IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

ELEM INDIAN COLONY OF POMO
INDIANS OF THE SULPHUR BANK
RANCHERIA, a federally recognized
Indian tribe,

No. C 16-03081 WHA

Plaintiff,

ORDER RE MOTION FOR ATTORNEY’S FEES

v.

CEIBA LEGAL, LLP, et al.,

Defendants.

INTRODUCTION

Following dismissal of the complaint and judgment in their favor, defendants in this RICO action move for an award of attorney’s fees. The motion is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

STATEMENT

Following a disputed election in the Elem Indian Colony (the “Tribe”) in November 2014, both the Garcia faction and the Brown faction of the Tribe claimed to be its duly elected executive committee. In 2015, members of the Brown faction and their counsel wrote letters to banks and government agencies asking them to freeze Tribe funds until the Bureau of Indian Affairs could resolve the dispute.

According to defendants, in 2016 — while the dispute over the election was still ongoing — the Garcia faction purported to disenroll from the Tribe dozens of members sympathetic to the Brown faction. In response, certain members of the Tribe petitioned this Court for writ of habeas corpus. That related matter is pending before the undersigned.

1 Plaintiff in this action then sued members of the Brown faction, their counsel, and other 2 individuals, asserting claims for (1) tortious interference with contract, (2) fraud and deceit, (3) 3 violations of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, (4) trademark 4 infringement under the Lanham Act, (5) trademark infringement under California law, (6) 5 common law injury to business reputation, and (7) vicarious trademark infringement. The 6 gravamen of the complaint was the RICO claim and its supporting allegations that defendants 7 corresponded with banks and agencies in furtherance of a conspiracy to take control of the Tribe 8 (Dkt. No. 28 at 3).

9 Two groups of defendants moved to dismiss. A prior order granted the motions and 10 dismissed the action, finding plaintiff's claims barred by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine, and 11 denied leave to amend as futile (Dkt. No. 63). Defendants now move for attorney's fees 12 pursuant to the Lanham Act and Section 425.16 of the California Code of Civil Procedure
13 (California's anti-SLAPP law).

14 ANALYSIS

15 Before turning to the merits of the instant motion, this order first addresses plaintiff's 16 assertion that no attorney's fees can be awarded against it because it has not waived tribal 17 sovereign immunity to claims for such fees.

18 1. TRIBAL SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY.

19 Suits against Indian tribes are barred by sovereign immunity absent a clear waiver by the 20 tribe or congressional abrogation. Okla. Tax Comm'n v. Citizen Band Potawatomi Indian Tribe 21 of Okla., 498 U.S. 505, 509 (1991) (Potawatomi). A waiver of tribal sovereign immunity must 22 be unequivocally expressed. Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez, 436 U.S. 49, 58 (1978); White v.
23 Univ. of Cal., 765 F.3d 1010, 1025–26 (9th Cir. 2014). Initiation of a lawsuit necessarily 24 establishes consent to the court's adjudication of the merits of that particular controversy, 25 including the risk of being bound by an adverse determination. In re White, 139 F.3d 1268, 26 1271 (9th Cir. 1998) (quoting McClendon v. United States, 885 F.2d 627, 630 (9th Cir. 1989)).

27 Plaintiff cites numerous decisions for the proposition that a tribe does not waive 28 sovereign immunity to counterclaims by bringing an action. See, e.g., Potawatomi, 498 U.S. at 509. Thus, plaintiff argues, "although [it] did consent to a limited waiver of its sovereign

1 immunity by filing the instant action, it did not waive its sovereign immunity with respect to 2 any counter-claim or claim for recoupment — in the form of an award of attorneys’ fees or 3 otherwise — made by Defendants” (Dkt. No. 75 at 10). Plaintiff’s arguments are inapposite 4 because this is a motion for attorney’s fees, not a counterclaim. See Guidiville Rancheria of 5 Cal. v. United States, Case No. 12–cv–1326 YGR, 2015 WL 4934408, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Aug.
6 18, 2015) (Judge Yvonne Gonzalez Rogers) (claim for attorney’s fees was “not a counterclaim 7 or other affirmative claim on the treasury of the Tribe”); cf. United States v. State of Or., 657 8 F.2d 1009, 1015–16 (9th Cir. 1981) (Oregon) (injunction against tribe was not analogous to a 9 “counterclaim” for sovereign immunity purposes).

