UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

AETNA INC.,  Plaintiff,  v.  GILEAD SCIENCES, INC., et al.,  Defendants.	RELATED TO Case No. 21-cv-09827-EMC Docket No. 19

The pending motion concerns Aetna v. Gilead, No. C-21-9827 EMC, which is one of the cases related to the main Staley action. This case shall hereinafter be referred to as Aetna I. Aetna filed Aetna I in state court, but Gilead removed the case to federal court. Aetna then moved to remand. The same day that Gilead’s opposition to the remand motion was due, Aetna filed a notice of voluntary dismissal pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 41. Now pending before the Court is Gilead’s motion to vacate the voluntary dismissal.

Having considered the parties’ briefs and accompanying submissions, as well as the oral argument of counsel, the Court hereby DENIES Defendants’ motion.

1                                   I.           FACTUAL & PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

2           The evidence of record reflects as follows.

3           12/14/2021. Aetna filed suit in state court against Gilead, BMS, and Janssen. Aetna
4 asserted only state law claims. At or about the same time, Aetna’s counsel (the Crowell law firm)
5 also filed a number of cases on behalf of other individual health plans in federal court.

6           12/20/2021. Gilead removed Aetna I to federal court. Gilead claimed both diversity
7 jurisdiction and federal question jurisdiction as the basis for removal.

8           On diversity jurisdiction, Gilead acknowledged that it is a citizen of California (i.e., a 9 forum defendant) but asserted that removal was nevertheless proper because it had not yet been 10 served. See Docket No. 1 (Not. of Removal at 1-2); 28 U.S.C. § 1441(b)(2) (“A civil action
11 otherwise removable solely on the basis of the jurisdiction under section 1332(a) of this title [i.e., 12 diversity jurisdiction] may not be removed if any of the parties in interest properly joined and 13 served as defendants is a citizen of the State in which such action is brought.”) (emphasis added).<sup>1</sup>

14           On federal question jurisdiction, Gilead contended, inter alia, that substantial federal issues were 15 raised regarding federal patent law, the Hatch-Waxman Act, and the FDA regulatory scheme and 16 that the state law claims turned on federal antitrust law.

17           1/18/2022. Aetna filed a motion to remand. See Docket No. 12 (motion). The opposition 18 was set to be filed on 2/1/2022.

19           1/31/2022. Aetna filed a new complaint in state court. That case shall hereinafter be 20 referred to as Aetna II. The Aetna II complaint seems to be substantially the same as the Aetna I 21 complaint.

22           2/1/2022. Before Gilead could file its opposition to the motion to remand in Aetna I,
23 Aetna filed a notice of voluntary dismissal of Aetna I pursuant to Rule 41. See Docket No. 14 24 (notice); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i) (“Subject to Rules 23(e), 23.1(c), 23.2, and 66 and 25

26 _____
27 <sup>1</sup> Gilead points out that this Court has previously stuck to the strict language of § 1441. See City
28 of Ann Arbor Empl. Ret. Sys. v. Gecht, No. C-06-7453 EMC, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21928, at *22, 24-25 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 9, 2007) (approving defendant’s removal of case to federal court; although other defendants were citizens of California (i.e., forum residents), they had not yet been served at the time of removal).

1 any applicable federal statute, the plaintiff may dismiss an action without a court order by filing:
2 (i) a notice of dismissal before the opposing party serves either an answer or a motion for 3 summary judgment.”). Thus, implicitly, Aetna was intending to proceed with Aetna II as its 4 litigation vehicle rather than Aetna I. That same day, Gilead filed a statement indicating that it
5 was looking into the propriety of the voluntary dismissal in Aetna I. See Docket No. 17 (response)
6 (taking note that Aetna had recently filed the Aetna II complaint).

7 2/3/2022. Gilead removed Aetna II from state to federal court. See Aetna v. Gilead, No.
8 C-22-0740 EMC (N.D. Cal.).

9 2/7/2022. In Aetna I, Defendants filed a motion to vacate the voluntary dismissal. This is 10 the currently pending motion.

11 2/16/2022. In Aetna II, Defendants filed a motion to dismiss, which is currently set for 12 hearing on 3/31/2022. The motion to dismiss is to be heard on the same day as other motions to 13 dismiss filed in Staley (all challenging complaints filed by individual health plans).

