UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

GEORGE EDWARD BARICH, Plaintiff,
v.
CITY OF COTATI, et al.,
Defendants.

Case No. 15-cv-00350-VC

ORDER GRANTING BARICH'S
MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT; DENYING DEFENDANTS' CROSS-MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Re: Dkt. Nos. 29, 30, 34

Barich's motion for partial summary judgment is granted. The defendants' cross-motion for summary judgment is denied.

I

Barich alleges that Chief Parish violated his First Amendment rights by threatening to arrest him if he recorded Chief Parish. Barich's motion for summary judgment on this claim is granted. The defendants' cross-motion for summary judgment on this claim is denied.

In his deposition testimony, Chief Parish explained that he was uniformed, armed, and present in his capacity as Chief of Police at a Cotati City Council meeting on April 22, 2014. After the meeting was over, Chief Parish confronted Barich outside the city council chamber. In his own declaration, Chief Parish recounted what happened next: "I told [Barich] that if he were recording me—and thereby lying to me by telling me that he was not—that I would arrest him." In his deposition testimony, Chief Parish explained that he "wanted to make sure [he] wasn't being recorded."

From these undisputed facts, it is clear that Chief Parish violated Barich's First Amendment rights. To succeed on a First Amendment claim, a plaintiff must prove that a state actor did something that "would chill . . . a person of ordinary firmness from future First

1 Amendment activities," and that the state actor's conduct was motivated (at least in part) by a
2 desire to chill the First Amendment activity. Mendocino Env'tl. Ctr. v. Mendocino Cty., 192 F.3d
3 1283, 1300 (9th Cir. 1999); see also Brodheim v. Cry, 584 F.3d 1262, 1271 (9th Cir. 2009).
4 Filming a police officer on duty is protected First Amendment activity. And threatening to arrest
5 someone "is enough to chill First Amendment rights." Hodgkins ex rel. Hodgkins v. Peterson, 355
6 F.3d 1048, 1056 (7th Cir. 2004).

7 It does not matter that Barich was not, in fact, recording this particular conversation with 8 Chief Parish. As Chief Parish knew, Barich frequently records or seeks to record public officials
9 in Cotati. Chief Parish's threat was therefore significant from a First Amendment standpoint
10 regardless of whether Barich sought to exercise his right during this encounter with Chief Parish.

11 The defendants contend that Barich was never actually "chilled" because he has recorded
12 other Cotati public officials since his interaction with Chief Parish. But "[b]ecause it would be 13 unjust to allow a defendant to escape liability for a First Amendment violation merely because an 14 unusually determined plaintiff persists in his protected activity, [Barich] does not have to 15 demonstrate that his speech was actually inhibited or suppressed." Rhodes v. Robinson, 408 F.3d
16 559, 569 (9th Cir. 2005). The chilling effect of a defendant's conduct is measured objectively, not 17 subjectively: all that matters is whether a defendant's conduct would chill a person of ordinary
18 firmness. No reasonable trier of fact could doubt that a person of ordinary firmness would be 19 deterred by the threat of arrest. See Hodgkins, 355 F.3d at 1056.

20 Nor is Chief Parish entitled to qualified immunity. It has been clear in this circuit since at 21 least 1995 that the First Amendment protects a "right to film matters of public interest." Fordyce
22 v. City of Seattle, 55 F.3d 436, 439 (9th Cir. 1995). In other words, "the First Amendment protects 23 the filming of government officials in public spaces." Glik v. Cunniffe, 655 F.3d 78, 83 (1st Cir.
24 2011) (citing Fordyce, 55 F.3d at 439); see also Smith v. City of Cumming, 212 F.3d 1332, 1333
25 (11th Cir. 2000) ("The First Amendment protects the right to gather information about what public 26 officials do on public property, and specifically, a right to record matters of public interest.").
27 Restrictions on recording police officers in public places "interfere[] with the gathering and 28 dissemination of information about government officials performing their duties in public." Am.

