JOY YOSHIOKA,

No. C-11-1625 EMC

Plaintiff,

v.

CHARLES SCHWAB CORPORATION, et al.,

Defendants.

ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR FINAL APPROVAL OF PROPOSED
CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT; DENYING MOTION FOR
ATTORNEY’S FEES AND INCENTIVE AWARD; DENYING MOTION FOR MANDATORY INTERVENTION; AND STAYING ACTION

(Docket Nos. 104, 45, 85)

On April 4, 2011, Plaintiff Joy Yoshioka brought suit on behalf of herself and a putative class of all current holders of against Charles Schwab Individual Retirement Accounts (“IRA”). She brought claims for violations of the California Consumer Legal Remedies Act (“CLRA”), the California Unfair Competition Law (“UCL”), breach of contract, and breach of fiduciary duty, seeking damages and declaratory relief. Compl., Docket No. 1. On September 8, 2011, the Court granted a motion for preliminary approval of the class action settlement and conditionally certified the class. Docket No. 44. Pending before the Court are the parties’ motion for final approval of class action settlement, Docket No. 104, one class member’s motion to intervene, Docket No. 85, and Plaintiff’s Counsel’s unopposed motion for attorney’s fees and an incentive award for Named Plaintiff, Docket No. 45. After considering the parties’ submissions, class members’ objections, and oral arguments, the Court hereby enters the following order.

1 I. FACTUAL & PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

2 Plaintiff's complaint on behalf of the class alleges violations of the CLRA, UCL, breach of 3 contract, breach of fiduciary duty, and declaratory relief. According to Defendants' records, the 4 putative class comprises over four million IRA account holders containing upwards of $384 billion 5 in assets. Mot. for Prelim. App. at 5 (citing Bakhtiari Decl. ¶ 4). Plaintiff alleges that, through their 6 standard IRA agreements, "Defendants take security interests in the assets of [the account holder], 7 causing premature distributions under IRS regulations." Compl. ¶ 1. Specifically, she alleges that 8 paragraphs 6 and 7 of the IRA account agreement "created liens and security interests in the assets in 9 the IRA and other investment accounts of the IRA holder, in favor of Defendants." Mot. for Prelim.
10 App. at 4. Paragraph 7, entitled Security for Indebtedness, states,

11 As security for the repayment of all present of future indebtedness 12 owed to us by any Schwab IRA account holder under the Account 13 Agreement or otherwise, each Schwab IRA account holder grants us a 14 continuing security interest in and lien on, and a right of setoff with 15 respect to, all securities and other property that are, now or in the 16 future, held, carried, or maintained for any purpose in or through the 17 Schwab IRA and, to the extent of this account holder's interest, in or 18 through any present or future Account with us or our affiliates in 19 which the account holder has an interest.

20 Compl. ¶ 8. Paragraph 6 of the IRA agreement, titled Payment of Indebtedness, states, 21 You agree to make payment of any indebtedness related to your 22 Account, including, but not limited to, any such indebtedness that 23 results from instructions provided to Schwab by you, your agent or 24 any attorney-in-fact under a power of attorney or Investment Advisor 25 authorized to make transactions in your Account. We may elect 26 anytime, with or without notice, to make any debit balance or other 27 obligation related to your Account immediately due and payable. We 28 may report any past-due account to a consumer and/pr securities credit agency.

29 Compl. ¶ 15. Plaintiff alleges that these paragraphs result in a "prohibited transaction" (defined by 30 26 U.S.C. § 4975(c)(1)(B) as the direct or indirect "lending of money or other extension of credit 31 between a plan and a disqualified person"), which causes an IRA account to lose its tax exempt 32 status under 26 U.S.C. § 408(e)(2). Compl. ¶¶ 8-17. Plaintiff's complaint seeks declaratory and 33 injunctive relief as well as restitution, disgorgement, actual and punitive damages, and an order 34 imposing a constructive trust. Compl. At 13-14.

1 Defendants deny the allegations, noting that the key provision (paragraph 7)of the agreement 2 at issue was deleted by December 31, 2010, and that the Schwab IRA Plan language protects against 3 the alleged prohibited transactions. Def’s Response to Obj., Docket No. 101, at 3. Defendants also 4 deny that Plaintiff or members of the putative class have suffered damages. Mot. for Prelim. App. at 5 5.

6 Prior to filing the complaint, Plaintiff sent a CLRA demand letter to Defendants pursuant to 7 Cal. Civ. Code § 1782(a)(2). Mot. for Prelim. App. at 5. The parties met and conferred at that point, 8 and subsequently engaged in informal discovery, including the release of information regarding the 9 number of Schwab IRA accounts, the IRA account agreement forms for the past five years, 10 “confirmation that Schwab never debited an IRA to satisfy a debt from another non-IRA account”; 11 and “confirmation that creditors had not utilized the alleged offending information as part of a 12 garnishment, attachment, or execution.” Id. at 5-6.

13 On May 9, 2011, the parties jointly stipulated to stay all proceedings so that they could 14 engage in mediation. Docket No. 10. The Court issued an order to that effect on May 24, 2011.
15 Docket No. 16. Defendants have never filed an answer in the litigation and there have been no 16 motions from either side.

17 On June 15, 2011, the parties began settlement negotiations with a mediator and entered into 18 an initial Stipulation of Settlement on the same day without negotiating attorney’s fees or incentive 19 awards. Mot. for Prelim. App. at 3. The parties later negotiated attorney’s fees and the incentive 20 award for Plaintiff Yoshioka, and the Settlement was finalized on July 25, 2011. Mot. for Prelim.
21 App. at 6.

22 The settlement class is defined as all current and former IRA account holders within the class 23 period between January 1, 2005, and the date of Final Judgment, excluding Defendants and any 24 entity in which Defendants have or had a controlling interest or that is a parent or subsidiary or is 25 controlled by Defendants. Settlement Agreement, Docket No. 43, Ex. A ¶ 1.18 (“Settlement 26 Agreement”). The final Settlement provides for amended account language as requested by Plaintiff.
27 Mot. for Prelim. App. at 3. Specifically, Defendants agreed to amend their IRA agreements to 28

1 retroactively¹ void any alleged problematic language as of the first date on which the individual 2 class member entered into an IRA account agreement. Id. The new language will state:

3 Any language in this Account Agreement or related agreements that 4 may conflict or be inconsistent with the Plan, including without 5 limitation Sections 5.2 or 5.8 of the Plan, or Sections 408 or 4975 of 6 the Internal Revenue Code, and the regulations thereunder, shall be 7 interpreted to be consistent and in compliance with the Plan and those 8 Sections of the Code and regulations thereunder. To the extent it is not 9 possible to interpret such language to be consistent and compliant with the Plan or these Code provisions and regulations, then such language shall be of no force or effect to the extent of such inconsistency or noncompliance. This Section shall be effective retroactive to the first date on which the agreement concerning the Schwab IRA was entered into by the Account Holder.

