

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

MICHAEL WEINGAND,

No. C-11-3109 EMC

Plaintiff,

v.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS

HARLAND FINANCIAL SOLUTIONS,
INC., et al.,

(Docket No. 61)

Defendants.

I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff Michael Weingand filed suit against Harland Financial Solutions (“Harland”) on June 23, 2011, alleging claims of, inter alia, wrongful termination, employment retaliation, and unfair business practices. Compl., Docket No. 1. On June 21, 2012, pursuant to Court order, Plaintiff filed the operative First Amended Complaint (“FAC”). Docket No. 57. Pending before the Court is Defendant’s motion to dismiss the first, second, fourth, and fifth claims of Plaintiff’s FAC. Docket No. 61. Having considered the parties’ briefs and oral argument, and for the reasons set forth below, the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART the motion to dismiss.

II. FACTUAL & PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In the FAC, Plaintiff alleges as follows. Plaintiff Michael Weingand is a former employee of Defendant Harland, where he worked as a Senior Field Engineer. FAC ¶ 4. Plaintiff began working for Harland’s predecessor, Ultradata, in 1997. Id. ¶ 9. He began work as a trainer, but received additional duties almost immediately. Id. ¶ 11. Plaintiff moved to the Implementations Department after two years, and then received a promotion to Field Engineering two years later. Id. ¶ 12.

1 Plaintiff remained in Field Engineering for the duration of his employment with Harland. Id. He 2 achieved senior status in that department in 2006, and received regular pay increases based on his 3 performance. Id. ¶ 13. He is certified both in Windows server and applications, and in OnBase. Id.
4 ¶ 15. He continued to develop marketable skills during his employment at Harland, including, e.g.,
5 becoming the lead HTML programmer in his department and leading various internal personnel
6 training sessions. Id. ¶¶ 17-19. Plaintiff also distinguished himself in the quality of customer service
7 he provided. Id. ¶¶ 20-21.

8 In or around 2008, Harland promoted Mr. Scott Holmes to supervise Plaintiff’s work from 9 Columbus, Ohio. Id. ¶ 22. Holmes required Plaintiff and other Field Engineers to put in 120%
10 billable time, requiring that they work on multiple clients at a time and work from home in the 11 evenings and on weekends. Id. ¶ 23. He also increased Plaintiff’s workload by giving him several 12 new organizational tools and project plans to build and implement. Id. ¶ 24. In May 2010, Plaintiff
13 and his group were required to rotate “beeper duty,” through which they could provide 24-hour 14 service. Id. ¶ 26. Although Harland had previously given “beeper pay” to its employees for such 15 after-hours work, such pay was eliminated under Holmes. Id. ¶ 27.

16 In response to the new beeper assignment and pay policy, Plaintiff “questioned and 17 complained whether this . . . was acceptable under Defendant Harland’s policies and under 18 California law.” Id. ¶ 28. Upon learning of his questions, Holmes became angry, instructed Plaintiff
19 not to organize any meetings on the subject, and told Plaintiff he “need[ed] to know [his] place.” Id.
20 Plaintiff then lodged a formal complaint to Human resources, “who confirmed that Plaintiff had 21 acted appropriately.” Id. However, Harland “took no disciplinary action against Holmes.” Id. ¶ 29.

22 Plaintiff alleges that Holmes subsequently retaliated against him by, inter alia, exercising
23 higher scrutiny over Plaintiff’s work without any “legitimate business purpose,” and reprimanding
24 him for not calling in sick despite the fact that Plaintiff had informed him of his sick time. Id. ¶¶ 30,
25 33. Holmes placed Plaintiff on a Performance Improvement Plan, and included in the Plan warnings
26 about Plaintiff’s performance about which Plaintiff had not previously received any notice. Id. ¶ 31.
27 Although Plaintiff complied with the Plan, he was terminated less than one month after its 28 institution, in November 2010. Id. ¶¶ 32, 10. Plaintiff alleges that prior to his termination, Harland

1 was aware both of the increased stress level caused by Holmes and of Plaintiff’s “temporary
2 disability for which he was being treated at the time of the termination of his employment.” Id. ¶ 34.
3 Plaintiff alleges that he exhausted his administrative remedies by making a charge of retaliation to 4 the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (“DFEH”) and obtaining a right to sue 5 letter. Id. ¶ 35.

