UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

AMANDA FRLEKIN, AARON
GREGOROFF, SETH DOWNLING,
DEBRA SPEICHER, AND TAYLOR
KALIN, on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated,

No. C 13-03451 WHA

Plaintiffs,

ORDER RE MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY APPROVAL OF

v.

APPLE INC.,

Defendant.

INTRODUCTION

In this class action alleging violations of California wage and hour law, plaintiffs seek preliminary approval of a class and collective action settlement worth $29.9 million to benefit a total of 14,683 employees and former employees. The suit concerns the failure to compensate for time spent in bag and technology security checks over six years. The parties seek preliminary approval of a class settlement. Because the proposal would award adequate relief, preliminary approval is, to the extent stated below, GRANTED.

STATEMENT

The facts follow in relevant part. Defendant Apple, Inc. employed settlement class members in its 52 retail stores in California. Those employees were subject to a written

1 “Employee Package and Bag Searches” policy, which imposed mandatory searches of 2 employees’ bags, purses, backpacks, or briefcases whenever they left the store. Employee 3 time-keeping systems were generally kept within the store, so employees had to clock out prior 4 to undergoing a search, and their recorded hours worked did not account for the time waiting 5 for a search to be completed. Therefore, the time went uncompensated.

6 A class was certified. That order extended the class period “up to the present.” After 7 class certification, plaintiffs moved to disseminate notice and Apple produced a list of non-8 exempt Apple employees working at retail stores and subject to the bag policy between July 9 25, 2009, and August 10, 2015 (then roughly “the present”). Plaintiffs used this list of 14,293 10 to disseminate notice in 2015. Eventually, 407 opted out, and a class of 13,884 remained. The 11 parties cross-moved for summary judgment. An order found the waiting time non-12 compensable, and granted summary judgment for Apple and denied for plaintiffs. That 13 decision was overturned after an expedition through our court of appeals and the California 14 Supreme Court. On remand, a prior order set out a plan for damages trials, including a notice 15 and claims procedure, depositions if necessary, and motions practice (Tran Decl. ¶ 2; Dkt. Nos.
16 297, 339, 340, 351, 352, 407).

17 In February 2021, parties stipulated to expand the damages period from August 10, 2015, 18 through December 17, 2015, since the parties agreed that Apple ended its bag-check policy on 19 the latter date. A prior order granted that stipulation. Plaintiffs apparently asked Apple to 20 include additional class members who began employment between those two dates, but they 21 could not reach a stipulation. So, the parties only expanded the damages period, not the class 22 membership, to include the period of August 10 through December 17, 2015 (Dkt. Nos. 307, 23 374, 384).

24 Our parties mediated three times, the last time with Hon. Edward Infante (Ret.) of JAMS 25 on May 6, 2021, who proposed the settlement figure on which both sides ultimately agreed.
26 During mediation, plaintiffs asked Apple to produce a list of non-exempt workers “employed 27 at an Apple retail store in California between July 25, 2009, and December 17, 2015.” For 28 record-keeping reasons, Apple produced a list ending December 26, 2015. According to 1 Apple, 799 employees who began their employment during that period and who were 2 previously omitted from the class. As part of its review, Apple also realized that 16 individuals 3 who worked between August 3 and August 10, 2015, and who should have received class 4 notice in 2015, did not receive notice even though they were members of the class. This was 5 probably because of Apple’s lag in reporting new hires. These 16 are accounted for in the 799 6 (Riley Decl. ¶¶ 2–4).

7 Now the parties propose to end this protracted suit in a settlement which, if approved, 8 would be the largest of any security-check suit in California history. Counsel for both sides 9 declare that they have complied with Class-Action Fairness Act (CAFA) notice requirements 10 to government officials (Riley Decl. ¶ 2; Giaimo Decl. ¶¶ 2–5).

11 This order follows briefing, a supplemental brief, and a hearing, telephonic due to 12 COVID-19.

13 ANALYSIS

14 “The class action device, while capable of the fair and efficient adjudication of a large 15 number of claims, is also susceptible to abuse and carries with it certain inherent structural 16 risks.” Officers for Just. v. Civ. Serv. Comm’n of City & Cty. of San Francisco, 688 F.2d 615, 17 623 (9th Cir. 1982). A settlement purporting to bind absent class members must be fair, 18 reasonable, and adequate. See FRCP 23(e). A district court may consider and weigh a variety 19 of factors as the particular facts of the case demand, including: the amount offered in 20 settlement; the strength of plaintiff’s case; the stage of the proceedings; the expense and 21 complexity of further litigation; and other relevant considerations. Above all, the “primary 22 concern” must be the “protection of those class members . . . whose rights may not have been 23 given due regard by the negotiating parties.” Officers for Just., 688 F.2d at 624–25.

24 With a few modifications, this proposed settlement measures up.

25 First, the total settlement figure of $29.9 million appears adequate. A net of $18,895,333 26 ($19,007,458 when accounting for the PAGA class portion) will go to the class of 14,683.
 27 Separately, Apple will pay $757,000 to cover the employer’s share of the payroll taxes owed 28 on the wage portion of the settlement fund, for a grand total payment by Apple of $30,656,000.

