STIPULATION AND [PROPOSED] ORDER FOR ENTRY OF JUDGMENT AND DISMISSAL WITH PREJUDICE

Complaint filed: February 22, 2016
 Trial Date: None set

Senior District Judge Susan Illston
 Courtroom 1

22 STIPULATED ORDER AND FINAL JUDGMENT

24 On February 22, 2016 Plaintiff SWISS RE INTERNATIONAL SE, SUCCESSOR IN 25 INTEREST TO ZURICH SPECIALTIES LONDON, LTD (HEREINAFTER ZSLL) filed its 26 Complaint for Declaratory Relief, Reimbursement, Contribution, and Equitable Subrogation.
 27 On July 28, 2016 Plaintiff ZSLL filed its Motion for Partial Summary Judgment against 28

1 defendant COMAC INVESTMENTS, INC. ("COMAC") and defendant 200-298 PORTOLA
2 DRIVE HOMEOWNERS' ASSOCIATION ("PORTOLA"). The Motion for Partial Summary
3 Judgment sought an order determining ZSLL does not have, and never did have a duty to 4 defend or indemnify COMAC in an underlying action brought by PORTOLA against COMAC
5 entitled 200-298 Portola Drive HOA v. Comac Investments, Inc., filed in San Francisco
6 Superior Court Case No. CGC-14-541154 ("Underlying Action"). After consideration of the 7 moving and opposing papers, and oral argument, the court issued an Order on September 27,
8 2016 determining ZSLL does not have, and never did have a duty to defend or indemnify
9 COMAC for the claims made in the underlying case. A copy of the court's Order is attached
10 hereto as Exhibit 1.

11
12 The parties to the case have now stipulated to resolve the remaining matters in dispute
13 in this action and for entry of final judgment pursuant to the terms of this stipulation.

14 It is hereby stipulated between ZSLL and PORTOLA that a final judgment be entered
15 on ZSLL's Complaint pursuant to the court's order on the Motion for Partial Summary
16 Judgment. ZSLL stipulates it will not seek costs from PORTOLA, and PORTOLA stipulates 17 that it will waive all rights to appeal or otherwise challenge or contest the court's order on the 18 Motion for Partial Summary Judgment.

20 As to the Third Cause of Action for reimbursement of defense fees and costs against 21 COMAC, ZSLL hereby dismisses the Third Cause of Action against COMAC, COMAC in 22 exchange agrees to entry of Final Judgment pursuant to the court's order on the Motion for 23 Partial Summary Judgment and agrees it will not appeal, challenge or contest the court's order
24 on the Motion for Partial Summary Judgment. Further ZSLL and COMAC agree to waive any 25 costs or fees they might otherwise be entitled to.

26 As to defendant SIRIUS AMERICA INSURANCE COMPANY AS SUCCESSOR IN 27 INTEREST TO MUTUAL SERVICE CASUALTY INS. CO. ("SIRIUS"), ZSLL sued it on 28

1 alternative claims for Contribution, Equitable Subrogation and Declaratory Relief in the event
2 it was not successful on its action for Declaratory Relief against COMAC and PORTOLA.
3 Pursuant to the court's order on the Motion for Partial Summary Judgment that claim is now
4 moot, and ZSSL and SIRIUS have entered into a stipulation for a dismissal with prejudice of 5 the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Causes of Action, which named only SIRIUS, in exchange for a 6 waiver of costs by SIRIUS.

8 ZSSL, COMAC, PORTOLA and SIRIUS stipulate to entry of this Final Judgment and 9 order to resolve in this action between them.

10 NOW THEREFORE, plaintiff and defendants, having requested the court to enter this
11 order and the court having considered the order, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED
12 AND DECREED AS FOLLOWS:

13 FINDINGS

- 14 1. The court has jurisdiction over this matter.
- 15
- 16 2. The Complaint alleges that ZSSL never had a duty to defend or indemnify
17 COMAC as a matter of law in the Underlying Action.
- 18
- 19 3. Pursuant to the court's Order on the Motion for Partial Summary Judgment of 20 ZSSL, ZSSL does not have and never did have a duty to defend or indemnify COMAC
21 against the claims made in the Underlying Action .
- 22
- 23 4. COMAC and PORTOLA waive all rights to appeal, or otherwise challenge or 24 contest the validity of this Order.
- 25
- 26 5. ZSSL hereby waives any claim for litigation costs or litigation fees against 27 COMAC and PORTOLA.