14 3/2/2022. In Aetna II, Aetna filed a motion to remand its case back to state court. The 15 motion is currently set for hearing on 4/7/2022.

16 II. DISCUSSION

17 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 41 provides in relevant part as follows: “Subject to Rules
18 23(e), 23.1(c), 23.2, and 66 and any applicable federal statute, the plaintiff may dismiss an action
19 without a court order by filing: (i) a notice of dismissal before the opposing party serves either an 20 answer or a motion for summary judgment.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i). In the instant case, 21 there is no dispute that, at the time Aetna voluntarily dismissed Aetna I, no defendant had filed an 22 answer or a motion for summary judgment. Defendants argue, however, that Aetna was not free 23 to unilaterally voluntarily dismiss because Rule 41 says that a dismissal is subject to “any 24 applicable federal statute.” According to Defendants, there is an applicable federal statute that 25 prevents Aetna from unilaterally acting. Specifically, Defendants rely on the removal statutes

26 ///

27 ///

28 ///

1 themselves (28 U.S.C. §§ 1446-47<sup>2</sup>) and the All Writs Act (id. § 1651<sup>3</sup>). Citing, inter alia, Lou v.
2 Belzberg, 834 F.2d 730 (9th Cir. 1987), Defendants argue that, because a court can – pursuant to 3 the removal statutes – issue an injunction to prevent a party from subverting the court’s removal
4 jurisdiction, this necessarily means that this Court can issue the “lesser remedy” of vacating
5 Aetna’s voluntary dismissal which is intended to subvert the Court’s removal jurisdiction.

6 The Court finds Defendants’ position unavailing. As a preliminary matter, it is notable
7 that Defendants have not cited any authority holding that the removal statutes or the All Writs Act
8 is an “applicable federal statute” for purposes of Rule 41. Nor was the Court able to find any such 9 authority based on its independent research.

10 In addition, the Court sees no principled reason to extend Rule 41 to include the removal 11 statutes or the All Writs Act as an “applicable federal statute.” In assessing what could be an 12 applicable federal statute, the Court takes guidance from Rule 41 which gives explicit examples

13

14 <sup>2</sup> In its reply brief, Defendants relied on the following provisions specifically:

- 15
- 16 • Section 1446(d) which provides that “[p]romptly after the filing of such notice of removal 17 of a civil action the defendant or defendants shall give written notice thereof to all adverse 18 parties and shall file a copy of the notice with the clerk of such State court, which shall 19 effect the removal and the State court shall proceed no further unless and until the case is 20 remanded.” 28 U.S.C. § 1446(d).
  - 21 • Section 1447(a) which provides that, “[i]n any case removed from a State court, the district
22 court may issue all necessary orders and process to bring before it all proper parties 23 whether served by process issued by the State court or otherwise.” Id. § 1447(a).

24 See Reply at 2.

25 <sup>3</sup> Section 1651 provides in relevant part: “The Supreme Court and all courts established by Act of 26 Congress may issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of their respective jurisdictions and 27 agreeable to the usages and principles of law.” 28 U.S.C. § 1651. In their reply, Defendants argue 28 that “the All Writs Act is traditionally used when ‘filling the interstices of federal judicial power when those gaps threatened to thwart the otherwise proper exercise of federal courts’ jurisdiction.” Reply at 3-4 (quoting Pa. Bur. of Corr. V. U.S. Marshalls Servs., 474 U.S. 34, 41 (1985); see also United States v. Kenney, 550 F. Supp. 2d 118, 120-21 (D. Me. 2008) (“The purpose of the Act is ‘to supply the courts with the instruments needed to perform their duty . . . .’
Specifically, ‘courts may rely upon this statute in issuing orders appropriate to assist them in conducting factual inquiries.’ A district court ‘may rely on the All Writs Act to control actions or conduct that would inhibit its ability to resolve or manage a case before it.’ The decision to issue an order under the Act is discretionary: ‘It must be emphasized that the Act . . . is entirely permissive in nature; it in no way mandates a particular result or the entry of a particular order.’
In addition, ‘the power conferred by the Act extends, under appropriate circumstances, to persons who though not . . . engaged in wrongdoing are in a position to frustrate the implementation of a court order or the proper administration of justice, and encompasses even those who have not taken any affirmative action to hinder justice.”).