6 Plaintiff filed suit against Harland asserting causes of action for Retaliation under California
7 Labor Code §§ 1198.3 (refusing to work excess hours) and 98.6 (making labor complaint); for 8 Retaliation under California Government Code § 12945.2 for taking California Family Rights Act
9 leave; for Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy; and for Unfair Business Practices
10 under California Business and Professions Code § 17200, et seq. (“UCL”).

11 Pending before the Court is Defendant’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s First (§ 1198.3), 12 Second (§ 98.6), Fourth (Wrongful Termination), and Fifth (UCL) causes of action.

13 III. DISCUSSION

14 A. Legal Standard

15 Under Rule 12(b)(6), a party may move to dismiss based on the failure to state a claim upon 16 which relief may be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). A motion to dismiss based on Rule 12(b)(6)
17 challenges the legal sufficiency of the claims alleged. See Parks Sch. Of Bus. Symington, 51 F.3d 18 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). In considering such a motion, a court must take all allegations of 19 material fact as true and construe them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, although 20 “conclusory allegations of law and unwarranted inferences are insufficient to avoid a Rule 12(b)(6)
21 dismissal.” Cousins v. Lockyer, 568 F.3d 1063, 1067 (9th Cir. 2009). While “a complaint need not 22 contain detailed factual allegations . . . it must plead ‘enough facts to state a claim to relief that is 23 plausible on its face.’” Id. “A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content
24 that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct
25 alleged.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009); see also Bell Atl. Corp v. Twombly, 550 U.S.
26 544, 556 (2007). “The plausibility standard is not akin to a ‘probability requirement,’ but it asks for 27 more than sheer possibility that a defendant acted unlawfully.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting 28 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

1 B. First and Second Claims - Retaliation in Violation of California Labor Code §§ 1198.3, 98.6

2 Defendant raises a number of challenges to Plaintiff’s claims under Labor Code §§ 1198.3
3 and 98.6. First, Defendant argues that Plaintiff has failed to exhaust his administrative remedies
4 before the Labor Commissioner under § 98.7. Second, Defendant argues Plaintiff has failed to state
5 a claim under either substantive provision in any case. Because, as discussed below, the Court
6 concludes Plaintiff fails to state a claim under these statutes, it need not address whether Plaintiff has 7 sufficiently exhausted his remedies.

8 1. Section 1198.3 and the Proposed § 1102.5 Claim

9 Defendant argues that there is no private right of action for alleged violations of California
10 Labor Code § 1198.3, and that Plaintiff has failed to state a claim under the statute in any event.
11 Plaintiff does not respond to either argument in his opposition, and his proposed Second Amended 12 Complaint eliminates this cause of action in favor of a cause of action for retaliation under § 1102.5.
13 Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Defendant’s motion to dismiss this claim.

14 However, Plaintiff attaches a proposed SAC to his opposition, which makes two substantive 15 changes from the FAC. First, it eliminates the previous third cause of action, which is not at issue in 16 the pending motion. Second, it eliminates the first cause of action under § 1198.3, and replaces it
17 with a cause of action for retaliation in violation of the whistleblower statute, § 1102.5. Section 18 1102.5 provides, in relevant part:

19 (a) An employer may not make, adopt, or enforce any rule,
20 regulation, or policy preventing an employee from disclosing
21 information to a government or law enforcement agency, where the 22 employee has reasonable cause to believe that the information discloses a violation of state or federal statute, or a violation or noncompliance with a state or federal rule or regulation.

23 (b) An employer may not retaliate against an employee for 24 disclosing information to a government or law enforcement agency, 25 where the employee has reasonable cause to believe that the 26 information discloses a violation of state or federal statute, or a 27 violation or noncompliance with a state or federal rule or regulation.

28 (c) An employer may not retaliate against an employee for refusing to participate in an activity that would result in a violation of state or federal statute, or a violation or noncompliance with a state or federal rule or regulation.

1 (d) An employer may not retaliate against an employee for 2 having exercised his or her rights under subdivision (a), (b), or (c) in any former employment.

3 (e) A report made by an employee of a government agency to 4 his or her employer is a disclosure of information to a government or law enforcement agency pursuant to subdivisions (a) and (b).

5 (f) In addition to other penalties, an employer that is a 6 corporation or limited liability company is liable for a civil penalty not 7 exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000) for each violation of this section.

