Kieran,

While we wait for your response to my March 30, 2011 email, we would like to address this language on the Minden Pictures website:

Since it is difficult to determine damages resulting from unauthorized usage, in the event you utilize an Image other than for the usage indicated on our Invoice, we agree to forego our right to sue you for copyright infringement and you agree to pay, as liquidated damages, a retroactive license equal to ten (10) times the normal price we would have charged for such unauthorized use within ten (10) days of our billing such fee. If you fail to timely make such payment, this liquidated damage provision shall be void and we shall have the right to sue for copyright infringement and/or breach of contract, for which we shall seek all damages and remedies available, including attorney's fees and all associated costs.

In parallel litigation, Pearson has successfully contended this or similar language is a pre-condition to suit, while it withholds usage information (known only to Pearson) to prevent the accurate calculation of a billing. So, Minden makes the following offer:

Minden Pictures offers to settle all copyright infringement and contract claims relating to invoices issued to Pearson for ten times the normal price it would have charged for the unauthorized uses made by Pearson. This offer shall expire in ten (10) days and is contingent upon Pearson's agreement that Pearson will (1) disclose within a reasonable time all unauthorized uses of the invoiced works, and (2) pay Minden Pictures within ten (10) days of receipt of its billing for such unauthorized uses.

Thank you for your timely response.

Chris