1 Included in that amount will be $449,000 to solve the PAGA claim, of which 75% will be 2 distributed to the LWDA and 25% ($112,125) to the fund for eligible class members) (Shalov
 3 and Kralowec Decl. Exh. 1 (hereafter, “Stip.”) §§ 1.32, 3.4.1.6, 3.4.6.1, 3.4.6.2).

4 Second, at this late stage, the parties seek to expand the settlement class by the 799
 5 workers. The parties apparently waited until this late date to agree to expand the settlement 6 class members because Apple had contended that employees who worked between August 10 7 and December 17, 2015, had claims time-barred by the statute of limitations. In settlement, 8 however, Apple agreed to include those individuals so as to resolve all related claims. Again, 9 the period of membership extends to December 26 (not 17) because of Apple’s record-keeping 10 system. Valid negotiations appear to have led to this change in the class composition (Dunne 11 Decl. ¶¶ 2–3).

12 A new settlement class shall be CERTIFIED as follows: the settlement class shall consist 13 of the 13,884 workers certified in 2015 (minus opt-outs), plus the 799 proposed “new class 14 members” whose bags were checked between December 17, 2015 and December 31, 2015, for 15 a total of 14,683 class members. This includes all workers who began employment between 16 July 25, 2009, and December 26, 2015; while the damages period shall extend between July 17 25, 2009, and December 31, 2015 (Shalov and Kralowec Decl. ¶ 39).

18 Given that 799 new class members will join the party at this very late stage, they must 19 receive 105 DAYS, not 60 days, to lodge any objections or to opt out. This is to ensure that 20 adequate efforts are made to locate these individuals. For the sixteen individuals who should 21 have received notice in 2015 but who Apple left off the roster, Apple shall bear the cost of 22 their notice. Counsel for Apple shall report back to the Court before any motion for final 23 settlement whether or not all sixteen received notice. All class notices must also add an 24 explanation of how and why the class came to add 799 new class members at this stage.

25 Third, individual settlement class members would receive, on average, $1,286.96 26 (assuming zero additional opt-outs), on a pro rata basis. The calculation would use Apple 27 business records to determine the number of shifts that each class member worked during the 28 class period. This payout would represent 90% –160% of the realistic value of their claims.

1 Parties arrived at this range by utilizing favorable assumptions: an average wage rate that rises 2 far above the minimum and figuring five minutes of waiting in line for the bag/technology 3 check per shift. On average, settlement class members would collect 20.2% of the maximum 4 recovery (Shalov and Kralowec Decl. ¶ 67). The above-minimum wage rate and average of 5 five minutes spent in a bag search favor the class members, given the likely proof problems on 6 these points at damages' trials (including the de minimus and good faith defenses). The 7 settlement does not require claim forms, another substantial plus. On the other hand, the 8 amounts paid to the settlement class members do not count as earnings or compensation for 9 purposes of any benefits (e.g., § 401(k) plans or retirement plans) sponsored by Apple. This is 10 a blow to those workers who should have received those benefits along with the wages earned 11 but, given the substantial hurdles ahead in the damages suit, it is not dispositive (Stip. § 3.7.2).
12 The overall and net settlement amounts favor settlement.

13 Fourth, the fund is nonreversionary; checks uncashed within 180 days (or 30 days of 14 reissue, whichever is later) go to the California Alliance of Boys & Girls Clubs' Workforce 15 Readiness program (id. § 3.6.10; Shalov and Kralowec Decl. ¶ 48). Since the period for 16 cashing checks begins to run with (re)issuance, however, counsel and the claims administrator 17 must respond to any class member's request for reissuance within SEVEN DAYS, to prevent a 18 scenario in which the 180 days runs out while a class member's request for reissuance remains 19 unanswered. The notice of outstanding check should explain this to class members.

20 Fifth, all issues concerning attorney's fees and costs will be decided later. A red flag, 21 however, is Apple's "clean sailing" agreement not to oppose an award up to 25% of the fund 22 (Stip. § 3.4.1.4). Our court of appeals has held that this is a red flag indicating a potentially 23 collusive settlement, because "when the parties negotiate a 'clear sailing' arrangement 24 providing for the payment of attorneys' fees separate and apart from class funds," a settlement 25 carries a risk of "enabling a defendant to pay class counsel excessive fees and costs in 26 exchange for counsel accepting an unfair settlement on behalf of the class." In re Bluetooth
27 Headset Prod. Liab. Litig., 654 F.3d 935, 947 (9th Cir. 2011). In fact, the Court's prior order 28

1 herein regarding class actions and class action settlements forbids such agreements for this 2 exact reason. The order states (Dkt. No. 21):

3 To avoid collusive settlements, the Court prefers that all settlements 4 avoid any agreement as to attorney's fees and leave that to the judge.
5 If the defense insists on an overall cap, then the Court will decide how 6 much will go to the class and how much will go to counsel, just as in 7 common fund cases. Please avoid agreement on any division, tentative 8 or otherwise.