8 Cal. Labor Code §§ 1102.5(a)-(f).

9 In this case, Plaintiff cannot make out a § 1102.5 claim because he does not allege that he 10 reported any suspicions of unlawful activity to any government agency, nor does he allege that he 11 refused to do anything that would violate the law. Rather, he merely asserts that he complained
12 about Defendant’s practices and questioned whether they were legal to his own human resources 13 department. Such a complaint does not raise whistleblower protection under § 1102.5. Green v.
14 Ralee Engineering Co., 19 Cal. 4th 66, 77 (1998) (“Section 1102.5, subdivision (b), concerns
15 employees who report to public agencies. It does not protect plaintiff, who reported his suspicions 16 directly to his employer.”); Bursese v. Paypal, Inc., C-06-00636RMW, 2007 WL 485984 (N.D. Cal.
17 Feb. 12, 2007) (“PayPal contends, and this court agrees, that Cal. Labor Code Section 1102.5(b)
18 does not apply to plaintiff because he only reported his concerns to a private employer, rather than a 19 public agency.”) (citing Green, 19 Cal.4th at 77 (1988)). In addition, Plaintiff does not allege “that 20 [he either attempted or expressed an intention to notify government officials of alleged [] violations
21 at [Harland], and that [his retaliation] was pursuant to a rule, regulation, or policy preventing 22 [Harland] employees from disclosing information to government authorities.” Jones v.
23 Thyssenkrupp Elevator Corp., C-05-3539 EMC, 2006 WL 680553, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 14, 2006).

24 Unlike § 1102.5, certain statutory provisions of the Labor Code related to, e.g., workplace
25 safety, provide broader whistleblower protection that may encompass complaints to one’s employer.
26 Courts evaluating these broader provisions have acknowledged claims such as preemptive 27 retaliation, when a plaintiff alleges that an employer retaliated against him or her in anticipation that 28 the employee would file a report against the employer. See Cal. Lab. Code § 6310(b) (granting right

1 of reinstatement and reimbursement to “[a]ny employee who is discharged, threatened with 2 discharge, demoted, suspended, or in any other manner discriminated against in the terms and 3 conditions of employment by his or her employer because the employee has made a bona fide oral or 4 written complaint to . . . his or her employer, or his or her representative, of unsafe working
5 conditions, or work practices”); Lujan v. Minagar, 124 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1045 (2004)
6 (acknowledging preemptive retaliation claim under § 6310 based on employer’s admission that it
7 fired plaintiff out of fear she would report a workplace safety violation); see also Steele v. Youthful 8 Offender Parole Bd., 162 Cal. App. 4th 1241, 1255 (2008) (applying Lujan to preemptive retaliation 9 claim under FEHA, Cal. Govt. Code § 12940, which forbids retaliation against employee who “has 10 opposed any practices forbidden under this part”). Section 1102.5(b) does not contain broad 11 statutory language found sufficient in these cases to provide authority for a preemptive retaliatory
12 claim based on internal complaints. As a Southern District of California court explained, “section 13 1102.5(b) doesn’t stack neatly onto sections 6310 or 12940, and to the extent this reflects a varied
14 legislative purpose, it is reason enough for the Court to decline to extend the holding of Lujan to 15 claims brought under section 1102.5(b).” Steffens v. Regus Group, PLC, 08-CV-1494-LAB BLM,
16 2011 WL 666906, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 16, 2011) rev’d on other grounds, 11-55379, 2012 WL
17 2393637 (9th Cir. June 26, 2012).¹ Section 1102.5’s limited protection of disclosures “to a 18 government or law enforcement agency” thus supports holding plaintiffs to the statute’s parameters.
19 Plaintiff identifies no case applying a preemptive retaliation claim to § 1102.5.

20 At the hearing, Plaintiff raised the argument that he has a § 1102.5(c) claim based on his 21 allegation that he was retaliated against for “refusing to participate in an activity” that would result 22 in a violation of the wage and hour law. This argument is predicated on an assertion that by merely 23 being victimized by an unlawful wage and hour practice, Plaintiff “participate[s]” in an unlawful 24 activity. However, the language of subsection (c) traditionally applies to employees who take or 25 refuse to take action which facilitates an employer’s violation of the law. See, e.g., Ferretti v. Pfizer 26 Inc., 11-CV-04486, 2012 WL 694513, at *1, 7-8 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 29, 2012) (describing alleged

27
28 ¹ The appellant appealed only the common law wrongful termination claim to the Ninth Circuit, not the statutory claim under § 1102.5.