1 Civil Liberties Union v. Alvarez, 679 F.3d 583, 600 (7th Cir. 2012). Thus, "under the law of this
2 circuit there is and was" at the time of Chief Parish's conduct "a clearly established right to record
3 police officers carrying out their official duties." Crago v. Leonard, No. 13-cv-531, 2014 WL
4 3849954, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 5, 2014), report and recommendation adopted, 2014 WL 4435954
5 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2014); see also Adkins v. Limtiaco, 537 F. App'x 721, 722 (9th Cir. 2013)
6 (unpublished) (recognizing a clearly established right to photograph police officers in a public
7 place).¹

8 Finally, the City of Cotati is liable for Chief Parish's constitutional violation under Monell
9 v. Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658 (1978). "[A] local government may be held liable
10 under § 1983 when the individual who committed the constitutional tort was an official with final 11 policy-making authority." Clouthier v. Cty. of Contra Costa, 591 F.3d 1232, 1250 (9th Cir. 2010).
12 The defendants do not dispute that Chief Parish is an official with final policy-making authority
13 for the City of Cotati with respect to law enforcement matters, and indeed it appears that he is.
14 "[W]hether a particular official has final policymaking authority is a question of state law." Jett v.
15 Dallas Indep. Sch. Dist., 491 U.S. 701, 737 (1989). Under California law, "[t]he police 16 department of a city is under the control of the chief of police." Cal. Gov't Code § 38630(a); see 17 also Collins v. City of San Diego, 841 F.2d 337, 341 (9th Cir. 1988).

18 In sum, at the time of Chief Parish's conduct, Barich had a clearly established First 19 Amendment right to record a police officer on public property. Nevertheless, Chief Parish told
20 Barich that, if he exercised his First Amendment right, he would be arrested. Chief Parish made
21 this threat to deter Barich from recording him, and a reasonable person of ordinary firmness would 22 in fact be deterred by this threat of arrest. For these reasons, Barich is entitled to summary
23 judgment against Chief Parish on this claim. And because Chief Parish is a policymaker for the 24 City of Cotati for these purposes, Barich is also entitled to summary judgment against the City.

27 ¹ "In determining whether [Barich's] rights in this case were clearly established, and whether 28 a reasonable person would have known his or her actions violated these rights, we may look at unpublished decisions and the law of other circuits, in addition to Ninth Circuit precedent."

II

Barich also alleges that Chief Parish violated his First Amendment rights by threatening to arrest him for calling a public official (a planning commissioner for the City of Cotati) a "liar." The defendants' motion for summary judgment on this claim is denied. (Barich has not cross-moved for summary judgment on this issue.)

On this claim, many facts are disputed. According to Barich, he turned toward the planning commissioner as he was leaving the city council chamber, and – from a considerable distance away – simply called the planning commissioner a "liar." In this account, Barich was peaceful and nonthreatening; he did not raise his voice or his hands. According to witnesses for the defendants, Barich "towered" over the planning commissioner and "bent down so that his face was just a few feet from" the planning commissioner's. In this account, Barich's "face was red and he yelled with such vehemence and ferocity that [the planning commissioner] feared for [his] safety"; Barich "gesture[d] with his hands" in a way that suggested that "he was either going to hit somebody or that violence would otherwise erupt."

This factual dispute precludes summary judgment. Because it is undisputed that Barich's exchange with the planning commissioner occurred after the city council meeting was over, cases concerning a city's authority to manage its governmental meetings are not relevant. Cf. Norse v. City of Santa Cruz, 629 F.3d 966, 975 (9th Cir. 2010) (en banc); Kindt v. Santa Monica Rental Control Bd., 67 F.3d 266, 270-71 (9th Cir. 1995); White v. City of Norwalk, 900 F.2d 1421, 1425 (9th Cir. 1990). Instead, the question is whether Barich's speech fell outside the First Amendment because it constituted "fighting words," see United States v. Poocha, 259 F.3d 1077, 1080-81 (9th Cir. 2001), or a "true threat," see United States v. Szabo, 760 F.3d 997, 1002-03 (9th Cir. 2014). If a jury were to credit the defendants' version of events, it could reasonably find that either of these two conditions was satisfied. If a jury were to credit Barich's version of events, it could not.

For similar reasons, Chief Parish is not entitled to qualified immunity. "This is the type of qualified immunity [issue] where a factual dispute that precludes entry of summary judgment on the underlying constitutional question also precludes a finding of qualified immunity at the summary judgment stage." Smith v. Mack, 2015 WL 3830662, at *4 (N.D. Cal. June 19, 2015); see also Tolan v. Cotton, 134 S. Ct. 1861, 1865-66 (2014) (per curiam). If the facts are as Barich contends, it would have been obvious to every reasonable officer that he could not threaten to arrest Barich for what he had done. "Police officers have been on notice at least since 1990 that it is unlawful to use their authority to retaliate against individuals for their protected speech." Ford v. City of Yakima, 706 F.3d 1188, 1195 (9th Cir. 2013).