1 where a plaintiff’s right to voluntarily dismiss is constrained and requires court approval.

2 Specifically, Rule 41 refers to Rules 23(e), 23.1(c), 23.2 and 66.

- 3 • Rule 23(e) provides in relevant part that “[t]he claims, issues, or defenses of a 4 certified class – or a class proposed to be certified for purposes of settlement – may 5 be settled, voluntarily dismissed, or compromised only with the court’s approval.”
6 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).
- 7 • Rule 23.1(c) provides in relevant part that “[a] derivative action may be settled, 8 voluntarily dismissed, or compromised only with the court’s approval.” Fed. R.
9 Civ. P. 23.1(c).
- 10 • Rule 23.2 provides: “This rule applies to an action brought by or against the 11 members of an unincorporated association as a class by naming certain members as 12 representative parties. The action may be maintained only if it appears that those 13 parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the association and its 14 members. In conducting the action, the court may issue any appropriate orders
15 corresponding with those in Rule 23(d), and the procedure for settlement, voluntary 16 dismissal, or compromise must correspond with the procedure in Rule 23(e).” Fed.
17 R. Civ. P. 23.2.
- 18 • Rule 66 provides in relevant part that “[a]n action in which a receiver has been 19 appointed may be dismissed only by court order.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 66.

20 As reflected above, each rule contemplates a need for court approval of a dismissal 21 because of special circumstances that warrant the district court’s supervision, e.g., to protect the 22 interests of third parties such as unnamed class members or shareholders, as in a class action or a 23 derivative suit. Court approval is needed to ensure that the plaintiff’s dismissal will not adversely 24 impact those others. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e), 2003 advisory committee notes (“Subdivision (e) is 25 amended to strengthen the process of reviewing proposed class-action settlements. Settlement
26 may be a desirable means of resolving a class action. But court review and approval are essential 27 to assure adequate representation of class members who have not participated in shaping the 28 settlement.”). As another example, where there is a receivership, a person has been appointed by

1 the court to take on special duties related to the property of one of the parties. If a court has found
2 that a receiver is necessary in the first instance, then, as indicated in the advisory committee notes
3 to Rule 66, “[a] party should not be permitted to oust the court and its officer without the consent
4 of that court.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 66, 1946 advisory committee notes.

5 As for Rule 41’s reference to “any applicable federal statute,” the advisory committee
6 notes for the rule shed some light. The advisory committee notes state that “[p]rovisions
7 regarding dismissal in such statutes as U.S.C., Title 8, §164 [see 1329] (Jurisdiction of district
8 courts in immigration cases) and U.S.C., Title 31, §232 [now 3730] (Liability of persons making 9 false claims against United States; suits) are preserved by paragraph (1).” Fed. R. Civ. P.
10 41(a)(1), 1937 advisory committee notes (emphasis added).

- 11 • 8 U.S.C. § 1329 (“The district courts . . . shall have jurisdiction of all causes, civil 12 and criminal, brought by the United States that arise under the provisions of this 13 subchapter [immigration]. . . . No suit or proceeding for a violation of any of the 14 provisions of this subchapter shall be settled, compromised, or discontinued 15 without the consent of the court in which it is pending . . .”).
- 16 • 31 U.S.C. § 3730(b)(1) (“A person may bring a civil action for a violation of 17 section 3729 [false claims] for the person and for the United States Government.
18 The action shall be brought in the name of the Government. The action may be 19 dismissed only if the court and the Attorney General give written consent to the 20 dismissal and their reasons for consenting.”).

21 Similar to above, court approval is implicitly required for special policy reasons: immigration is a 22 matter of nationwide concern, and the federal government has a cognizable interest in false claims 23 suits brought on its behalf.

24 This is not to say that these examples above are necessarily exhaustive. Indeed, courts 25 have, in certain situations, given effect to the phrase “any applicable federal statute” even where 26 the federal statute does not expressly provide that court approval is necessary for a dismissal.
27 Defendants have pointed to several examples: the MDL statute, the Fair Labor Standards Act
28 (“FLSA”), and the Prison Litigation Reform Act (“PLRA”).