1 retaliation against an employee who reported illegal defects in the data for Phase I clinical trials of a 2 cancer drug and refused to participate in Phase III trials because of those illegalities); Casissa v.
3 First Republic Bank, C09-04129 CW, 2010 WL 2836896 (N.D. Cal. July 19, 2010) (describing bank
4 employees’ alleged retaliation for refusing to violate disclosure laws requiring them to report
5 suspicions of financial crimes). See generally Tameny v. Atl. Richfield Co., 27 Cal. 3d 167 (1980)
6 (describing common law claim of retaliation for refusal to engage in price-fixing). Plaintiff cites no
7 authority for the rather novel proposition that participation can consist simply of being the victim of 8 an unlawful labor practice. Indeed, another court in this district has explicitly rejected just such an 9 argument. See Hollie v. Concentra Health Services, Inc., C 10-5197 PJH, 2012 WL 993522, at *5
10 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 23, 2012) (“While it is true that it is unlawful under California’s labor laws for an 11 employer to refuse to pay hourly non-exempt employees for time they have worked, an employee
12 who works without pay is not ‘participat[ing] in’ or engaging in, a criminal act, as plaintiff claims.
13 Accordingly, the court finds as a matter of law that plaintiff cannot establish that he engaged in an 14 act protected under § 1102.5(c).”) (emphasis in original).

15 Accordingly, Plaintiff’s proposed change to his complaint is futile, and the Court therefore 16 denies leave to amend to assert a § 1102.5 claim. See generally 6 Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 1487 (3d
17 ed.) (“[I]f a complaint as amended could not withstand a motion to dismiss or summary judgment, 18 then the amendment should be denied as futile.”).

19 2. Failure to State a Claim Under § 98.6

20 Defendant next argues that Plaintiff fails to state a claim under § 98.6, which provides, in 21 relevant part,

22 No person shall discharge an employee or in any manner discriminate 23 against any employee . . . because the employee . . . engaged in any 24 conduct delineated in this chapter, including the conduct described in 25 Chapter 5 (commencing with Section 1101) of Part 3 of Division 2,² or 26 because the employee . . . has filed a bona fide complaint or claim or instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding under or relating to his or her rights, which are under the jurisdiction of the Labor
Commissioner, or has testified or is about to testify in any such

27 ² Chapter 5 prohibits employers from, inter alia, forbidding or controlling employees’ 28 political activities (§§ 1101, 1102), and preventing employees from reporting unlawful conduct to the government or retaliating against them for doing so (§ 1102.5).

1 proceeding or because of the exercise by the employee . . . of any 2 rights afforded him or her.

3 Cal. Labor Code § 98.6(a). In other words, “[u]nder § 98.6, employers may not discharge or 4 discriminate against an employee for political activities; for whistleblowing; for assigning wage
5 claims to the Labor Commissioner resulting from demotion, suspension, or discharge for lawful
6 conduct occurring during nonworking hours away from employer’s premises; for filing a complaint
7 with the Labor Commissioner or testifying in such proceedings; for initiating proceedings against 8 the employer to collect civil penalties under the ‘Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act;’ and 9 for exercising ‘any rights afforded him or her.’” Hollie, 2012 WL 993522, at *6 (citing Lab. Code §
10 98.6(a); Ming W. Chin, et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation §§ 7:1476, et seq.
11 (2011)).

12 Plaintiff’s FAC alleges that he engaged in protected activity under § 98.6, “to wit, 13 complaining about and threatening to escalate his complaints about the required overtime without 14 pay.” FAC ¶ 48. As with § 1102.5 above, Defendant argues that such conduct is not a protected 15 activity under § 98.6. Because it is undisputed that Plaintiff did not file a bona fide complaint or 16 institute any official proceeding prior to his termination, nor did he testify in such a proceeding, the 17 only question is whether Plaintiff’s complaints to his employer constitute the “exercise . . . of any 18 rights afforded him” under this provision. Lab. Code § 98.6(a).

