1 Counsel for the Track Two DAPs conferred for months with counsel for defendants over a 2 pretrial and resulting trial schedule appropriate for these cases but have been unable to reach 3 agreement. The parties appear to be in agreement over the deadlines to be included in a Track
4 Two DAP scheduling order and in the sequencing of those deadlines. The principal disagreement 5 is over whether these cases should be included in a single Track Two DAP schedule or whether,
6 as defendants argue, the DAPs in these cases should be separated into three pretrial and trial
7 schedules for a Track Two, Track Three, and Track Four, each separated by a period of several 8 months of more. The Track Two DAPs believe that a single schedule for these cases is 9 appropriate and will not result in undue burden or complication for the defendants. The proposed 10 common schedule for the Track Two DAPs also completely moves these cases through the 11 Court's calendar by the end of 2013. In contrast, defendants' multi-track approach delays 12 resolution of these cases well into 2014 and likely into 2015.

15 II. ARGUMENT

16 Both the schedule and the cases included in the proposed Track Two DAP schedule are 17 reasonable and appropriate.

18 The pretrial deadlines and the sequencing of those deadlines generally are based on those 19 in the Track One DAP Scheduling Order. Reasonable periods are provided for the completion of 20 fact discovery limited to the Track Two DAP cases (12/7/12), the designation of experts 21 (plaintiffs 9/7/12, defendants 10/12/12), the provision of expert reports (ending 6/14/13), the 22 completion of expert discovery (7/19/13), and the briefing and submission of dispositive motions,
23 to the extent any are filed. The proposed Track Two DAP schedule provides for dispositive
24 motions to be heard no later than November 1, 2013, following which the Court can enter dates 25 for the remand of cases filed outside this district to the transferor courts and for the pretrial 26

27
28 included in this motion and the proposed pretrial and trial schedule submitted with this motion.

1 conference and trial of the remaining Track Two DAP cases. Under this schedule, the Track Two 2 DAP cases filed in this court will be ready for trial in 2013.

3 The twenty-three DAP cases proposed to be included in the Track Two DAP schedule will 4 not cause undue burden to defendants.² There is sufficient time between now and the close of 5 fact discovery in December 2012 for defendants to take the limited discovery they legitimately
6 need from plaintiffs. A number of the Track Two DAPs have produced to defendants the key 7 information they need -- data on their purchases and/or sales of LCD panels and products. Some 8 Track Two DAPs have produced other documents, as well.

10 Expert discovery in the Track Two DAP cases also can proceed on the proposed schedule
11 without undue complication. Plaintiffs' expert reports are due in January 2013, and defendants'
12 expert reports are due ninety days' later in April 2013. By this point, defendants are well-13 practiced at producing responsive expert reports in the LCD cases, having done so both in the 14 class cases and more recently in the Track One DAP cases. Further, a number of the Track Two 15 DAPs expect to designate several of the same experts as the Track One DAPs, so defendants will 16 have the added benefit of reviewing their work product and deposing them at least once before.

18 Summary judgment motion practice, to the extent it occurs in the Track Two DAP cases, 19 is easily manageable. The Court's rulings on the numerous summary judgment motions in the 20 class cases should obviate or at least severely limit the need for summary judgment motions in the 21 Track Two DAP cases. Those that are filed in the face of the prior rulings can be handled on the 22 proposed briefing and hearing schedule, which spans a period of two and one-half months.

23
24 While new DAP cases may (or may not) be filed after the proposed Track Two DAP

25
26 ² The proposed Track Two DAP scheduling order is like the Track One DAP Scheduling Order in that it provides a 27 cut-off date for the DAP cases to which it applies. Under the Track One DAP Scheduling Order, DAP cases filed 28 after December 1, 2010 are subject to a separate scheduling order, or they may be included in the Track One DAP Scheduling Order if circumstances permit. The proposed Track Two scheduling order provides that DAP cases filed after the date on which it is entered will be subject to a separate scheduling order, or they may be included in the Track Two DAP scheduling order if circumstances permit.

1 schedule is entered, thus potentially requiring a track three, that is not a reason to separate the 2 Track Two DAPs into three separate tracks, as defendants desire. The Track Two DAP cases are 3 pending in this Court and capable of proceeding on the proposed schedule. Depending on when, 4 if ever, additional DAP cases are brought, they may be folded into the Track Two DAP schedule.
5 Even if they cannot be included in the Track Two DAP schedule, the existing Track Two DAP 6 cases should be not separated into tracks extending well into 2014 or into 2015 based on the 7 belief that later-filed cases will necessitate a third track.

9 The Track Two DAPs respectfully request that the Court grant this Motion and enter the 10 proposed Order Re: Pretrial and Trial Schedule for Track Two Direct Action Cases. We request
11 that the Court set these cases on the trial calendar at the earliest date following the proposed 12 deadline of November 1, 2013 for hearing dispositive motions.