10 Plaintiff chose to assert claims under the Lanham Act. In doing so, it committed to the 11 practical consequences of those claims, including “the risk that its position would not be 12 accepted, and that the Tribe itself would be bound by an order it deemed adverse.” See Oregon, 13 657 F.2d at 1015; cf. C & L Enters., Inc. v. Citizen Band Potawatomi Indian Tribe of Okla., 532 14 U.S. 411, 418–20 (2001) (tribe that contracted to arbitrate waived sovereign immunity to 15 judicial enforcement of arbitral awards). Plaintiff cannot invoke provisions of the Lanham Act 16 to support its claims yet avoid the legal effects of other provisions that do not work in its favor.
17 Cf. In re PNP Holdings Corp., 184 B.R. 805, 807 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1995) (creditor “cannot 18 reasonably expect to invoke those portions of the bankruptcy code that allow it to recover on its 19 claims and yet avoid the legal effect of other sections that do not work in its favor”). Nor can 20 plaintiff bring its claims to court for adjudication and then “reclaim immunity just because the 21 case took a turn that was not to its liking.” See In re White, 139 F.3d at 1272.

22 The prevailing party’s ability to seek attorney’s fees under the Lanham Act’s fee-23 shifting provision is the “inevitable consequence” of plaintiff’s own conduct. By asserting its 24 claims under the Lanham Act — including its own claim for attorney’s fees thereunder — 25 plaintiff took the risk that it would not prevail and would, as a result, be liable for the other 26 side’s attorney’s fees as well. See Guidiville, 2015 WL 4934408, at *7. This order thus 27 concludes that sovereign immunity does not bar an award of attorney’s fees against plaintiff 28 under the Lanham Act.

1 2. LANHAM ACT.

2 Under the Lanham Act, courts may award reasonable attorney’s fees to the prevailing 3 party in exceptional cases. 15 U.S.C. 1117(a). An exceptional case is “one that stands out from 4 others with respect to the substantive strength of a party’s litigating position (considering both 5 the governing law and the facts of the case) or the unreasonable manner in which the case was 6 litigated.” Octane Fitness, LLC v. ICON Health & Fitness, Inc., 134 S. Ct. 1749, 1756 (2014).
7 Courts consider the totality of the circumstances to determine whether a case is exceptional, 8 using a preponderance of the evidence standard and exercising equitable discretion in light of 9 nonexclusive factors including frivolousness, motivation, objective unreasonableness, and 10 considerations of compensation and deterrence. Id. at 1756 & n.6, 1758; SunEarth, Inc. v. Sun
11 Earth Solar Power Co., Ltd., 839 F.3d 1179, 1180–81 (9th Cir. 2016) (en banc). “[A] case 12 presenting either subjective bad faith or exceptionally meritless claims may sufficiently set 13 itself apart from mine-run cases to warrant a fee award.” Octane Fitness, 134 S. Ct. at 1757.¹

14 This action stands out from others due to the unreasonable manner in which it was 15 litigated. Specifically, plaintiff’s unreasonable conduct, including misrepresentations and 16 misleading statements to the Court, makes this action exceptional. See Octane Fitness, 134 S.
17 Ct. at 1756–57; see also SFA Sys., LLC v. Newegg Inc., 793 F.3d 1344, 1351–52 (Fed. Cir.
18 2015) (discussing decisions awarding fees under the Patent Act for litigation misconduct). For 19 example, plaintiff’s counsel in this action — who also represents plaintiff in connection with 20 the related petition for writ of habeas corpus — has acted evasively and disingenuously before 21 the Court, including outright misstating the facts on numerous occasions during oral argument
22 (see Dkt. No. 60 at 4:17–4:19). See John v. Garcia, No. 3:16-cv-02368-WHA (Dkt. No. 28).²

24
25 ¹ Although Octane Fitness dealt with fee requests under the Patent Act, our court of appeals interprets 26 the fee-shifting provisions of the Patent Act and the Lanham Act in tandem because said provisions are “parallel 27 and identical.” SunEarth, 839 F.3d at 1180. Octane Fitness therefore also governs analysis of fee applications 28 under the Lanham Act. Id. at 1180–81. For the same reason, Federal Circuit decisions regarding fee requests under the Patent Act are instructive to the instant analysis.