10 Settlement Agreement ¶ 2.1. This is the only relief offered; there is no monetary distribution to the 11 class.

12 Following preliminary approval of the Settlement, the Class received notice through a 13 regularly-scheduled Schwab email containing: the general terms of the settlement agreement, the 14 date of the Final Approval Hearing, a link to a website with frequently asked questions and the 15 stipulation of settlement, a toll free number for class members to call with questions about the 16 settlement, maintained by live trained operators, and information regarding members' rights to 17 object to the settlement. Settlement Agreement ¶ 4.1. Schwab tracked the number and nature of 18 calls to the hotline. *Id.*² Schwab will further send the amendment to all current account holders 19 within 90 days after the judgment becomes final. Id. ¶ 2.1; Mot. for Prelim. App. at 7. Class 20 Members agree to release all claims relating to the instant action and claims that entering into the 21 IRA agreement caused a prohibited transaction or distribution of the IRA. Settlement Agreement ¶

24
25 ¹ The Schwab IRA plan permits Schwab to make retroactive amendments to the Plan. Mot.
26 for Prelim. App. at 7 (“Under the terms of the Schwab IRA Plan, Schwab is permitted to make 27 retroactive amendments to the Plan, account agreement and related agreements to conform to applicable law, regulation or ruling, and Schwab and each IRA account holder are permitted to make amendments by agreement.”).

28 ² It does not appear that the parties have submitted any information to the Court regarding the nature and extent of any calls received to the hotline.

1 1.14.³ While

2 _____ 3 ³ “Released Claims” are defined as:

4 all claims (including Unknown Claims as defined in paragraph 1.21 5 hereof), demands, rights, liabilities and causes of action of every 6 nature and description whatsoever, known or unknown, contingent or 7 absolute, mature or immature, discoverable or undiscoverable, whether 8 concealed or hidden, suspected or unsuspected, which now exist, or 9 heretofore have existed, or which were asserted or which could have 10 been asserted by the Plaintiff or any Settlement Class Member against 11 the Defendants and their Related Parties based upon or arising out of 12 (a) the facts, transaction, events, occurrences, disclosures, statements, 13 acts, omissions or failures to act which were alleged in the Litigation 14 or (b) a claim that entering into a Schwab Individual Retirement 15 Account (“IRA”) agreement or related Schwab agreement, or any 16 amendments thereto, by the Plaintiff or any Settlement Class Member 17 caused a prohibited transaction or a distribution of an IRA account.

18 “Unknown Claims” are further defined in 1.21 as:

19 collectively any Released Claims that the Plaintiff or any Settlement 20 Class Member does not know or suspect to exist in his, her or its favor 21 at the time of the release of the Released Parties which, if known by 22 him, her or it, might have affected his, her or its settlement with and 23 release of the Released Parties, or might have affected his, her or its 24 decision not to object to this Settlement. With respect to any and all 25 Released Claims, the Settling Parties stipulate and agree that, upon the 26 Effective Date, Plaintiff shall expressly waive, and each of the 27 Settlement Class Members shall be deemed to have waived, and by 28 operation of the Judgment shall have waived, the provisions, rights, and benefits of California Civil Code Section 1542, which provides:

A general release does not extend to claims which the creditor does not know or suspect to exist in his or her favor at the time of executing the release, which if known by him or her must have materially affected his or her settlement with the debtor.

Plaintiff shall expressly waive and each of the Settlement Class Members shall be deemed to have waived, and by operation of the Judgment shall have, expressly waived any and all provisions, rights and benefits conferred by any law of any state or territory of the United States, or principle of common law, which is similar, comparable or equivalent to California Civil Code Section 1542.
Plaintiff and Settlement Class Members may hereafter discover facts in addition to of different from those which he, she or it now knows or believes to be true with respect to the subject matter of the Released Claims, but Plaintiff shall expressly, fully, finally and forever settle and release, and each Class Member, upon the Effective Date, shall be deemed to have, and by operation of the Judgment shall have, fully, finally, and forever settled and released, any and all Released Claims, known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, contingent or non-contingent, whether or not concealed or hidden, which now exist, or

1 Class Members had a right to object, they have no right to opt out. See Notice, Docket No. 23-1, 2 Exh. A-1, at 2. The Court has received and filed 36 letters from purported class members objecting 3 to the settlement or attempting to opt out, but four of those appear to be invalid as they are not from 4 valid class members.

5 II. DISCUSSION

6 A. The Proposed Settlement

7 If a proposed settlement agreement is binding on class members, as is the case here, the 8 Court “may approve it only after a hearing and on finding that it is fair, reasonable, and adequate.”
9 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1)(C). This Court has discretion to approve or deny a proposed settlement, and 10 the Court’s decision cannot be overturned absent a clear abuse of discretion. Hanlon v. Chrysler 11 Corp., 150 F.3d 1011, 1026-27 (9th Cir. 1998). However, the Court may not pick and choose 12 portions of a proposed agreement. Id. at 1026. As the Ninth Circuit has noted, “Settlement is the 13 offspring of compromise; the question . . . is not whether the final product could be prettier, smarter, 14 or snazzier, but whether it is fair, adequate, and free from collusion.” Id.

15 If the parties “reach a settlement agreement prior to class certification, the court is under an 16 obligation to ‘peruse the proposed compromise to ratify both the propriety of the certification and 17 the fairness of the settlement.’” Singer v. Becton Dickinson & Co., No. 08-CV-821-IEG, 2010 WL 18 2196104 (S.D. Cal. June 1, 2010) (quoting Staton v. Boeing Co., 327 F.3d 938, 952 (9th Cir. 2003)); 19 see also Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 620 (1997).

20 1. Class Certification

21 When evaluating whether approval is warranted for a proposed class settlement, the Court 22 must determine whether the class is proper for settlement purposes. Amchem Products, Inc. v.

23
24 _____ 25 heretofore have existed, upon any theory of law or equity now existing 26 or coming into existence in the future, including, but not limited to, 27 conduct which is negligent, intentional, with or without malice, or a 28 breach of any duty, law or rule, without regard to the subsequent discovery or existence of such different or additional facts. Plaintiff acknowledges, and the Settlement Class Members shall be deemed by operation of the Judgment to have acknowledged, that the foregoing waiver was separately bargained for and a key element of the Settlement of which this release is a part.