Case No. 16-cv-00863-SI

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S
MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Re: Dkt. Nos. 32, 36, 38

On September 2, 2016, the Court held a hearing on plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment. For the reasons set forth below, the Court GRANTS the motion.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Swiss Re International SE ("SRI"), successor in interest to Zurich Specialties London, Ltd. ("ZSLL") (hereinafter, SRI and ZSLL are jointly referred to as "ZSLL"), filed this lawsuit seeking declaratory relief concerning its duty to defend and indemnify defendant Comac Investments, Inc. ("Comac") under four commercial liability insurance policies ZSLL issued to Comac covering the time period of June 19, 1998 through June 19, 2002. This declaratory relief action arises from an underlying case filed on August 14, 2014 entitled 200-298 Portola Drive Homeowners' Association v. Comac Investments, Inc., San Francisco Superior Court Case No. CGC-14-541154 ("Underlying Action"). Dkt. No. 33-3.¹ In the Underlying Action, Portola Drive Homeowners' Association ("Association") seeks in excess of $5 million in damages for numerous

¹ The Court GRANTS plaintiff's request for judicial notice of the state court documents.

1 construction defects at a development of 23 units and 7 townhomes (the “subject premises”). The 2 alleged construction defects include reverse sloped decks, negative sloping of wall caps, open roof
3 eaves, and lack of sealant on lag bolts. Dkt. No. 33-6 at ¶¶ 30, 37, 42, 47, 101. The Association 4 alleges that these construction defects have resulted in significant water damage and flooding to 5 the subject premises. Id. Construction of the subject premises was completed in 1996. Id. at ¶ 28.

6 Pursuant to California Code of Civil Procedure § 337.15, latent construction defect claims 7 are subject to a ten-year statute of repose, which commences upon substantial completion of the 8 construction. Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15. The statute of repose is not subject to equitable 9 tolling. See Lantzy v. Centex Homes, 31 Cal. 4th 363, 367 (2003). The only exception to the 10 statute of repose is provided in subsection (f), which allows for “actions based on willful
11 misconduct or fraudulent concealment” after the ten years have run. To avoid the ten-year statute
12 of repose, the Association’s first amended complaint in the Underlying Action alleges, inter alia, 13 that the construction defects “would have been observable by any knowledgeable contractor or 14 supervisor, [and that] any contractor who chose not to remedy them would be doing so with actual 15 or constructive knowledge that injury was a probable result.” Dkt. No. 33-6 at ¶¶ 53, 55.

16 In the Underlying Action, ZSLL is representing Comac subject to a complete reservation
17 of rights. ZSLL reserved the right to assert that the terms of the insurance policies were not met,
18 and that the Underlying Action was subject to the “expected or intended injury” policy exclusion
19 and/or Cal. Ins. Code § 533, which precludes insurer liability for willful acts of insureds. ZSLL 20 also reserved the right to file this action for declaratory relief and/or seek reimbursement of 21 expenditures in the defense of the Underlying Action. The defendants in this case are Comac, the 22 general contractor and/or developer for the subject premises; the Association; and Sirius America
23 Insurance Company (“Sirius”), successor in interest to Mutual Service Casualty Insurance
24 Company (“MSCI”), which also issued commercial liability insurance policies to Comac. Dkt.
25 No. 1 at ¶¶ 4, 13. Sirius filed a Notice of Non-Opposition to ZSLL’s Motion for Partial Summary
26 Judgment. Dkt. No. 35. Comac filed a Notice of Joinder in the Association’s Opposition. Dkt.