² Plaintiff asserts, without explanation or authority, that the transcript in the related matter should be “stricken as irrelevant to the subject matter, unduly prejudicial, and having insufficient probative value” (Dkt.
No. 75 at 19–20). This order disagrees. See SFA Sys., 793 F.3d at 1352 (“[A] district court should consider a [party’s] pattern of litigation where adequate evidence of an abusive pattern is presented.”).

1 This pattern of misrepresentation and disregard for factual accuracy persists even now.
2 In its opposition, plaintiff “requests that the Court award Defendants no more than $53,600,” if 3 anything, because “This is the amount [plaintiff] paid in attorneys’ fees to defend the Wells 4 Fargo interpleader that precipitated this case, coupled with [plaintiff’s] attorney fees in 5 defending this entire case through December 8, 2016” (Dkt. No. 75 at 2). As defendants point 6 out, however, plaintiff previously alleged it was “damaged in the sum of the approximately 7 $250,000 in legal fees and costs to defend the interpleader action” (Dkt. No. 28 at 6). This 8 glaring discrepancy between plaintiff’s accounts of its own legal costs conveniently 9 corresponds to its disparate interests in exaggerating damages in the complaint while 10 downplaying liability for attorney’s fees in the instant motion.

11 This action also stands out from others due to plaintiff’s exceptionally meritless claims, 12 which are all the more troubling in light of the possibility, given the timing of the complaint, 13 that plaintiff brought this action to suppress political opposition. The foundation for all the 14 asserted claims was defendants’ conduct in connection with the disputed election but, as 15 explained in the prior order dismissing this action, said conduct was exactly the sort of 16 petitioning activity protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine (Dkt. No. 63 at 4). Plaintiff did 17 not even come close to alleging otherwise. In its opposition to the instant motion, plaintiff 18 claims, “Importantly, the Court did not analyze the Lanham Act claim at all in its dismissal 19 order. It did not have to — all the claims were encompassed by Noerr-Pennington. The Court 20 correctly labels this case ‘a RICO action.’ This was not a ‘Lanham Act’ case by any stretch of 21 the imagination” (Dkt. No. 75 at 14 (citations omitted)). Yet plaintiff asserted throwaway 22 claims under the Lanham Act anyway — further undermining its representation that its claims 23 had merit. See, e.g., Love v. Assoc. Newspapers, Ltd., 611 F.3d 601, 616 (9th Cir. 2010) 24 (“groundless and unreasonable” Lanham Act claims were “exceptional as a matter of law”).

25 Plaintiff also seems to suggest in its opposition that this action cannot be exceptional 26 within the meaning of the Lanham Act unless defendants show plaintiff filed this action in bad 27 faith (Dkt. No. 75 at 14). This suggestion is rejected as contrary to the Supreme Court’s 28 holding in Octane Fitness. See 134 S. Ct. at 1757. Considering the totality of the circumstances and using a preponderance of the evidence standard, this order concludes this

1 action is exceptional due to both the unreasonable manner in which plaintiff litigated it and the 2 exceptionally meritorious nature of plaintiff's claims. See id. at 1756–58. This order further 3 concludes reasonable attorney's fees should be awarded to defendants as the prevailing parties 4 under the Lanham Act's fee-shifting provision. See 15 U.S.C. 1117(a).

5 3. CALIFORNIA'S ANTI-SLAPP LAW.