1 Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 620 (1997). “[A] district court need not inquire whether the case, if tried, 2 would present intractable management problems . . . for the proposal is that there be no trial.” Id.
3 (citations omitted). However, “other specifications of the Rule—those designed to protect absentees 4 by blocking unwarranted or overbroad class definitions—demand undiluted, even heightened, 5 attention in the settlement context.” Id.

6 In this case, Plaintiffs seek class certification pursuant to Rule 23(a) and (b)(2) of the Federal 7 Rules of Civil Procedure. Rule 23(a) permits Plaintiffs to sue as representatives of a class only if

- 8 (1) the class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable;
- 9 (2) there are questions of law or fact common to the class;
- 10 (3) the claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of the claims or 11 defenses of the class; and
- 12 (4) the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.

13 Failure to meet any of the criteria defeats the motion. Rutledge v. Elect. Hose & Rubber Co., 511 14 F.2d 668, 673 (9th Cir. 1975). In addition, a purported class must be certified under Rule 23(b) by 15 satisfying any one of its prongs. Plaintiffs seek certification under 23(b)(2), which permits a class if 16 “the party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds that apply generally to the class, 17 so that final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief is appropriate respecting the class as 18 a whole.”

19 a. 23(a)

20 i. Numerosity

21 Plaintiffs satisfy the numerosity requirement if “the class is so large that joinder of all 22 members is impracticable.” Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., 150 F.3d 1101, 1019 (9th Cir. 1998). In this 23 case, the purported class is made up of over four million Schwab IRA account holders. See Mot. for 24 Prelim. App. at 5. Plaintiffs easily meet the numerosity requirement. See Wang v. Chinese Daily 25 News, 231 F.R.D. 602, 607 (C.D. Cal. 2005) (100 or more plaintiffs leads to a presumption of 26 numerosity); Ikonen v. Hartz Mountain Corp., 122 F.R.D. 258, 262 (S.D. Cal. 1998) (finding a 27 purported class of forty members sufficient to satisfy numerosity).

28

1 ii. Commonality

2 Plaintiffs must demonstrate that there are “questions of law or fact common to the class” in 3 order to satisfy Rule 23(a)(2). This prong is subject to a “permissive[]” construction in the Ninth 4 Circuit. Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1019-20. Plaintiffs need not demonstrate that all questions are 5 common to the class; rather, it is sufficient if either “shared legal issues with divergent factual 6 predicates” OR “a common core of salient facts coupled with disparate legal remedies within the 7 class” are present. Id. However, plaintiffs must “demonstrate that the class members have suffered 8 the same injury,” not “merely that they have all suffered a violation of the same provision of law.”
9 Wal-Mart v. Dukes, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 2551 (2011). “Even a single [common] question” will suffice 10 to satisfy Rule 23(a). Id. at 2556.

11 Here, Plaintiffs satisfy the commonality requirement because they are each subject to the 12 same or similar allegedly unlawful IRA agreement provisions. See Mot. for Prelim. App. at 13. The 13 critical question posed by Plaintiffs is whether Schwab’s IRA provisions result in prohibited 14 transactions that negate the IRA’s tax exempt status. This question is common to all class members 15 and its answer would apply equally to all members of the class. See Dukes, 131 S. Ct. at 2551 16 (“What matters to class certification . . . is the capacity of a classwide proceeding to generate 17 common answers apt to drive the resolution of the litigation.”) (quotation omitted). Accordingly, 18 Plaintiffs have satisfied the commonality requirement.

19 iii. Typicality

20 Rule 23(a)(3) requires that the “claims or defenses of the representative parties [be] typical 21 of the claims or defenses of the class.” Courts assess typicality by determining “whether other 22 members have the same or similar injury, whether the action is based on conduct which is not unique 23 to the named plaintiffs, and whether other class members have been injured by the same course of 24 conduct.” Hanon v. Dataproducts Corp., 976 F.2d 497, 508 (9th Cir. 1992). Here, Plaintiffs satisfy 25 the typicality requirement because the same allegedly unlawful conduct on the part of Schwab – its 26 offending IRA agreement provisions – are at issue for the Named Plaintiff just as they are for the 27 class as a whole.

1 iv. Adequacy

2 Rule 23(a)(4) requires that the class representatives “fairly and adequately protect the 3 interests of the class.” “This factor requires: (1) that the proposed representative Plaintiffs do not 4 have conflicts of interest with the proposed class, and (2) that Plaintiffs are represented by qualified 5 and competent counsel.” Dukes, 603 F.3d at 614.

6 Here, Plaintiff Yoshioka satisfies the first factor because, apart from her proposed incentive 7 award, she will receive the same relief as the class as a whole and there is no apparent conflict of 8 interest between herself and the class. Mot. for Prelim. App. at 14; Cf. Amchem Products, Inc. v.
9 Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 594 (1997) (finding named class inadequate where currently-injured 10 plaintiffs would seek immediate payment and exposure-only plaintiffs would seek a long-term 11 compensation fund). She is also familiar with the IRA agreement provisions at issue, since they are 12 the same or similar as those pertaining to other class members, and can represent the interests of the 13 class. Mot. for Prelim. App. at 14; Cf. Kassover v. Computer Dep., 691 F. Supp. 1205, 1213 (D.
14 Minn. 1987) (finding inadequacy where “plaintiff admitted at several points he possesses ‘no facts’ 15 to support essential allegations in his complaint”). While Objector Schonbrun challenged her 16 adequacy on the basis of the fact that she is a current account holder and therefore cannot represent 17 former account holders, see Docket No. 90 at 2-3, he fails to explain how this renders her 18 inadequate. Indeed, the proposed relief purports to change all account agreements, including those 19 of former account holders. To the extent that only a prospective amendment is necessary or 20 permitted, Plaintiff Yoshioka would still possess an interest in common with other current and 21 former account holders in securing her pre-amendment assets to the extent possible. Mr. Garmong 22 also challenges the fact that she has not yet withdrawn from her IRA, but it is unclear how this 23 would render her an inadequate representative as she is still depending on the funds and subject to 24 the legal risks alleged in the complaint common to all class members. See Docket No. 85 at 5 ¶ 16.
25 In addition, as Class Counsel has pointed out, bankruptcy proceedings could render anyone’s IRA 26 subject to attachment if there was a prohibited transaction, regardless of the person’s age. See Mot.
27 for Final App. at 3. Mr. Garmong additionally questioned Ms. Yoshioka’s motives because she filed 28 suit soon after she opened her IRA account with Schwab. However, it is logical that a new

1 customer would notice alleged problems with Schwab’s account agreement language, as they would 2 be most likely to review the terms of their agreement at the time they are entering into said 3 agreement. The Court therefore concludes there is nothing in the record establishing she has any 4 conflict of interest with class members.