1 No. 37.²

2 ZSLL's complaint alleges the following causes of action: (1) declaratory relief that ZSLL
3 does not have, and never did have, a duty to defend Comac in the Underlying Action as a matter of 4 law; (2) declaratory relief that ZSLL does not have a duty to indemnify Comac in the Underlying 5 Action as a matter of law; (3) reimbursement for fees and costs ZSLL has incurred to defend
6 Comac for non-covered claims; (4) equitable contribution from Sirius in the event this Court
7 determines ZSLL has an obligation to defend and/or indemnify Comac in the Underlying Action;
8 (5) equitable subrogation from Sirius in the event this Court determines ZSLL has an obligation to 9 defend and/or indemnify Comac in the Underlying Action; and (6) declaratory relief that Sirius is 10 obligated to defend and indemnify Comac equally with ZSLL. Dkt. No. 1 at ¶¶ 39-72.

11
12 I. Terms of the Policy

13 The policy's liability insuring clause for property damage provides as follows:

14 a. We will pay those sums that the insured becomes legally obligated to pay as 15 damages because of "bodily injury" or "property damage" to which this insurance
16 applies. We will have the right and duty to defend the insured against any "suit"
17 seeking those damages. However, we will have no duty to defend the insured 18 against any "suit" seeking damages for "bodily injury" or "property damage" to 19 which this insurance does not apply. We may, at our discretion, investigate any 20 "occurrence" and settle any claim or "suit" that may result. But:

21 (1) The amount we will pay for damages is limited as described in 22 LIMITS OF INSURANCE (SECTION III); and

23 (2) Our right and duty to defend end when we have used up the 24 applicable limit of insurance in the payment of judgments or 25 settlements under Coverages A or B or medical expenses under 26 Coverage C.

27 No other obligation or liability to pay sums or perform acts or services is covered
28 unless explicitly provided for under SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS –
COVERAGES A AND B.

25 ² ZSLL asserts that in the related case Sirius America Ins. Co. v. Comac, 3:15-cv-03462
26 SI, Sirius and Comac disputed whether Sirius had a duty to defend and/or indemnify Comac in the 27 same Underlying Action under a "nearly identical" policy that MCSI had issued to Comac. The 28 Association was not a party to that case. In response to a motion for summary judgment in the Sirius action, the parties reached a settlement and Comac stipulated there was no coverage under the policies and Comac acknowledged Sirius never had a duty to defend or indemnify Comac in the Underlying Action. Dkt. Nos. 31, 32 in 3:15-cv-03462 SI.

1 b. This insurance applies to “bodily injury” and “property damage” only if:

2 (1) The “bodily injury” or “property damage” is caused by an 3 “occurrence” that takes place in the “coverage territory”; and

4 (2) The “bodily injury” or “property damage” occurs during the 5 policy period.

6 c. Damages because of “bodily injury” include damages claimed by any person or 7 organization for care, loss of services or death resulting at any time from the 8 “bodily injury”.

9 Dkt. No. 33-7 at 8. The word “occurrence” is defined in Section V as follows:

10 12. “Occurrence” means an accident, including continuous or repeated exposure to 11 substantially the same general harmful conditions.

12 Id. at 19. The “expected or intended injury” exclusion in Coverage A, which covers bodily injury
13 and property damages liability, states in relevant part:

14 2. Exclusions

15 This insurance does not apply to:

16 a. Expected or Intended Injury

17 “Bodily injury” or “property damage” expected or intended from the 18 standpoint of the insured. This exclusion does not apply to “bodily 19 injury” resulting from the use of reasonable force to protect persons
20 or property. Id. at 8

21 II. The Underlying Action

22 On August 14, 2014, the Association filed the Underlying Action against Comac in San 23 Francisco County Superior Court, alleging Comac’s responsibility for construction defects at the 24 subject premises. On August 25, 2015, the Association filed its First Amended Complaint. In the 25 First Amended Complaint, the Association alleges that Comac’s Responsible Managing Officer
26 (“RMO”), Brian Gerard McEvoy, observed defective workmanship of the subcontractors working 27 on the subject premises, but did not correct the defects in order to not incur additional costs. Dkt.
28 No. 33-6 at ¶¶ 33-55. Among the Association’s allegations are:

33. BRIAN GERARD MCEVOY observed the reverse slope of the joists and substrate in discharge of his responsibilities to exercise direct supervision and control pursuant to California Business & Professions Code § 7068.1 as Qualify Partner of the General Contractor, JBM&K and RMO of the builder, COMAC.