19 As another court in this District recently noted, “[w]hile § 98.6(a) appears to broadly
20 proscribe terminations for the exercise of “any rights,” the California Court of Appeal in Grinzi v.
21 San Diego Hospice Corp., 120 Cal. App. 4th 72 (2004), thoroughly analyzed the statute, and 22 concluded that this prohibition can be applied only to conduct protected by the Labor Code.” Hollie,
23 2012 WL 993522 at *6. The Grinzi court examined the statute’s legislative history and concluded 24 that “the Legislature ha[d] indicated an intention to limit the proscription against terminations for the 25 exercise of ‘any rights’ to the exercise of those rights ‘otherwise protected by the Labor Code.’” 26 Grinzi, 120 Cal. App. 4th at 87; see also id. at 88 (rejecting a claim for wrongful termination under § 27 98.6 based on “a private employer’s termination of an employee for the employee’s lawful conduct, 28

1 otherwise unprotected by the Labor Code, occurring during nonworking hours away from the 2 employer’s premises”).

3 Applying Grinzi, the court in Hollie considered a case in which “[t]he basis of plaintiff’s §
4 98.6 claim is that he ‘complained’ – verbally and in e-mails – to his supervisors Dr. Swann and Dr.
5 Stevens about Concentra’s policy of not paying for overtime for medical providers,” and that such 6 complaints were protected activity. Hollie, 2012 WL 993522 at *7. The court rejected that 7 argument and held “as a matter of law that neither the verbal/e-mail protests, nor the protests ‘by 8 conduct,’ were activities protected under § 98.6, because they do not fall within the categories set
9 forth in that statute.” *Id.*³

10 Plaintiff makes no argument as to why or under what provision his complaints to his 11 superiors constitute a protected activity under the provisions of § 98.6. Hollie is directly on point, 12 and the Court agrees that Plaintiff has failed to state a § 98.6 claim for failure to allege that he 13 engaged in protected activity. As in Hollie, here Plaintiff merely alleges that he complained of his 14 employer’s conduct within the company itself, conduct the Hollie court found unprotected under the 15 Labor Code. Plaintiff’s conduct comes closest to whistleblowing activity under § 1102.5 which, as 16 discussed above, does not apply here absent an allegation that he made a report to a public authority.
17 As Plaintiff’s counsel admitted during oral argument, Plaintiff can identify no other provision under 18 the Labor Code within which his conduct would fall.

19 Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Defendant’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s § 98.6 claim 20 with prejudice.

21 C. Fourth Claim - Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy

22 Defendant next argues that Plaintiff fails to state a claim for common law wrongful 23 termination in violation of public policy (“wrongful termination” or “WTVPP”). See, e.g., Muniz v.
24 United Parcel Serv., Inc., 731 F. Supp. 2d 961, 966 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (describing a claim for 25 “‘Wrongful Employment Practices in Violation of Public Policy,’ which is often referred to as a 26

27 ³ Although Hollie considered a motion for summary judgment rather than a motion to 28 dismiss, the difference is immaterial here because the court made a legal ruling assuming the evidence supported Plaintiff’s allegations.

1 Tameny claim”) (citing Tameny, 27 Cal.3d at 176-177); see also id. at 178 (“[A]n employer may not
2 coerce compliance with [] unlawful directions by discharging an employee who refuses to follow
3 such an order.”); Green v. Ralee Eng’g Co., 19 Cal. 4th 66, 71 (1998) (describing Tameny as holding 4 “that at-will employees may recover tort damages from their employers if they can show they were 5 discharged in contravention of fundamental public policy.”).

6 Here, the wrongful termination is based on Plaintiff’s allegation that Defendant retaliated
7 against him after he complained of potentially unlawful employment practices. As the California
8 Court of Appeal has explained:

9 Wrongful termination from employment is tortious when the 10 termination occurs in violation of a fundamental public policy. (Gantt 11 v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal.4th 1083, 1090.). A policy is 12 “fundamental” when it is “carefully tethered” to a policy “delineated 13 in constitutional or statutory provisions” (id. at p. 1095), involves a 14 duty affecting the public at large, rather than one owed to or imposed 15 solely upon the parties to a dispute (id. at p. 1090), and is “ ‘well 16 established’ “ and “sufficiently clear” to the employer at the time of 17 the discharge (ibid.). Wrongful termination cases typically arise when 18 an employer retaliates against an employee for refusing to violate a 19 statute, performing a statutory obligation, exercising a statutory right, 20 or reporting an alleged violation of a statute of public importance.
21 (Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1238, 1256.).
22 However, as we noted in Soules v. Cadam, Inc. (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 23 390, 401, an action for tortious discharge is not strictly limited to these 24 situations but will lie “wherever the basis of the discharge contravenes 25 a fundamental public policy.”