5 Regarding the second prong, Plaintiff is represented by competent counsel with substantial 6 experience in complex nationwide class action litigation. See Bakhtiari Decl., Docket No. 23, ¶¶ 8-7 13; Kirk Decl. Exh. A; Bakhtiari Decl., Docket No. 23-3, Exh. A; Berry Decl. Exh. A. Accordingly, 8 Plaintiffs have satisfied the adequacy criterion.

9 b. 23(b)(2)

10 Rule 23(b)(2) mandates class certification if “the party opposing the class has acted or 11 refused to act on grounds that apply generally to the class, so that final injunctive relief or 12 corresponding declaratory relief is appropriate respecting the class as a whole.” “The key to the 13 (b)(2) class is the indivisible nature of the injunctive or declaratory remedy warranted—the notion 14 that the conduct is such that it can be enjoined or declared unlawful only as to all of the class 15 members or as to none of them.” Dukes, 131 S. Ct. At 2557 (internal quotations omitted). Plaintiffs 16 satisfy the requirement in this case because the requested relief, and the relief to be provided 17 pursuant to the Settlement Agreement, consists of a single amendment to the IRA agreement that 18 would apply class-wide.⁴

19 2. Fairness of the Settlement

20 Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(e), “[t]he claims, issues, or defenses of a 21 certified class may be settled, voluntarily dismissed, or compromised only with the court’s 22 approval.” As the Ninth Circuit explained, “[t]he purpose of Rule 23(e) is to protect the unnamed 23 members of the class from unjust or unfair settlements affecting their rights.” In re Syncor ERISA 24 Litig., 516 F.3d 1095, 1100 (9th Cir. 2008). Accordingly, before a court approves a settlement it 25 must conclude that the settlement is “fundamentally fair, adequate and reasonable.” In re Heritage

26 27 ⁴ Though Plaintiffs’ complaint seeks money damages, the settlement does not. Therefore, 28 certification of the class under 23(b)(2) for purposes of settlement remains appropriate. See Dukes, 131 S. Ct. At 2557 (Rule 23(b)(2) “does not authorize class certification when each class member would be entitled to an individualized award of monetary damages”).

1 Bond Litig., 546 F.3d 667, 674-75 (9th Cir. 2008). Generally, the district court’s review of a class 2 action settlement is “extremely limited.” Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., 150 F.3d 1011, 1026 (9th Cir.
3 1998). The Court considers the settlement as a whole, rather than its components, and lacks the 4 authority to “delete, modify or substitute certain provision.” Id. (quoting Officers for Justice v.
5 Civil Serv. Comm’n of San Francisco, 688 F.2d 615, 630 (9th Cir.1982)). Rather, “[t]he settlement 6 must stand or fall in its entirety.” Id.

7 Before granting final approval, Hanlon identifies several factors the Court should consider in 8 evaluating a proposed settlement agreement:

9 [T]he strength of the plaintiffs’ case; the risk, expense, complexity, 10 and likely duration of further litigation; the risk of maintaining class 11 action status throughout the trial; the amount offered in settlement; the 12 extent of discovery completed and the stage of the proceedings; the experience and views of counsel; . . . and the reaction of the class members to the proposed settlement.

13 Id.; see also In re Mego Fin. Corp. Sec. Litig., 213 F.3d 454, 458 (9th Cir. 2000) (same). However, 14 the final fairness determination must rest on “the settlement taken as a whole, rather than the 15 individual component parts.” Id. at 1026.

16 In the instant case, the Court concludes that the parties have not demonstrated the fairness 17 and adequacy of the settlement.

18 a. Strength of Plaintiff’s Case/Risk of Litigation

19 Should Plaintiff prevail in proving Schwab was responsible for creating a prohibited 20 transaction, Schwab’s exposure would be substantial. First, it may be responsible for any tax 21 liability incurred by Plaintiff. Second, Plaintiff faces an additional risk of liability to third parties.
22 IRAs are typically exempt from a debtor’s estate in bankruptcy so long as they maintain their 23 exemption from taxation. 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(3)(c) (exempting “retirement funds to the extent that 24 those funds are in a fund or account that is exempt from taxation under [various sections] of the 25 Internal Revenue Code of 1986”). However, that exemption no longer applies when a prohibited 26 transaction takes place. See, e.g., In re Meredith, No. 03-34018-DOT, 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 2798, at 27 *20 (Bankr. E.D. Va. May 19, 2005) (“Because the transaction was made by a fiduciary and 28 constituted a prohibited transaction under § 4975, the SEP-IRA lost its status as an exempt account

1 under § 408(e)(2). Therefore, it does not qualify as exempt property.”); Nu-Way Energy Corp. v.
2 Delp, 205 S.W.3d 667, 682-83 (Tex. App. 2006) (“Because Delp engaged in a prohibited transaction 3 in December 1992, his IRA ‘cease[d] to be an individual retirement account as of the first day of 4 such taxable year’ [pursuant to] 26 U.S.C.A. § 408(e)(2)(A)” and therefore “it is no longer exempt 5 from creditors under [state law].”). Accordingly, should the Schwab IRAs at issue here be deemed 6 to have entered into a prohibited transaction because of the disputed language in the account 7 agreements, class members’ IRAs may no longer be protected from creditors.

8 Indeed, Plaintiff points to a bankruptcy court case finding that similar language in a Merrill 9 Lynch (“ML”) IRA created a prohibited transaction, thereby exposing a debtor’s IRA to attachment 10 in bankruptcy. See In re Daley, --- B.R. ----, 2011 WL 4806905 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. Oct. 10, 2011); 11 see also In re Kaminsky, No. 1-09-47942-JBR, 2010 WL 4026378, at *2-3 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. Oct.
12 13, 2010) (considering ML’s motion to “liquidat[e] the funds in the Debtor’s IRA Account based 13 upon the language of the Agreement granting a lien on any and all assets held in any Merrill Lynch 14 account in which the Debtor has an interest,” and ordering that “the Debtor’s IRA Account should 15 be turned over to the Chapter 7 Trustee who shall hold the funds pending any exemption claim”).
16 The court in Daley determined that, although “the Debtor never borrowed from his IRA account or 17 requested a margin loan against his funds,” his client relationship agreement with ML – which 18 applied to “all of his accounts with Merrill Lynch” – provided that ML “has a lien on [his] accounts 19 and amounts in those accounts for any payment obligations [he has] with Merrill Lynch[.]” Id. at *7.
20 The court concluded that “[t]his grant of a lien at the IRA’s inception constituted an extension of 21 credit or guarantee, which is a prohibited transaction under 26 U.S.C. § 4975(c)(1)(B).” Id. It held 22 further that “[a]s incongruous as it appears, based upon the language of the Client Relationship 23 Agreement signed by the Debtor, the mere opening of the Merrill Lynch IRA caused the Debtor to 24 participate in a prohibited transaction under § 4975.” Id. (emphasis added).

