calculation of fee awards to vary depending on 26 whether plaintiff was represented by private counsel or by a nonprofit legal services organization.” 27 465 U.S. at 894-95; see also Hensley, 461 U.S. at 447 (“judges awarding fees must make certain 28 that attorneys are paid the full value that their efforts would receive on the open market.”); Prison

1 Legal News v. Schwarzenegger, 608 F.3d 446, 455 (9th Cir. 2010).

2 Thus, because the EPA has not rebutted Plaintiffs’ declarations establishing the 3 reasonableness of the requested rates, the Court finds that Plaintiffs may recover fees at the market 4 rates they seek.

5 3. Costs

6 Plaintiffs also claim $1,923.56 in costs. Bahr Sec. Suppl. Decl. ¶ 9, Ex. M. The EPA does 7 not object to Plaintiffs’ request for costs, and the Courts finds Plaintiffs have provided adequate 8 documentation in support of their request. Accordingly, the Court awards Plaintiffs $1,923.56 for 9 costs that were reasonably incurred.

10 V. CONCLUSION

11 For the reasons stated above, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have demonstrated both 12 eligibility and entitlement to an award of attorneys’ fees. The record in this case demonstrates that 13 they substantially prevailed and that all four Long factors in assessing entitlement to a fee award 14 under FOIA weigh in their favor. After careful review of Plaintiffs’ billing records, and having 15 adjusted the number of hours claimed as appropriate, the Court GRANTS Plaintiffs’ Motion for an 16 Award of Attorneys’ Fees and Costs, and awards Plaintiff a total of $169,633.56.