35. BRIAN GERARD MCEVOY, charged with supervising actual construction, making technical and administrative decisions, checking jobs for proper workmanship, and direct supervision on construction job sites pursuant to California Code of Regulations §823(b), made the decision not to incur the cost to correct the reverse slope condition, but rather directed that that condition be covered up by placement of the mortar bed and tile. The decision was made in order to maximize profit for COMAC, developer of the project, of which he was a partner.

36. Because of that decision to avoid the cost of remedying this improper workmanship, the reverse slope of the joists and substrate was invisible once the mortar bed and tile were placed. Once COMAC decided to cover up this defect, it was not discoverable by regular visual inspections, which were properly conducted by Plaintiff pursuant to California Civil Code § 5550(a).

Id. at ¶¶ 33, 35-36. The Association further alleges:

53. As the above conditions would have been observable by any knowledgeable contractor or supervisor, any contractor who chose not to remedy them would be doing so with actual or constructive knowledge that injury was a probable result. Likewise, any knowledgeable construction supervisor who chose not to direct the contractor to remedy the condition would have done so with actual or constructive knowledge that injury was a probable result.

55. The actions of Defendant COMAC INVESTMENTS, INC., and other DEVELOPER DEFENDANTS, JBM&K CONSTRUCTION, and DOES 1 through 500 and BRIAN GERARD MCEVOY amount to reckless disregard and/or willful misconduct as defined by California Code of Civil Procedure § 337.15(f) and Acosta v. Glenfed Development Corp., 128 Cal. App. 4th 1278 (2005).

Id. at ¶¶ 53, 55.

LEGAL STANDARD

Summary judgment is proper if the pleadings, the discovery and disclosure materials on file, and any affidavits show that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). The moving party bears the initial burden of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). The moving party, however, has no burden to produce evidence showing the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Id. at 325. Rather, the burden on the moving party may be discharged by pointing out to the district court that there is an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case. Id.

1 defend exists if the insurer ‘becomes aware of, or if the third party lawsuit pleads, facts giving rise
2 to the potential for coverage under the insuring agreement.’” Id. (quoting Waller v. Truck Ins.
3 Exchange, Inc., 11 Cal.4th 1, 19 (1995)).

5 I. “Accident”

6 The ZSLL policies require that “[t]he . . . ‘property damage’ must be caused by an 7 ‘occurrence,’” which is defined as “an accident, including continuous or repeated exposure to 8 substantially the same general harmful conditions.” ZSLL argues that there is no coverage for the 9 Underlying Action because the Association’s complaint alleges willful misconduct, which by 10 definition cannot be an “accident.” ZSLL argues that insurance protects against contingent or 11 unknown risks, and intentional acts are deemed purposeful, not accidental. ZSLL argues that the 12 allegations that Comac intentionally covered up specific construction defects to avoid the cost of 13 fixing them during construction cannot be labeled as “accidental,” and thus there is no coverage.

14 The Association argues that the Association’s complaint in the Underlying Action does 15 allege an “accident” because the Association does not allege that Comac’s principal McEvoy 16 intended or expected to cause damage. The Association asserts that the cases cited by ZSLL are 17 all distinguishable because they either involved the insured committing fraud or making 18 misrepresentations, or insureds engaging in behavior which they intended to cause harm.

19 “An intentional act is not an ‘accident’ within the plain meaning of the word.” Royal 20 Globe Ins. Co. v. Whitaker, 181 Cal.App.3d 532, 537 (1986). “Under California law, the word 21 ‘accident’ in the coverage clause of a liability policy refers to the conduct of the insured for which 22 liability is sought to be imposed on the insured.” Delgado, 47 Cal. 4th at 311. “An accident does 23 not happen when the insured performs a deliberate act unless some additional, unexpected, 24 independent, and unforeseen happening occurs that produces the damage.” Fire Ins. Exchange v.
25 Superior Court (Bourguignon), 181 Cal.App.4th 388, 392 (2010) (holding that “building a 26 structure that encroaches onto another’s property is not an accident even if the owners acted in the 27 good faith but mistaken belief that they were legally entitled to build where they did”). “Where 28 the insured intended all of the acts that resulted in the victim’s injury, the event may not be