25 While Daley involved account language different from that employed by Schwab,⁵ it is not

26
27 ⁵ The Merrill Lynch (“ML”) agreement stated that in part ML “has a lien on [his] accounts 28 and amounts in those accounts for any payment obligations [he has] with Merrill Lynch[.]” Id. at *7.
Paragraph 7 of the Schwab agreement states that “[a]s security for the repayment of all present of future indebtedness owed to [Schwab] . . . , each Schwab IRA account holder grants [Schwab] a

1 clear that the difference is material. Importantly, the bankruptcy court relied on a Department of 2 Labor opinion addressing similar language to conclude that a prohibited transaction occurs whether 3 the security interest is “in a client’s personal, non-IRA accounts,” or directly “in the IRA’s assets.”
4 Id. at *7-8 (citing and quoting Dep’t of Labor Op. No. 2009-03A at 1-3, 2009 ERISA LEXIS 2 (Oct.
5 27, 2009) (“It is the opinion of the Department that the grant by an IRA owner to the Broker of a 6 security interest in his non-IRA accounts in order to cover indebtedness of, or arising from, his IRA, 7 as you describe, would be a prohibited transaction under Code section 4975(c)(1)(B).”)⁶

8 While Plaintiff’s interpretation of the Schwab agreement has support, Defendants, in their 9 response to class members’ objections, maintain their position that the Schwab language does not 10 create a prohibited transaction. Defendants first point out that the IRS approved the Schwab IRA 11 Plan on June 5, 2003. See Def’s Resp. to Obj. at 2 n.4. They also argue that, when read properly, 12 neither paragraph 6 nor paragraph 7 creates a prohibited transaction. See Def’s Resp. to Obj. at 3 13 (“Thus when read properly, Section 7 solely creates a security interest in the customer’s Schwab
14 IRA account for IRA debts, not a security interest in the IRA owner’s non-IRA assets as Plaintiff 15 alleges.”); id. at 4 (arguing that paragraph 6 cannot be construed to create a prohibited transaction 16 because “[a]n indebtedness greater than the IRA assets could not occur in an IRA account, since it is 17 not permitted to trade on margin”). Defendants note further that certain language in the Schwab

18 _____ 19 continuing security interest in and lien on, and a right of setoff with respect to, all securities and 20 other property that are, now or in the future, held, carried, or maintained for any purpose in or 21 through the Schwab IRA and, to the extent of this account holder’s interest, in or through any 22 present or future Account with [Schwab] or [Schwab’s] affiliates in which the account holder has an 23 interest.” (emphasis added). Paragraph 6 also states more vaguely that Schwab “may elect anytime, with or without notice, to make any debit balance or other obligation related to your Account immediately due and payable. [Schwab] may report any past-due account to a consumer and/pr securities credit reporting agency. [Schwab] may also refer your Account to a collection agency.”
Paragraph 7 is more directly analogous to the ML language.

24 ⁶ The agreement language at issue in the Department of Labor opinion letter states, in part: 25 “All securities and other property now or hereafter held, carried or maintained by us in our 26 possession or control, for any purpose, in or for the benefit of any of your Accounts, now or 27 hereafter opened, including any Account in which you may have an interest, shall be subject to a 28 continuing first lien and first priority perfected security interest in favor of us for the discharge of all indebtedness and your obligations to us, and are to be held by us as security for the payment of any liability or indebtedness of yours to us in any of your accounts. . . . You authorize us the right to transfer securities and other property so held by us from or to any other of your Accounts held by us, whenever, in our judgment, we consider such transfer necessary for our protection” Dep’t of Labor Op. at *2.

1 IRA Plan precludes the IRA holder from engaging in a prohibited transaction, see Def’s Resp. to 2 Obj. at 2; Insley Decl., Ex. A (Plan), ¶ 5.2, and that where a Plan conflicts with other documents
3 incorporated into the Plan by reference (such as the account agreement at issue here), the Plan 4 generally controls, thereby protecting class members from any misunderstanding about the meaning 5 of paragraphs 6 and 7 in the account agreement. Def’s Resp. to Obj. at 2. Finally, they argue that 6 paragraph 7 of the account agreement was removed effective January 1, 2011, and is thus no longer 7 a problem for class members (although it is unclear whether this change would prevent adverse 8 consequences to accounts that were open in the period before the change). Yet, the literal language 9 of Paragraphs 6 and 7 appear problematic, especially in light of Daley.

10 Defendants’ arguments highlight the risks of litigation for both parties, as each side’s claims 11 depend on a particular reading of the account language, a reading which may or may not be adopted 12 by reviewing courts. See, e.g., Daley, 2011 WL 4806905 at *7 (concluding that the agreement to 13 provide a line of credit or security interest, regardless of how or whether that agreement is later 14 enforced, causes a prohibited transaction); Dep’t of Labor Op. No. 2009-03A at *5 (discussing ways 15 in which similar account language could create a prohibited transaction). Accordingly, while 16 Plaintiff has at least raised a question as to the merits of her underlying claims on behalf of the class, 17 that question does not yield to a certain answer as Defendant’s contrary contentions illustrate.

18 Moreover, as Defendants pointed out, Plaintiffs may face procedural risks if the litigation 19 continues. At least one court has dismissed a similar action on the grounds that plaintiffs do not 20 have standing and the claims are not ripe for adjudication, as class members have yet to suffer any 21 harm. See Coffey v. Merrill Lynch Pierce Fanner and Smith, Inc., CV-11-5860-JFW (JCx), Docket 22 No. 46, at 2 (Nov. 16, 2011) (“Plaintiff fails to allege facts that demonstrate that he has suffered an 23 actual or imminent injury, and appears to have manufactured a problem with potentially substantial 24 adverse tax consequences for many thousands of IRA owners where none yet exists.”).