- MDL. “[Some] MDL courts, acting pursuant to statutory authority granted to transferee courts by 28 U.S.C. § 1407,<sup>4</sup> have recognized that it is sometimes necessary to put certain restrictions on the exercise of Rule 41 dismissals in order to effectively and fairly manage complex, consolidated MDL litigation.” In re Oil Spill by the Oil Rig "Deepwater Horizon", No. MDL 2179, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44773, at *14 (E.D. La. Apr. 15, 2011); see also id. at *15 (noting that “management of an MDL often requires procedures and limitations on the parties that do not exist in ordinary cases” – e.g., “[c]ommon factual and legal issues are often litigated by using Master or Consolidated Complaints in lieu of dealing with numerous individual complaints”).
- FLSA. “The [FLSA] seeks to prohibit “labor conditions detrimental to the maintenance of the minimum standard of living necessary for health, efficiency, and general well-being of workers.” ‘It does so in part by setting forth substantive wage, hour, and overtime standards.’ An employee cannot waive his or her rights under the FLSA ‘because this would nullify the purposes of the statute and thwart the legislative policies it was designed to effectuate.’ Thus, either the Secretary of Labor or a district court must approve the settlement of any FLSA claim.” Gonzalez v. Fallanghina, LLC, No. 16-cv-01832-MEJ, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 58430, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 17, 2017); see also See Lynn's Food Stores, Inc. v. United States, 679 F.2d 1350, 1352-53 (11th Cir. 1982) (taking note of two ways that claims arising under the FLSA can be settled or compromised by employees –

When civil actions involving one or more common questions of fact are pending in different districts, such actions may be transferred to any district for coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings. Such transfers shall be made by the judicial panel on multidistrict litigation . . . upon its determination that transfers for such proceedings will be for the convenience of parties and witnesses and will promote the just and efficient conduct of such actions.

28 U.S.C. § 1407.

1 approval by the Secretary or by a court). Approval by the Secretary Labor is 2 essentially contemplated by the FLSA on its face. See 29 U.S.C. § 216(c) (“The 3 Secretary is authorized to supervise the payment of the unpaid minimum wages or 4 the unpaid overtime compensation owing to any employee or employees under 5 section 6 or 7 of this Act [29 U.S.C. § 206 or 207], and the agreement of any 6 employee to accept such payment shall upon payment in full constitute a waiver by 7 such employee of any right he may have under subsection (b) of this section to such 8 unpaid minimum wages or unpaid overtime compensation and an additional equal 9 amount as liquidated damages.”). Getting court approval of a FLSA settlement is 10 effectively seen as analogous to getting the Secretary’s approval. Cf. Samake v.
11 Thunder Lube, Inc., No. 21-102-cv, 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 2567, at *10 (2d Cir.
12 Jan. 27, 2022) (noting that, “[w]ithout judicial oversight, . . . employers may be 13 more inclined to offer, and employees, even when represented by counsel, may be 14 more inclined to accept, private settlements that ultimately are cheaper to the 15 employer than compliance with the Act”).

- 16 • PLRA. “The Court holds that the PLRA is a federal statute to which a plaintiff’s 17 power to dismiss an action voluntarily under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(i) is subject, and 18 allowing a plaintiff to use voluntary dismissal to avoid accumulating a strike under 19 § 1915(g) runs counter to Congress’s purposes in enacting the PLRA.” Burley v.
20 Unknown Defendants, No. 2:15-CV-143, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 163934, at *1
21 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 7, 2015).

22 But even crediting the examples above, the Court notes that they simply underscore that 23 there must be special circumstances warranting what is, in effect, judicial interference into a 24 plaintiff’s otherwise unfettered right to voluntarily dismiss. Cf. Am. Soccer Co. v. Score First 25 Enters., 187 F.3d 1108, 1112 (9th Cir. 1999) (emphasizing the right of a plaintiff to voluntarily
26 dismiss; thus, rejecting the contention that Rule 41 “authorize[s] a court to make a case-by-case
27 evaluation of how far a lawsuit has advanced to decide whether to vacate a plaintiff’s voluntary 28 dismissal”). In each of these cases, there are discernible interests that transcend those of the

1 named parties in a specific case.