1 deemed an ‘accident’ merely because the insured did not intend to cause injury. The insured’s
2 subjective intent is irrelevant.” Id. at 392 (internal citations omitted). “That does not mean,
3 however, that coverage is always precluded merely because the insured acted intentionally and the 4 victim was injured.” State Farm Gen. Ins. Co. v. Frake, 197 Cal.App.4th 568, 580 (2011)
5 (internal quotation marks omitted). “Rather, an accident may exist ‘when any aspect in the causal 6 series of events leading to the injury or damage was unintended by the insured and a matter of 7 fortuity.’” Id. (quoting Merced Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mendez, 213 Cal.App.3d 41, 50 (1989)).

8 The Court concludes that the Association’s complaint in the Underlying Action alleges that 9 the property damage is the result of intentional actions by Comac’s principal, and thus that the 10 property damage is not caused by an “accident.” The Association alleges that Comac’s principal 11 intentionally covered up various construction defects rather than correcting them in order to 12 maximize profits for Comac, that “any contractor who chose not to remedy [the defects] would be 13 doing so with actual or constructive knowledge that injury was a probable result,” and that the 14 property was in fact damaged as a result of the failure to correct the defects. See Dkt. No. 33-6 15 ¶¶ 30-53. The Association does not allege that there were any intervening, unexpected causes of 16 the alleged property damage, but rather that Comac’s deliberate acts caused the property damage.

17 The Association argues that the property damage qualifies as an “accident” because the 18 Underlying Action does not allege that Comac intended to cause any property damage. However, 19 the cases cited by both parties consistently hold that “the term ‘accident’ does not apply where an 20 intentional act resulted in unintended harm.” Frake, 197 Cal.App.4th at 582 (discussing 21 California law and holding that there was no “accident” when the insured intentionally struck his 22 friend in the groin, even though the insured did not intend to cause injury); Merced, 213 23 Cal.App.3d at 48 (“[A]ppellants contend an accident occurs even if the acts causing the alleged 24 damage were intentional as long as the resulting damage was not intended. The argument urged
25 by appellants has been repeatedly rejected by the appellate courts”); Quan v. Truck Ins. Exch., 67 26 Cal.App.4th 583, 599 (1998) (“[W]hether the insured intended the harm that resulted from his
27 conduct is not determinative. The question is whether an accident gave rise to claimant’s 28 injuries”).

II. “Expected or intended” exclusion and Cal. Ins. Code § 533

ZSLL also argues that Comac’s alleged willful misconduct is subject to the policy’s exclusion for property damage “expected or intended from the standpoint of the insured,” as well as Cal. Insurance Code § 533, which prohibits indemnification for the willful acts of an insured.

Cal. Ins. Code § 533 provides,

An insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the wilful act of the insured; but he is not exonerated by the negligence of the insured, or of the insured’s agents or others.

Cal. Ins. Code § 533.³ A clause excluding intentional injury is treated as having the same meaning as the language in § 533. Delgado, 47 Cal.4th at 313-14.

ZSLL relies on Acosta v. Glenfed Dev. Corp., 128 Cal.App.4th 1278 (2005), in which the Court of Appeal addressed the nature of “willful misconduct” under Cal. Code of Civil Proc. § 337.15(f), the statute of repose. In Acosta, the plaintiff homeowners alleged that the defendant developers and general contractors improperly prepared the soil and concrete foundations upon which their homes were constructed. Id. at 1287. The plaintiffs alleged that the structural framing in the houses was so negligently constructed as to constitute defective and dangerous conditions, and that as a result, substantial latent defects existed in the houses. Id. In order to avoid the ten-year statute of repose under § 337.15, the plaintiffs alleged that the acts and omissions that caused the defects were the result of the defendants’ willful misconduct. Id.