6 California's anti-SLAPP law provides, "A cause of action against a person arising from 7 any act of that person in furtherance of the person's right of petition or free speech under the 8 United States Constitution or the California Constitution in connection with a public issue shall 9 be subject to a special motion to strike, unless the court determines that the plaintiff has 10 established that there is a probability that the plaintiff will prevail on the claim." CAL. CIV.
11 PROC. CODE § 425.16(b)(1). Subject to limited exceptions that do not apply here, "a prevailing 12 defendant on a special motion to strike shall be entitled to recover his or her attorney's fees and 13 costs." CIV. PROC. § 425.16(c)(1). Because the award of attorney's fees under this provision is 14 mandatory, "the trial court must, upon defendant's motion for a fee award, rule on the merits of 15 the SLAPP motion" even if the matter was dismissed before reaching said merits. Pfeiffer 16 Venice Props. v. Bernard, 101 Cal. App. 4th 211, 215, 218–19 (2002).

17 The crux of this issue, however, is whether defendants actually brought a special motion 18 to strike. Plaintiff contends defendants' motions to dismiss did not amount to a special motion 19 to strike pursuant to California's anti-SLAPP statute (Dkt. No. 75 at 11–13). Defendants 20 respond that "While [they] could have filed a separately captioned motion to strike, economy 21 favored filing a single pleading as others have done," and criticize plaintiff for essentially 22 contending "that omission of the words 'and motion to strike' from the caption of the motion to 23 dismiss precludes an award of attorneys' fees" (Dkt. No. 79 at 8–9).

24 The individual defendants' motion to dismiss contained two subsections titled 25 "California's Anti-SLAPP Statute and California Civil Code section 47" and "Code of Civil 26 Procedure section 425.16, Civil Code section 47 and the First Amended Complaint" (Dkt. No.
27 32 at 14–16). These stated in relevant part, "Plaintiff's state law causes of action are also 28 subject to a special motion to strike pursuant to California Code of Civil Procedure section 425.16 Similarly, California Civil Code section 47(b) recognizes an absolute privilege for 1 communications having ‘some relation’ to a legislative, judicial or other official proceeding

2 authorized by law” (id. at 14–15). And, “Communications made during litigation to non-parties 3 are immunized under section 425.16(e)(2) if they relate to the substantive issues in the litigation 4 and are directed to persons having an interest in the litigation,” and defendants’ conduct in 5 question “is also absolutely privileged under California Civil Code section 47” (id. at 15–16).

6 The problems with these two subsections go beyond mere failure to list “motion to 7 strike” in the caption. Defendants only once mentioned that plaintiff’s state law claims were 8 “subject to a special motion to strike” and never followed up by actually requesting to strike any 9 portions of the amended complaint. The two subsections touching on California’s anti-SLAPP 10 law simply mashed together that law and Section 47 of the California Civil Code (litigation 11 privilege) with threadbare analysis and no attempt to explain how either provision was 12 supposed to function here. Nothing in either subsection indicated defendants sought anything 13 other than standard dismissal under Rule 12, albeit by throwing spaghetti at the proverbial wall.

14 Even now, defendants continue in their reply brief to conflate California’s anti-SLAPP 15 law with Rule 12 dismissal, claiming their “motion to dismiss was brought under both FRCP 16 12(b)(6) and California Code of Civil Procedure section 425.16, advancing multiple defenses 17 applicable to both procedural vehicles” (Dkt. No. 79 at 8). This, combined with defendants’ 18 protest that requiring a separate motion to strike would “exalt form over substance,” suggests 19 that defendants believe the substantive anti-SLAPP arguments in their motion to dismiss were 20 coherent and adequately formed, lacking only perfunctory labeling to be deemed a special 21 motion to strike. Not so.

22 The distinction between a special motion to strike pursuant to California’s anti-SLAPP 23 law and a Rule 12 motion to dismiss is not merely empty formalism. In United States ex rel.
24 Newsham v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., Inc., our court of appeals permitted application of 25 California’s anti-SLAPP law in federal diversity actions on the theory that the law existed “side 26 by side” with Rules 8, 12, and 56, with “each controlling its own intended sphere of coverage 27 without conflict.” 190 F.3d 963, 972 (9th Cir. 1999). In Makaeff v. Trump Univ., LLC, our 28 court of appeals elaborated that Rule 12, Rule 56, and California’s anti-SLAPP law create