25 Continued litigation thus presents risks for both parties. This raises concerns about the value 26 of the proposed settlement, to which the Court now turns.

27 b. The Value of the Settlement

28 The settlement provides no monetary recovery for the class. Instead, the value of the relief

1 lies solely in the effect of the purported retroactive amendment to the account agreement. That 2 benefit must be balanced against what class members are giving up via the release. Given the 3 concerns raised above with respect to the possibility of a prohibited transaction, the key question is 4 whether the proposed amended language would prevent or provide significant protection against any 5 adverse scenarios from occurring to class members resulting from the challenged provisions.

6 Plaintiff portrays the proposed settlement as offering the Class the best deal it could have 7 gotten if it had prevailed at trial. Mot. for Final App. at 22. The amended language purports to 8 clarify that no portion of the Plan may be construed as creating a prohibited transaction.⁷ However, 9 the parties offer very little in the way of assurances that the settlement will actually have its intended 10 effect; that is, that it will actually prevent the IRS, the Tax court, the bankruptcy court, or state 11 courts from determining that a prohibited transaction has taken place, exposing class members to 12 creditors and loss of their tax exemption. The parties have failed to establish with any degree of 13 certainty or even probability that class members' assets will be protected as a result of the 14 settlement.

15 First, Plaintiff argues that the proposed amendment complies with § 4975's method for 16 correcting inadvertent prohibited transactions. Section 4975(d)(23) provides that an otherwise 17 prohibited transaction "in connection with the acquisition, holding, or disposition of any security or 18 commodity" shall remain exempt from taxation "if the transaction is corrected before the end of the 19 correction period." Section 4975(f)(11)(A) defines a correction period as "the 14-day period 20 beginning on the date on which the disqualified person discovers, or reasonably should have

21 22 ⁷ The specific amended provision, as laid out in Settlement Agreement ¶ 2.1, provides,

23 Any language in this Account Agreement or related agreements that 24 may conflict or be inconsistent with the Plan, including without 25 limitation Sections 5.2 or 5.8 of the Plan, or Sections 408 or 4975 of 26 the Internal Revenue Code, and the regulations thereunder, shall be 27 interpreted to be consistent and in compliance with the Plan and those 28 Sections of the Code and regulations thereunder. To the extent it is not possible to interpret such language to be consistent and compliant with the Plan or these Code provisions and regulations, then such language shall be of no force or effect to the extent of such inconsistency or noncompliance. This Section shall be effective retroactive to the first date on which the agreement concerning the Schwab IRA was entered into by the Account Holder.

1 discovered, that the transaction would (without regard to this paragraph and subsection (d)(23)) 2 constitute a prohibited transaction.” Section 4975(f)(11)(D)(iii) defines “correct” to mean “to undo 3 the transaction to the extent possible and in any case to make good to the plan or affected account 4 any losses resulting from the transaction, and to restore to the plan or affected account any profits 5 made through the use of assets of the plan.”

6 However, it is not clear that (d)(23) applies to circumstances such as the instant case. It is 7 not clear, for example, whether the opening of, and lien on, the IRA itself would be considered an 8 “acquisition” of a “security” under the terms of the Act. Security is defined by 26 U.S.C.A. § 9 475(c)(2) to include: “(A) share of stock in a corporation; (B) partnership or beneficial ownership 10 interest in a widely held or publicly traded partnership or trust; (C) note, bond, debenture, or other 11 evidence of indebtedness; [and] (D) interest rate, currency, or equity notional principal contract,” 12 among other things. Subparagraph (C) could be construed to apply to this case, but (d)(23) seems 13 aimed at the use of IRA funds to acquire other interests or things, rather than simply acquiring an 14 interest in the IRA itself. In addition, (d)(23) by its terms applies only to subparagraphs (A)-(D) of 15 subsection (c)(1), which defines prohibited transactions.⁸ However, the Department of Labor found 16 that “granting [] a security interest in the IRA’s assets . . . would be using the IRA’s assets ‘in [the 17 IRA owner’s] own interest or for his own account’ in violation of section 4975(c)(1)(E).” Dep’t of 18 Labor Op. 2009-3A at *5-6. A violation of § 4975(c)(1)(E) is not covered by (d)(23). Thus, even if 19 (d)(23) applies, it may not completely correct the prohibited transaction if one is so found.

20 To be sure, transactions falling outside of (d)(23) may be corrected under subsection (f)(5),⁹

22 ⁸ Section 4975(c)(1) defines prohibited transactions as “any direct or indirect – (A) sale or 23 exchange, or leasing, of any property between a plan and a disqualified person; (B) lending of 24 money or other extension of credit between a plan and a disqualified person; (C) furnishing of 25 goods, services, or facilities between a plan and a disqualified person; (D) transfer to, or use by or 26 for the benefit of, a disqualified person of the income or assets of a plan; (E) act by a disqualified 27 person who is a fiduciary whereby he deals with the income or assets of a plan in his own interest or 28 for his own account; or (F) receipt of any consideration for his own personal account by any disqualified person who is a fiduciary from any party dealing with the plan in connection with a transaction involving the income or assets of the plan.

⁹ Section 4975(f)(5) provides, “The terms “correction” and “correct” mean, with respect to a prohibited transaction, undoing the transaction to the extent possible, but in any case placing the plan in a financial position not worse than that in which it would be if the disqualified person were acting under the highest fiduciary standards.”

1 but unlike (d)(23), (f)(5) does not provide for a complete abatement of taxes. Rather, a prohibited 2 transaction corrected under (f)(5) is still subject to the statute’s first-tier penalty of “15 percent of the 3 amount involved with respect to the prohibited transaction for each year (or part thereof) in the 4 taxable period.” § 4975(a). A correction only serves to protect the party from the full 100 percent 5 tax imposed “[i]n any case in which an initial tax is imposed by subsection (a) on a prohibited 6 transaction and the transaction is not corrected within the taxable period.” § 4975(b). The “taxable 7 period” in this case would be the time between “the date on which the prohibited transaction occurs” 8 and “the date on which correction of the prohibited transaction is completed.” § 4975(f)(2). This 9 incorporation of a taxable time period for first-tier taxes would suggest that retroactive corrections 10 are not permitted under (f)(5), a position that is supported by at least some authority. See, e.g., 11 Westoak Realty and Inv. Co., Inc. v. C.I.R., 999 F.2d 308, 311 (8th Cir. 1993) (holding that a 12 retroactive amendment to a profit sharing plan document only avoided the second-tier 100 percent 13 taxes, not the first-tier taxes, because “[i]f the statute allowed taxpayers to avoid a first tier tax 14 simply by retroactively curing the transaction, no incentive would exist to avoid the transaction in 15 the first instance”). Westoak suggests that if (d)(23) does not fully control the corrections in this 16 case, only a prospective correction is possible. Thus, class members could still be exposed to tax 17 penalties during the taxable period, and at least partial attachment by creditors.