The Court of Appeal reversed summary judgment in favor of the defendants, holding that the plaintiff homeowners had created a triable issue regarding the application of the willful misconduct exception because they had submitted expert declarations opining that the defects “appeared to be the result of willful misconduct by defendants in that they were ‘so serious and prevalent that they were either the result of [a] deliberate decision to cut corners for cost savings or the result of a near total, virtually reckless, failure by the developer to adequately supervise

³ The Court notes the difference in spelling between “wilful” under Cal. Ins. Code § 533 and “willful” under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(f). In the interest of consistency, the Court will use the “willful” spelling unless quoting from the statute or a case using the “willful” spelling.

1 subcontractors.” Id. at 1289 (quoting expert reports). In reaching its conclusion, the Court of 2 Appeal discussed what constituted “willful misconduct” under Cal. Code of Civil Proc.
 3 § 337.15(f):

4 Unfortunately, there is little case authority discussing willful misconduct as the 5 term is used in section 337.15, subdivision (f). The Supreme Court, however, did 6 recently discuss generally the issue of liability for willful or wanton behavior.
 7 (Calvillo–Silva v. Home Grocery (1998) 19 Cal.4th 714, 80 Cal.Rptr.2d 506, 968
 8 P.2d 65, disapproved on another ground in Aguilar, supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 853,
 9 107 Cal.Rptr.2d 841, 24 P.3d 493, fn. 19 [Calvillo–Silva].) It noted that “the case
 10 law appears relatively uniform on the following points. First, it is generally 11 recognized that willful or wanton misconduct is separate and distinct from 12 negligence, involving different principles of liability and different defenses.
 13 [Citations.] Unlike negligence, which implies a failure to use ordinary care, and 14 even gross negligence, which connotes such a lack of care as may be presumed to 15 indicate a passive and indifferent attitude toward results, willful misconduct is not 16 marked by a mere absence of care. Rather, it involves a more positive intent
 17 actually to harm another or to do an act with a positive, active and absolute
 18 disregard of its consequences. [Citations.] So, for example, a person who commits 19 an assault and battery may be guilty of willful misconduct [citations], but a person
 20 who fails to perform a statutory duty, without more, is not guilty. [Citations.]
 While the word willful implies an intent, the intention must relate to the 21 misconduct and not merely to the fact that some act was intentionally done.
 [Citations.] Thus, even though some cases of negligence may involve intentional 22 actions, the mere intent to do an act which constitutes negligence is not enough to 23 establish willful misconduct. [Citations.] [¶] Second, willfulness generally is 24 marked by three characteristics: (1) actual or constructive knowledge of the peril to 25 be apprehended; (2) actual or constructive knowledge that injury is a probable, as 26 opposed to a possible, result of the danger; and (3) conscious failure to act to avoid 27 the peril. [Citations.] As the foregoing suggests, willful misconduct does not 28 invariably entail a subjective intent to injure. It is sufficient that a reasonable person under the same or similar circumstances would be aware of the highly dangerous character of his or her conduct. [Citations.]” (Calvillo–Silva, supra, at
 pp. 729–730, 80 Cal.Rptr.2d 506, 968 P.2d 65; see also Ewing v. Cloverleaf Bowl, supra, 20 Cal.3d at p. 402, 143 Cal.Rptr. 13, 572 P.2d 1155; Shell Oil Co. v.
Winterthur Swiss Ins. Co. (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 715, 742–743, 15 Cal.Rptr.2d 815.)

Id. at 1294-95.

22 The Association argues that Acosta is inapposite because that case discusses “willful 23 misconduct” under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(f), and does not address willfulness under Cal.
 24 Ins. Code § 533. The Association argues that the standard for committing a “willful act” pursuant 25 to § 533 is higher than the standard for “willful misconduct” under § 337.15(f) because § 533
 26 requires a subjective intent to harm, whereas it is sufficient for “willful misconduct” under 27 § 337.15(f) that a reasonable person under the same or similar circumstances would be aware of 28 the highly dangerous character of his or her conduct.

1 The Association relies on Clemmer v. Hartford Life Insurance Company, 22 Cal.3d 865,
2 887 (1978), to contend that for an act to be “willful” pursuant to § 533, the insured must not only 3 have intended the act that caused the harm, but must also have had a “preconceived design to 4 inflict injury.” In Clemmer, the widow and minor son of a murder victim sued to recover from the 5 slayer’s insurer the amount of a wrongful death judgment they had previously obtained against the 6 slayer. Id. at 871-72. The insurance company defended the action on the ground that the killing 7 of the deceased was a “willful act” and thus excluded from coverage under § 533. Id. at 872. The 8 Clemmer court held that even an act which is “intentional” or “willful” within the meaning of 9 traditional tort principles will not exonerate the insurer from liability under § 533 unless it is done
10 with a “preconceived design to inflict injury.” Id. at 887.