1 “separate and additional theor[ies] upon which certain kinds of suits may be disposed of before 2 trial.” 736 F.3d 1180, 1182 (9th Cir. 2013). Specifically (emphasis added, citation omitted):

3 Rule 12 provides a mechanism to test the legal sufficiency of a 4 complaint. The question asked by Rule 12 is whether the plaintiff 5 has stated a claim that is plausible on its face and upon which 6 relief can be granted. California’s anti-SLAPP statute does not 7 attempt to answer this question; instead, California Code of Civil 8 Procedure § 430.10, the state statutory analog of Rule 12, does.
9 That the California legislature enacted both an analog to Rule 12 10 and, additionally, an anti-SLAPP statute is strong evidence that the 11 provisions are intended to serve different purposes and control 12 different spheres.

13 Ibid. There is, moreover, a practical difference in scope between a Rule 12 motion to dismiss 14 and a special motion to strike under California’s anti-SLAPP law. The latter, while permitted in 15 our circuit, has limited reach because federal courts can only entertain anti-SLAPP special 16 motions to strike in connection with state law claims. Hilton v. Hallmark Cards, 599 F.3d 894, 17 901 (9th Cir. 2009). This is true even where, as here, the defendants raise First Amendment 18 defenses common to both federal and state law claims against them. Id. at 900-01.

19 Defendants’ motion to dismiss failed to assert a special motion to strike or account for 20 procedural or practical distinctions between California’s anti-SLAPP law and Rule 12. These 21 defects do not boil down to the mere presence or absence of a caption.

22 Defendants point out that California’s anti-SLAPP law is construed broadly (Dkt. No.
23 79 at 8). True, but the California Supreme Court, despite expressly acknowledging as much, 24 nonetheless held in S.B. Beach Props. v. Berti that the California Legislature deliberately used a 25 “motion to strike” approach rather than a “pleading hurdle” to make “the filing of a viable 26 anti-SLAPP motion a necessary trigger for both an imposed judgment of dismissal and an award 27 of fees and costs.” 39 Cal. 4th 374, 381–82 (2006). Thus, in that case, the defendants could not 28 recover attorney’s fees under California’s anti-SLAPP law because they never actually filed a “special motion to strike.” Ibid. So too here.

Under these circumstances, this order declines to recast defendants’ motion to dismiss under the auspices of California’s anti-SLAPP law for purposes of awarding defendants attorney’s fees. The cursory mentions of California’s anti-SLAPP law in defendants’ Rule 12

1 motion did not adequately set forth a separate special motion to strike, so defendants cannot 2 now reap the rewards of such a motion. See S.B. Beach, 39 Cal. 4th at 381.

3 Because this order concludes defendants are not entitled to recover attorney’s fees under 4 California’s anti-SLAPP law, it does not reach the question of whether plaintiff waived tribal 5 sovereign immunity to an award of such fees.

6 * * *

7 In their reply brief, defendants for the first time suggest this Court should use its 8 inherent power to award their requested attorney’s fees (Dkt. No. 79 at 5). After reviewing 9 defendants’ arguments, the Court declines to allow such sandbagging. See Fink v. Gomez, 239 10 F.3d 989, 994 (9th Cir. 2001) (whether to impose inherent power sanctions is “a determination 11 that rests in the sound discretion of the district court”); Primus Auto. Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Batarse, 12 115 F.3d 644, 648–49 (9th Cir. 1997) (the court must explicitly find bad faith to use its inherent 13 power to engage in fee-shifting).

14 4. AMOUNT OF FEES.

15 Defendants seek $255,367.50 in attorney’s fees and $7,668.21 in costs (Dkt. No. 70 at 16 14–16). Additionally, they seek a 1.5 multiplier of the attorney’s fees “in recognition of the 17 discounts [their] attorneys offered and financial risk they took on” (id. at 15–16). Including the 18 multiplier, defendants’ request is actually for $383,051.25 in attorney’s fees and $7,668.21 in 19 costs, for a total of $390,719.46.