18 Second, assuming (d)(23) applies, Plaintiff claims that the 14-day correction period 19 requirement is satisfied because “[t]he Settlement Agreement was entered before any Class Member 20 had actual knowledge that the account agreement provisions resulted in a prohibited transaction,” 21 and because the amendments took effect at the same time class members gained such knowledge 22 through the class notice. Mot for Final App. at 7. However, Plaintiff’s reading of the correction 23 period would suggest that (a) Ms. Yoshioka is already well past her correction period for her 24 account, and that she therefore may be unable to correct her prohibited transaction; and (b) if the 25 Court denies final approval of the settlement, the entire class would miss the 14-day correction 26 period.

27 In addition, the 14-day correction period begins not only when a class member has actual 28 knowledge of the purported prohibited transaction, but also when a class member “discovers, or

1 reasonably should have discovered,” the prohibited transaction. § 4975(f)(11)(A) (emphasis added).
2 Class members face the risk that the IRS or other reviewing parties will find that the date by which 3 class members “should have discovered” the problem has already long passed. For example, class 4 members received the account language in question when they first opened their IRAs, and DOL’s 5 advisory opinion on the issue is now over two years old. See Dep’t of Labor Op. 2009-3A. While 6 Daley is a fairly recent decision from October 10, 2011, that is still well beyond 14 days ago. The 7 parties offer no assurances that class members would not fall prey to a determination that they 8 should have corrected the transaction long ago, and therefore that any attempted correction is now 9 out of time. Accordingly, Plaintiff has failed to demonstrate that the proffered settlement is 10 adequate in terms of complying with § 4975(d)(23)’s correction period time limits.

11 Third, assuming that the amendment satisfies the time limits imposed by (d)(23), Plaintiff 12 does not persuasively demonstrate that the amendment sufficiently corrects the transaction.¹⁰ For 13 example, Plaintiff does not offer any authority upholding similar retroactive amendments to 14 agreement language, nor does she provide any indication of the kind of corrections the IRS and 15 courts have deemed sufficient. Daley casts doubt on whether a retroactive amendment can correct a 16 prohibited transaction deemed consummated at its inception.

17 Some objecting class members have suggested potential solutions to this uncertainty, 18 including obtaining rulings from the Department of Labor and the IRS that the proposed amendment 19 corrects any problem. The parties have failed to do so, despite the apparent availability of such 20 assurances. See, e.g., IRS PLR 8405018, 1983 WL 202261 (Oct. 28, 1983) (responding to a request 21 for a ruling as to the effect of a class settlement on class members). Nor have the parties attempted 22 to join or otherwise involve the agencies in this litigation in order to achieve some legally binding 23 effect. Indeed, as the parties confirmed in supplemental submissions to the Court and at oral 24 argument, recent action by both the DOL and IRS indicates that the interpretation of account 25 language similar to Schwab’s, and the question of whether such language creates a prohibited

26
27 ¹⁰ Plaintiff’s sole Tax Court citation does not shed light on how to interpret the correction 28 requirement, as it concerned affirmative conduct rather than agreement language, and it merely restates the general rule that a party should undo or rescind the transaction to the extent possible.
See Mot. for Final App. at 7 (citing Zabolotny v. C. I. R., 97 T.C. 385, 399 (1991)).

1 transaction (and what to do if it does), are in flux and may be addressed by one or both agencies in 2 the coming months. See Dep’t of Labor Adv. Op. 2011-09A; Hausman Decl. Ex. B (attaching IRS 3 Announcement 2011-81, which offers taxpayers temporary relief from the tax consequences of any 4 prohibited transactions arising out of IRA agreements, pending further DOL action). Accordingly, 5 the effectiveness of the relief offered is uncertain at best.

6 This uncertain value of the settlement makes the release given in exchange therefor 7 problematic. As numerous class members have pointed out, the scope of the release would leave 8 class members without a remedy if third parties (such as the IRS, DOL, or bankruptcy trustees) later 9 determine that Schwab’s account language did, in fact, create a prohibited transaction and that the 10 purported fix offered in this settlement did not correct the problem. Given these uncertainties, the 11 parties have failed to carry their burden of demonstrating to the Court that the Settlement offers 12 meaningful relief to the Class sufficient to extract the price of a complete release. In short, the class 13 is giving up something (recourse against Schwab) for possibly nothing.

14 c. Remaining Hanlon Factors

15 While less important in the context of this case than the factors already discussed above, the 16 remaining factors also weigh against approving the settlement. First, while some degree of risk and 17 expense is present in any case that is litigated rather than settled, here “the interests of the class will 18 [not] be better served by resolution of the litigation than by continuation of it.” In re Washington 19 Pub. Power Supply Sys. Sec. Litig., 720 F. Supp. 1379, 1387 (D. Ariz. 1989). Indeed, the 20 questionable value of the relief created by this settlement combined with the broad release of class 21 members’ claims outweighs any risk avoided by continuing the litigation. Should Plaintiffs prevail 22 at trial, they may be entitled to damages and/or indemnification of financial harms suffered by 23 Plaintiffs, a right they are giving up under the Settlement. Second, the risk of maintaining class 24 action status does not appear to be great, given the commonality of interest in the class and the over-25 arching legal questions that would likely govern resolution of the case. Third, given how quickly 26 the parties settled this case, the lack of due diligence in, e.g., seeking a DOL/ORS opinion or ruling 27 on the effectiveness of the proposed settlement in protecting the class, and the lingering legal 28 uncertainties with respect to the issues raised, this is not a case where “the parties have sufficient

1 information to make an informed decision about settlement.” Linner v. Cellular Alaska P’ship, 151
2 F.3d 1234, 1239 (9th Cir. 1998); Gribble v. Cool Transports Inc., No. CV 06-04863, 2008 WL
3 5281665, at *9 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 15, 2008). Fourth, although Class Counsel endorses the settlement 4 and avers that it provides meaningful relief, due to the substantive concerns the Court has noted 5 above, their views are not entitled to controlling weight. Finally, class members’ objections, 6 although small in number relative to the size of the class, were strong, substantive, and merited.
7 Class members raised many of the same concerns the Court has already noted. Most commonly, 8 they raised the valid concern that the settlement does not assure them the transactions were not 9 prohibited and thus does not protect them from future adverse actions by third parties (including the 10 IRS), while forcing them to waive any claims against Schwab.