11 However, as the California Supreme Court later explained in J.C. Penney Casualty
12 Insurance Company v. M.K., 52 Cal.3d 1009 (1991), “[t]he brief reference in Clemmer to a 13 ‘preconceived design to inflict injury’ must be read in context. The inquiry in Clemmer was 14 limited to the unresolved mental capacity of the insured, i.e., whether he was legally sane when he 15 committed the killing. There was no issue as to whether the insured intended to shoot his victim 16 five times (including once in the head at close range) but not to harm the victim.” Id. at 1023. The 17 “preconceived design to inflict harm” requirement in Clemmer was thus only relevant to the issue
18 of whether the insured intended to commit a wrongful act and does not apply “when the insured 19 seeks coverage for an intentional and wrongful act if the harm is inherent in the act itself.” Id. at 20 1025. “Subsequent decisions have made clear that the ‘preconceived design to injure’ standard is 21 relevant only when the insured’s mental capacity is an issue or the insured’s intent or motive
22 might justify an otherwise wrongful act.” Downey Venture v. LMI Ins. Co., 66 Cal. App. 4th 478, 23 500 (1998) (discussing Clemmer and subsequent cases).

24 In Downey Venture, the California Court of Appeal held that “[a] ‘wilful act’ under section 25 533 will include either ‘an act deliberately done for the express purpose of causing damage or 26 intentionally performed with knowledge that damage is highly probable or substantially certain to 27 result.’ It also appears that a wilful act includes an intentional and wrongful act in which ‘. . . the 28 harm is inherent in the act itself.’” Downey Venture, 66 Cal. App. 4th at 500 (quoting Shell Oil

United States District Court
Northern District of California

1 Co. v. Winterthur Swiss Ins. Co., 12 Cal.App.4th 715, 742 (1993), and J.C. Penney, 52 Cal.3d at 2 1025)). This standard is not meaningfully different from the Acosta court’s articulation of “willful
3 misconduct” under § 337.15(f) as “involv[ing] a more positive intent actually to harm another or 4 to do an act with a positive, active and absolute disregard of its consequences” and “not invariably 5 entail[ing] a subjective intent to injure. It is sufficient that a reasonable person under the same or 6 similar circumstances would be aware of the highly dangerous character of his or her conduct.”
7 Acosta, 128 Cal.App.4th at 1294-95.

8 The Court concludes that the Association’s allegations of Comac’s willful misconduct
9 bring the Underlying Action within the scope of the “intended or expected” exclusion and Cal. Ins.
10 Code § 533. The Association alleges in the Underlying Action that the construction defects
11 would have been observable by any knowledgeable contractor or supervisor and “any contractor
12 who chose not to remedy [the defects] would be doing so with actual or constructive knowledge 13 that injury was a probable result” and “any knowledgeable construction supervisor who chose not 14 to direct the contractor to remedy the condition would have done so with actual or constructive
15 knowledge that injury was a probable result.” Dkt. No. 33-6 at ¶ 53. Under § 533, willful acts 16 include those “intentionally performed with knowledge that damage is highly probable or 17 substantially certain to result,” not merely acts performed with the intent to cause injury. Downey
18 Venture, 66 Cal. App. 4th at 500; see also Shell Oil Co. v. Winterthur Swiss Ins. Co., 12
19 Cal.App.4th 715, 746 (1993) (holding policy language excluding coverage for damage that is 20 “expected or intended” “connotes subjective knowledge of or belief in an event’s probability. We 21 see no material difference if the degree of that probability is expressed as substantially certain, 22 practically certain, highly likely, or highly probable.”).

CONCLUSION

Accordingly, the Court concludes that ZSLL has no duty to defend or indemnify Comac in the Underlying Action, and therefore the Court GRANTS plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