9 This violation stands out as a sore thumb and a red flag. The Court will decide costs and 10 attorney's fees at final approval.

11 Sixth, the settlement seeks $10,000 as a service payment for plaintiff Amanda Frlekin, 12 and the same to each of four other class representatives. This is another red flag and will not 13 be approved.

14 Seventh, the notices of objection and requests for exclusion appear far too burdensome.
15 The request for exclusion requirements would disqualify any request that does not precisely 16 comport with "magic words" tests: under parties' proposal, class members would be required 17 to request exclusion by mail by naming the "Frlekin case" or the "Apple bag check case," 18 among other specific requirements. These specifications are too demanding on non-lawyer 19 class members. Furthermore, parties must develop and provide a template for opt-out to be 20 mailed to class members and provided electronically, which is pre-filled with the case name 21 and number. If a class member seeks to opt out not using the provided template, parties must 22 honor opt-out requests that substantially conform to naming the suit, even if their language 23 does not precisely match the above. Furthermore, a would-be opt-out who omits a required 24 field (e.g. signature) must be given the chance to correct her mistake.

25 Likewise, the notices of objection may not be disqualified simply because the sender fails 26 to complete one of the requirements (e.g. stating whether or not she will attend the final 27 approval hearing, or stating both the case name and number). Parties shall accept an objection 28 if the sender states either the case name or its number, or the descriptors used for opt-outs. An

1 objecting class member must be informed of any omission within SEVEN DAYS and permitted 2 to fix it (Stip. §§ 3.5.9; 3.5.10).

3 Eighth, the release appears reasonable, tailored to the claims pursued in the consolidated 4 complaint in this action and excluding state claims dismissed with prejudice, or claims pursued 5 in named plaintiff Taylor Kalin’s notice letter that didn’t enter into the consolidated complaint 6 (id. §§ 3.4.2, 3.4.3; Dkt. Nos. 1, 75, 223; Kalin, No. C 13-04727, Dkt. Nos. 1, 13).

7 Ninth, the proposal suggests serious, non-collusive negotiation. Both sides have dueled 8 for a long time. For example, discovery included twenty depositions by Apple, fourteen by 9 plaintiffs. Apple produced 57,414 documents; plaintiffs produced 1,162 (Stip. § 2.2).

10 Tenth, this case remains reasonably complex. We are poised to set a date for one or more 11 damages trials. Each class member must estimate the bag checks that they suffered. Their 12 accounts would be subject to cross-examination, during batched trials. The parties disagreed 13 about whether minimum wage rates or regular hourly wage rates should apply, the de minimus
14 defense, the good-faith defense, and the availability of liquidated damages of California Labor 15 Code Section 1194.2.

16 Eleventh, notice to the class must be “reasonably calculated, under all the circumstances, 17 to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity to 18 present their objections.” Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Tr. Co., 339 U.S. 306, 314 19 (1950) (citations omitted). Here, Angeion would serve as claims administrator. Apple will 20 provide the “employee list.” The parties propose to mail notices of settlement (Exh. A) to all 21 existing class members and send a different notice of settlement (Exh. B) to all new class 22 members by First Class U.S. mail and email. Angeion “will conduct a national change of 23 address search and a skip trace for the most current mailing address of all former employee 24 settlement class members and will update such former employees’ addresses as necessary” 25 (Stip. § 3.5.6).

26 The exterior of the envelope for the mailing notice shall state “Important Class Action 27 Notice” and shall state that it is “From the United States District Court, Northern District of 28 California, Honorable William Alsup, 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94102,”

United States District Court
Northern District of California

1 with the return address directing service to Class Counsel. The statement shall be printed at a 2 location on the envelope such that the Court’s mailing address could not possibly be mistaken 3 as the class member’s mailing address. This issue has recently arisen in other cases and 4 resulted in the Court receiving the class notices. The administrator must take care to avoid it.

5 On balance, the factors listed above weigh in favor of the settlement.

6 CONCLUSION

7 The proposed settlement ranks as adequate at this stage, preliminary approval is 8 GRANTED subject to final approval. The class definition is CERTIFIED to include the 9 additional 799 Apple employees as described above. In the interim:

10 1. Class counsel will send the approved class notice via email (for class members 11 whose email addresses are known) or via first-class mail (for the remainder) to the class by 12 JANUARY 11, 2022. Both Apple and class counsel shall also post such notice to their websites by 13 this date.

14 2. Class members’ objections to the proposed settlement shall be due APRIL 26, 15 2022.

16 3. The parties’ replies to the objections shall be due MAY 10, 2022.

17 4. The parties shall move for final approval, costs, and attorney’s fees by MAY 30, 18 2022. The motion for attorney’s fees should detail the lodestar.

19 5. The parties’ declarations attesting to the provision of class service is due June 15, 20 2022.

21 6. Class members’ objections to final approval and attorneys’ fees and costs motions 22 shall be due July 5, 2022.

23 7. The final approval fairness hearing shall take place at 8:00 A.M. on JULY 7, 2022.

24 IT IS SO ORDERED.

25 Dated: December 28, 2021.