11 d. Conclusion

12 Taking each of the foregoing factors into consideration, the Court concludes that the parties 13 have not made a sufficient showing that the proposed settlement provides a fair and adequate 14 resolution of the class members’ claims against Schwab. Specifically, the parties have not 15 demonstrated that the value of what the class is getting is commensurate with the value of what the 16 class is giving up. Accordingly, the Court DENIES the motion for final approval of the class 17 settlement.

18 B. Attorneys’ Fees and Incentive Award

19 In light of the Court’s ruling as to the proposed settlement, the Court DENIES the motion for 20 attorney’s fees and an incentive award as moot.

21 C. Motion to Intervene – Gregory Garmong

22 Class member Gregory Garmong has filed a motion for mandatory intervention as a named 23 plaintiff. Docket No. 85. While his motion largely challenges the merits of the settlement in similar 24 ways to other members of the class, he also challenges the adequacy of Plaintiff Yoshioka as a class 25 representative. Defendants oppose the motion on the grounds that his intervention “would add 26 expense and delay resolution of this matter.” Docket No. 110 at 2. Plaintiff opposes the motion on 27 the grounds that Plaintiff is an adequate class representative and that the settlement offers 28 meaningful relief to the class. Docket No. 111.

1 The Ninth Circuit requires a movant seeking mandatory intervention under Fed. R. Civ. P.
2 24(a)(2) to demonstrate four things:

3 (1) the motion must be timely; (2) the applicant must claim a 4 “significantly protectable” interest relating to the property or 5 transaction which is the subject of the action; (3) the applicant must be 6 so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede its ability to protect that interest; and (4) the applicant’s interest must be inadequately represented by the parties to the action.

7 United States v. Aerojet Gen. Corp., 606 F.3d 1142, 1148 (9th Cir. 2010) (citations omitted).

8 Plaintiff concedes that Mr. Garmong has met the first three prongs of the test. Therefore, only the 9 adequacy of representation is at issue.

10 “This Court considers three factors in determining the adequacy of representation: (1) 11 whether the interest of a present party is such that it will undoubtedly make all of a proposed 12 intervenor’s arguments; (2) whether the present party is capable and willing to make such 13 arguments; and (3) whether a proposed intervenor would offer any necessary elements to the 14 proceeding that other parties would neglect.” Id. (quoting Arakaki v. Cayetano, 324 F.3d 1078, 15 1086 (9th Cir. 2003)). The most significant factor is the relative interests of the Plaintiff and 16 Movant. Arakaki, 324 F.3d at 1086 (citing 7C Wright, Miller & Kane, § 1909, at 318 (1986)).
17 “When an applicant for intervention and an existing party have the same ultimate objective, a 18 presumption of adequacy of representation arises.” Id. (citations omitted). “If the applicant’s 19 interest is identical to that of one of the present parties, a compelling showing should be required to 20 demonstrate inadequate representation.” Id. (citing 7C Wright, Miller & Kane, § 1909, at 318-19).

21 In the instant case, Movant and Plaintiff have, at the very least, the same ultimate objective 22 in the litigation, which is to protect the assets in their IRAs from taxation and creditors. Indeed, it 23 appears that their interests are identical. While Mr. Garmong raises questions about Ms. Yoshioka’s 24 motives and interests in initiating this litigation, as discussed above with respect to the adequacy 25 prong of class certification, he cannot point to any credible factual basis for discerning incompatible 26 interests. In addition, Mr. Garmong offers only vague allegations of collusion, see, e.g., Docket No.
27 85 ¶ 16 (raising the possibility “that the present lawsuit may be a contrived lawsuit effectively 28 initiated by the Defendants to rid themselves of potential liability of up to 4 million IRA holders in

1 an amount of $400 Billion through the Settlement now proposed”). Again he provides no credible 2 factual basis for such allegations. Mr. Garmong also argues that Class Counsel has been 3 unresponsive to his inquiries. Docket No. 85 ¶¶ 4-6. However, Class Counsel has provided the 4 Court with a copy of the letter it sent to Mr. Garmong on November 15, 2011, addressing his 5 concerns. See Kirk Decl., Docket No. 112, Ex. A. While Mr. Garmong may still disagree with 6 counsel on the merits, counsel does not appear to have abdicated any responsibility to the class.
7 Counsel have also expressed a willingness to increase their communications with the class to 8 provide Mr. Garmong and other class members with more information as the case proceeds.

9 Beyond these concerns, Mr. Garmong’s remaining arguments amount to disagreements with 10 Plaintiff over the merits of the settlement. “Where parties share the same ultimate objective, 11 differences in litigation strategy do not normally justify intervention.” Arakaki, 324 F.3d at 1086 12 (citations omitted). Mr. Garmong is free to make his arguments as an objector and to object to any 13 renewed proposed settlement offered by the parties. At the same time, Class Counsel has agreed to 14 establish a communication system (e.g., via a website) to share pleadings and significant 15 developments with interested class members.

16 Accordingly, the Court DENIES the motion to intervene.

17 D. Stay of the Action

18 At oral argument, the parties discussed the possibility of staying the litigation pending 19 further action by the Department of Labor or the IRS that might resolve this matter without the 20 parties incurring unnecessary costs. Neither party objects to such a stay. The Court concludes that a 21 stay is warranted in this matter and hereby STAYS the matter pending further action by the 22 Department of Labor or IRS, or until further order of the Court.

23 III. CONCLUSION

24 For the foregoing reasons, the Court orders as follows:

- 25 (1) The motion for final approval of the proposed class action settlement is DENIED.
26 (2) The motion for attorney’s fees and incentive award is DENIED.
27 (3) The motion for mandatory intervention is DENIED.

28

- 1 (4) The matter is STAYED pending further action by the Department of Labor or the IRS, or 2 until further order of the Court. The parties are directed to inform the Court via joint letter of 3 any developments from the IRS or Department of Labor within 14 days of any action taken 4 by either agency. The parties are further directed to seek leave of the Court to file any 5 motions during the pendency of the stay.
- 6 (5) Further status conference is set for June 15, 2012, at 1:30 p.m.
- 7 (6) Class Counsel is instructed to serve this order on all class members who filed objections with 8 the Court.

9 This Order disposes of Docket Nos. 45, 85, and 104.