26 Gould v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc., 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1147 (1995). Thus, “[a]n employee 27 establishes a claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy if he proves that the 28 employer ‘violated a policy that is (1) fundamental, (2) beneficial for the public, and (3) embodied in a statute or constitutional provision.’” Remus v. Fios, Inc., C 11-01264 CRB, 2012 WL 707477 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 5, 2012) (quoting Turner v. Anheuser–Busch, Inc., 7 Cal.4th 1238, 1256 (1994)); Cf.
Foley v. Interactive Data Corp., 47 Cal. 3d 654, 670-71 (1988) (“When the duty of an employee to disclose information to his employer serves only the private interest of the employer, the rationale underlying the Tameny cause of action is not implicated.”).

“In determining whether Plaintiff can establish a claim for retaliation, or wrongful termination, California courts apply the formula set forth in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411
U.S. 792, 802 (1973).” Id. “Thus, in order to establish a prima facie case supporting a retaliation

1 claim, a plaintiff must show: (1) that he engaged in a protected activity; (2) the employer subjected 2 him to an adverse employment action, and (3) a causal link between the protected activity and the 3 employer’s action.” Id. (citing Akers v. Cnty. of San Diego, 95 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1453 (2002)).

4 In the instant case, Plaintiff has stated a valid claim for wrongful termination. Although 5 Defendant cites authority equating the wrongful termination claim with the underlying statutory
6 causes of action, see, e.g., Quintana v. Quest Diagnostics Inc., 1:12CV00824 LJO DLB, 2012 WL
7 2339119 (E.D. Cal. June 19, 2012); Hollie, 2012 WL 993522 at *8; other cases with similar facts to 8 the instant case have looked to the public policy evinced by the purpose of various statutes as 9 opposed to a mechanical application of the statutory causes of action on an element-by-element 10 basis.

11 In Steffens, for example, although the court concluded the plaintiff could not make out a § 12 1102.5 claim based on the employee’s reports to a private employer, such conduct was protected 13 activity under the wrongful termination claim. Steffens, 2011 WL 666906 at *9-10 (“While 14 Steffens’s section 1102.5 claim alleged that Regus terminated her for fear that she would report
15 Regus, a more basic wrongful termination claim can allege that she was terminated simply for 16 complaining to Regus in the first place [about the failure to provide meal and rest breaks].”). The 17 Ninth Circuit recently affirmed Steffen’s holding, confirming there was “no dispute that Steffens 18 established a prima facie case of retaliation” based on complaints “about the company’s policy of 19 denying meal and rest breaks to hourly employees in violation of California law.” Steffens v. Regus
20 Group, PLC, 11-55379, 2012 WL 2393637 (9th Cir. June 26, 2012) (unpublished). Likewise, here
21 Plaintiff alleges he was fired for bringing potential illegal activity – unpaid overtime – to the 22 employer’s attention.⁴

23 Similarly, in Gould v. Maryland Sound Industries, Inc., 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1149 (1995), 24 the plaintiff “reported to MSI management that a number of MSI employees were currently working 25

26 ⁴ Whether the employer’s underlying conduct was actually illegal is immaterial. See Green
27 v. Ralee Eng’g Co., 19 Cal. 4th 66, 87 (1998) (“[A]n employee need not prove an actual violation of 28 law; it suffices if the employer fired him for reporting his reasonably based suspicions of illegal activity.”) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

1 overtime but not being paid overtime wages. Thus, Gould informed MSI about ongoing conduct
2 which was not only inimical to the public health and general welfare but also illegal.” The court
3 concluded that “if MSI discharged Gould in retaliation for his reporting violations of the overtime
4 wage law to MSI management, it violated a fundamental public policy of the state.” Id. at 1150.
5 The court distinguished Foley v. Interactive Data Corp., 47 Cal.3d 654, 669 (1988) – in which the 6 California Supreme Court rejected a claim based on an employee’s internal report of a supervisor’s
7 past illegal conduct as insufficiently connected to the public interest – from circumstances in which,
8 as here, the employee is reporting “present illegal or unsafe conduct with the current employer.”
9 Gould, 31 Cal. App. 4th at 1149. See generally Collier v. Superior Court, 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 10 1123 (1991) (finding that § 1102.5 “reflects the broad public policy interest in encouraging 11 workplace ‘whistleblowers,’ who may without fear of retaliation report concerns regarding an 12 employer’s illegal conduct,” and that “[e]ven though the statute addresses employee reports to public
13 agencies rather than to the employer and thus does not provide direct protection to petitioner in this 14 case, it does evince a strong public interest in encouraging employee reports of illegal activity in the 15 workplace”) (citations omitted).