2 Here, the removal statutes or the All Writs Act relied upon by Defendants do not present a 3 special circumstance or do not embody policies or interests that transcend those of the parties to 4 this case. None of these statutes expressly require court approval before a plaintiff can voluntarily
5 dismiss. Nor do the statutes cover a substantive area of law that presents concerns comparable to,
6 e.g., the FLSA or the PLRA. The statutes do not implicate unique case management concerns (as 7 with a MDL or class action). Nor are they dedicated to safeguarding the interest of third parties.

8 Defendants protest still that Aetna should not be rewarded for trying to subvert the 9 jurisdiction of this Court. See also Reply at 4 (characterizing Aetna’s actions as “a self-help 10 remand strategy”). But even accepting that as true, that is not sufficient to implicate “any 11 applicable federal statute” warranting an exception to the Rule 41’s conferral of discretion upon 12 the plaintiff to dismiss.<sup>5</sup>

13 To the extent Defendants rely on Lou v. Belzberg, 834 F.2d at 730, that case provides little 14 support. There, the Ninth Circuit simply noted that, where a case has been removed from state to 15 federal court, the federal court has the authority to enjoin the state court action from proceeding.
16 The Ninth Circuit noted that such action is permitted by the Anti-Injunction Act because the 17 statute provides that a federal court “may not grant an injunction to stay proceedings in a State
18 court except as expressly authorized by Act of Congress,” id. at 739 (quoting that Anti-Injunction 19 Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2283; emphasis added), and the removal statute, 28 U.S.C. § 1446(e), has “been 20 construed as an express congressional authorization to enjoin or stay the state court proceedings.”
21 Id. at 740 (noting that § 1446(e) provides that “the State court shall proceed no further unless and 22 until the case is remanded”).

23 Admittedly, the Ninth Circuit did go on to consider what to do when “a new action is filed 24 in state court.” Id. It took note of a case where the Fifth Circuit 25 state[d] that “where a district court finds that a second suit filed in 26

27 <sup>5</sup> Defendants’ position is that Aetna has been trying to subvert the Court’s jurisdiction is somewhat 28 of an irony given that Gilead has engaged in forum shopping just as much as Aetna has. In other words, only because Gilead removed prior to being served was it able to argue against application of the forum defendant rule in the first place.

1 state court is an attempt to subvert the purposes of the removal
2 statute, it is justified and authorized by § 1446(e) in enjoining the 3 proceedings in the state court." It would be of little value to enjoin 4 continuance of a state case after removal and then permit the refiling of essentially the same suit in state court. We agree with the Fifth Circuit that where a second state court suit is fraudulently filed in an attempt to subvert the removal of a prior case, a federal court may enter an injunction.

5 Id. at 741. But even if Lou provides a basis (in dictum) to enjoin a second, identical suit, that is 6 simply an application of § 1446(e). That a district court may enjoin a state suit under the express
7 provision of § 1446(e) does not also imply the power to prevent dismissal under Rule 41. Section
8 1446(e) does not so provide and the policies it embodies are adequately fulfilled by its express 9 authorization of injunctions against state court actions. It is not surprising then that no court has 10 held that the removal statutes or the All Writs Act is an "applicable federal statute" for Rule 41 11 purposes.

12 As a final point, it is worth noting that, as stated at the hearing, Defendants' motion here is 13 driven by efficiency concerns. In other words, Defendants have a desire for all of the cases based 14 on the same underlying facts before one court (this Court) instead of being split between a state 15 court and this Court. But it is not uncommon for parallel cases to be litigated in state and federal 16 court. Furthermore, Defendants admit that their case for removal of Aetna II is not as strong as 17 their case for removal of Aetna I (i.e., because Aetna was able to serve the complaint on Gilead in 18 Aetna II before Defendants could remove). If the Court were to remand Aetna II but grant 19 Defendants relief on Aetna I (based on Defendants' theory that Aetna's subversion of removal 20 jurisdiction should not be rewarded), Defendants would be facing the very situation that they want 21 to avoid – two suits in two venues.<sup>6</sup> Denying dismissal of Aetna I will not guarantee efficiency.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court denies Defendants’ motion to vacate the voluntary dismissal of Aetna I.

This order disposes of Docket No. 863 in C-19-2573 and Docket No. 19 in C-21-9827.