20 To calculate an award of attorney’s fees, a district court must first calculate the 21 “lodestar” by “multiplying the number of hours the prevailing party reasonably expended on the 22 litigation by a reasonable hourly rate.” Caudle v. Bristow Optical Co., Inc., 224 F.3d 1014, 23 1028 (9th Cir. 2000). In determining reasonableness, a district court must consider, among 24 other things, “the results obtained by the prevailing litigant.” Ibid.

25 Here, plaintiff does not contest the unequivocally favorable results obtained by 26 defendants or the reasonableness of defense counsel’s hourly rates. Nor does it challenge the 27 amount of costs claimed. Plaintiff does complain, however, that the number of hours spent 28 defending this action was excessive (see Dkt. No. 75 at 1–2, 4–7, 18). Plaintiff misleadingly claims “three law firms” racked up the hours billed but fails to mention that it invited this

1 problem by suing not only defendants but also defense counsel from Ceiba Legal, LLP. Faced 2 with the threat of economic and professional damage, Ceiba Legal reasonably obtained its own 3 legal representation to defend this action. Given the circumstances of this case — including the 4 gravity of its stakes and defense counsel’s specialized knowledge of the extensive factual and 5 procedural background leading up to this particular litigation — and following in camera
6 review of defense counsel’s detailed invoices (see Dkt. No. 80), this order concludes that both 7 the hours and rates billed by defense counsel were reasonable.

8 The next question, then, is whether additional considerations warrant adjusting the 9 lodestar. See Caudle, 224 F.3d at 1028. After considering the course of this case, including its 10 brevity and the lack of complexity or merit in plaintiff’s claims, this order concludes that the 11 lodestar adequately compensates defense counsel for their skill, experience, and performance in 12 defending it. Defense counsel overreached in seeking a 1.5 fee multiplier. No adjustment of 13 the lodestar is warranted under these circumstances.

14 The unadjusted lodestar, however, does not end the inquiry here. In light of this order’s 15 conclusion that defendants may not recover fees under California’s anti-SLAPP law, the 16 Lanham Act’s fee-shifting provision governs defendants’ entitlement to attorney’s fees. “[A]s a 17 general matter, a prevailing party in a case involving Lanham Act and non-Lanham Act claims 18 can recover attorneys’ fees only for work related to the Lanham Act claims.” Gracie v. Gracie, 19 217 F.3d 1060, 1069 (9th Cir. 2000). This order must therefore adjust the fee award to reflect 20 apportionment between Lanham Act and non-Lanham Act claims unless “the claims are so 21 inextricably intertwined that even an estimated adjustment would be meaningless.” Id. at 1070.

22 Defendants’ voluminous detailed invoices confirmed that meaningful line-by-line 23 apportionment of the requested fees between work related to Lanham Act claims and work 24 related to non-Lanham Act claims is impossible. This is unsurprising given that plaintiff’s 25 multitude of claims shared a concise nucleus of common facts, and much of the work done on 26 this case would reasonably have been directed at the litigation as a whole. For example, 27 defendants raised several arguments, including their ultimately successful argument based on 28 Noerr-Pennington, that proved responsive to multiple claims for relief. Nonetheless, after evaluating the extent to which defendants’ efforts could fairly be characterized as related to

1 plaintiff's Lanham Act claims, this order concludes that estimated apportionment is possible 2 and apportions forty-five percent of defense counsel's reasonable attorney's fees as an 3 appropriate award under the Lanham Act's fee-shifting provision.

4 CONCLUSION

5 For the foregoing reasons, defendants' motion for attorney's fees is GRANTED IN PART
6 and DENIED IN PART. Defendants are entitled to recover only their reasonable attorney's fees 7 under the fee-shifting provision of the Lanham Act, which this order finds to be $118,366.07.

8 If any party wishes to continue litigating the amount of the fee award, then the Court 9 will appoint a special master to further evaluate said amount. The parties will share 10 responsibility for paying the special master's fees except that, if one party requests a special 11 master but fails to shift the amount awarded in their favor, then that party will pay most, if not 12 all, of the special master's fees.

13 By FEBRUARY 9 AT NOON, each side shall file a statement either unequivocally 14 accepting the amount of the fee award — while preserving the question of entitlement to said 15 award — or requesting appointment of a special master to further evaluate the same.