16 Accordingly, the Court DENIES Defendant’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s wrongful 17 termination claim.

18 D. Fifth Claim - UCL

19 1. Failure to State a Claim

20 The UCL bars as unfair competition “any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or 21 practice.” Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. Defendant argues that Plaintiff fails to state a claim
22 under the UCL for unlawful or unfair business practices. Although Plaintiff’s FAC does not specify, 23 Plaintiff’s opposition limits his UCL claim to the unlawful prong, as he states only that he “has 24 alleged that Defendant violated the California Labor Code and thereby committed an unfair business 25 practice.” Opp. at 6 (citing FAC ¶¶ 38-39, 47-48, 76-78). The first two portions of the FAC to 26 which Plaintiff cites refer to his substantive allegations under §§ 1198.3 and 98.6. Therefore, his 27 UCL claims based on those statutes rise and fall with the substantive merits of those statutory claims
28 discussed above. Dorado v. Shea Homes Ltd. Partnership, No. 1:11-cv-01027 OWW SKO, 2011

1 WL 3875626, at *19 (E. D. Cal. Aug.31, 2011) (“Where a plaintiff cannot states a claim under the 2 ‘borrowed’ law, [h]e cannot state a UCL claim either.”) (quoting Smith v. State Farm Mutual
3 Automobile Ins. Co., 93 Cal. App. 4th 700, 718 (2001)). Plaintiff’s counsel confirmed at oral 4 argument that the current UCL claim merely alleges a violation based on the statutory claims the 5 Court has already rejected above.

6 However, Plaintiff’s final citation, to FAC ¶¶ 76-78, refers to his UCL allegations in the FAC
7 that “Defendants have followed and continue to follow the unlawful and unfair business practice of 8 requiring employees to work excess hours beyond the full-time work schedule, by performing tasks
9 that are outside the applicable job description, without compensation,” and that “Defendant Harland
10 has profited from and is unjustly enriched by this unfair business practice as Harland is able to retain 11 earned wages owed to its employees.” Although, as Plaintiff’s counsel admitted, such allegations 12 are not currently sufficient to allege specific unfair practices based on substantive violations of the 13 Labor Code (e.g., by requiring employees to work excess hours without compensation), Plaintiff
14 requests leave to amend to attempt to make a viable UCL claim. The Court therefore GRANTS
15 Defendant’s motion to dismiss with leave to amend.

16 2. Damages & Penalties

17 Defendant separately argues Plaintiff may not recover any damages or penalties under the 18 UCL, even assuming he has a viable claim. Plaintiff does not respond to this argument. As this 19 Court has previously explained, “[o]nly two forms of relief are available [under the UCL]: restitution
20 and/or an injunction.” Freeman v. ABC Legal Services, Inc., --- F. Supp. 2d ----, C-11-3007 EMC, 21 2012 WL 2589965 (N.D. Cal. July 3, 2012) (citing Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 29 22 Cal. 4th 1134, 1144 (2003) (citations omitted)). Thus, Plaintiff’s amended complaint may not seek 23 such damages.

24 3. Restitution

25 Finally, Defendant argues Plaintiff fails to provide any factual basis for restitution under the 26 UCL. The California Supreme Court has held “that orders for payment of wages unlawfully 27 withheld from an employee are [] a restitutionary remedy authorized by section 17203” of the UCL.
28 Cortez v. Purolator Air Filtration Products Co., 23 Cal. 4th 163, 177 (2000). Thus, to the extent

1 Plaintiff could allege a UCL claim based on Defendant's practice of failing to pay workers overtime,
2 withheld wages may be a form of restitution Plaintiff could obtain.

3 IV. CONCLUSION

4 For the foregoing reasons, The Court GRANTS Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiff's
5 statutory claims under §§ 98.6 and 1198.3 with prejudice, DENIES leave to amend to allege a §
6 1102.5 claim, DENIES Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiff's wrongful termination claim, and 7 GRANTS Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiff's UCL claim with leave to amend.

8 This Order disposes of Docket No. 61.

9
10 IT IS SO ORDERED.

11
12 Dated: August 14, 2012

13
14 _____
15 EDWARD M. CHEN
16 United States District Judge
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28