UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

NATASHA HALL,
Plaintiff,
v.
AETNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
Defendant.

Case No. 20-cv-01863-RS

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT’S
MOTION FOR SUMMARY
JUDGMENT; DENYING PLAINTIFF’S
MOTION FOR SUMMARY
JUDGMENT

I. INTRODUCTION

Dr. Kenneth Light, an orthopedic surgeon, contacted Defendant Aetna Life Insurance Company (“Aetna”) in May of 2019 to announce he was no longer certifying Plaintiff Natasha Hall’s long-term disability. Aetna investigated Hall’s claim and attempted unsuccessfully to follow up with Dr. Light. It soon after terminated Hall’s benefits as a result of its conclusion that she was no longer functionally impaired. This action, brought under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (“ERISA”), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B), arises from the termination. For the reasons set forth below, Aetna’s motion is granted and Hall’s cross-motion is denied.

II. BACKGROUND

A. Undisputed Factual Background

Hall worked at City National Bank (“CNB”) as a Bank Relationship Manager. In this position, she engaged in outside sales and otherwise drummed up business.¹ At some point during her time at CNB, Hall was transferred from the Walnut Creek branch, close to her home in Orinda,

¹ Hall describes her job as requiring forty hours per week of “cognitive analysis, daily computer use, scheduled and impromptu meetings, use of keyboard and telephone all day, occasional lifting, constant up and down sitting, standing, and walking, and travel to customers’ businesses.” Plaintiff’s Motion (“Pl. Mot.”). at 1.

1 to the San Francisco branch. The San Francisco branch refused to accommodate her back 2 condition and denied her requests for a stand-up desk or ergonomic chair and the manager forced 3 Hall to perform non-essential physical tasks. Hall requested a formal FMLA leave of absence 4 effective September 21, 2015 and applied for state disability. In November 2015, she consulted 5 Dr. Light for the first time. He ordered an MRI, which confirmed disc degeneration and 6 herniation. He recommended conservative treatment – pain relievers and potentially an epidural.
7 Hall continued to complain of pain over the next three visits, at which point Dr. Light, by then her 8 treating physician, raised the possibility of surgery.

9 Aetna approved long term disability benefits until January 7, 2019, when Hall’s benefits 10 were first terminated for lack of supporting documentation. Hall sent Aetna the requested records 11 and her benefits were reinstated on January 24, 2019. A few months later, in late May 2019, Dr.
12 Light called Aetna to inform the insurer he was no longer certifying Hall’s disability and signed an 13 Aetna form to that effect on May 29, 2019. AR 613. The parties disagree about why Dr. Light 14 stopped certifying Hall’s disability. Nonetheless, they agree Aetna tried to clarify with Dr. Light 15 why he suddenly stopped certifying Hall’s disability but never heard back. Aetna finally 16 terminated Hall’s benefits without Dr. Light’s input and without conducting a medical 17 examination.² Hall exhausted Aetna’s internal, administrative process with two appeals, which 18 were denied on June 24, 2019 and April 1, 2020, respectively. In January 2020, the Social Security 19 Administration deemed Hall totally disabled.

20 B. Hall’s Contentions

21 Hall has a long history of back pain. She underwent back surgery for the first time in 2006 22 and again eight years later. In early 2017 Hall told Dr. Light the pain was worsening and he 23 recommended an MRI. The MRI indicated “interval resolution” of one disc, but her other issues 24 remained. Pl. Mot. at 11. Dr. Light consequently recommended disc replacement surgery.

26 _____
27 ² Hall asserts benefits were finally denied May 31, 2019 while Aetna contends the denial was 28 finalized on June 1, 2019.

1 In June 2017, Hall told Dr. Light she was two months pregnant and therefore could not 2 undergo surgery. After her baby was born, Hall indicated her pain had worsened. In March 2018
3 she had another MRI indicating no improvement since a scan in March 2017. On that basis Dr.
4 Light certified her disability and sought to resubmit the surgery to Aetna for approval. He re-5 certified her disability in January and April of 2019. In April, he indicated Hall would have 6 surgery in the next two months and was scheduled to be seen again in May. After her May 7, 2019 7 appointment, Hall asserts she “had [a] change in her healthcare insurance and had to stop 8 treatment with Dr. Light after this appointment.” Pl. Mot. at 13.³ Consequently, Dr. Light 9 contacted Aetna and announced he was no longer her treating physician. At the end of May, Dr.
10 Light signed Aetna’s form confirming he was no longer certifying her disability.

11 Hall avers Dr. Light intended to communicate that he was no longer Hall’s treating doctor 12 only because she briefly lost her health insurance. She emphasizes that no document in the record 13 indicates Dr. Light ever changed his opinion about her disability status. She maintains Aetna had 14 medical records in its possession indicating her condition had not improved such as the 15 “Capabilities and Limitations” worksheets completed by Dr. Light on June 17, 2016 and January 16 16, 2019, which indicate a range of severe limitations. She also refers to a document titled “Fair 17 Employment & Housing Commission Certification of Health Care Provider” that appears to be 18 from June 10, 2019, on which Dr. Light, or someone from his office, has written: “Please reverse 19 prior notification of disability termination. Patient will continue to be seen by Dr. Kenneth Light.
20 Patient is not released back to work.” AR 1222.

21 C. Aetna’s Contentions

22 Benefits commenced March 20, 2016, but Hall delayed scheduling the surgery for over 23 three years. In the meantime, she got married, gave birth to two children, purchased and operated a 28 change.

1 yoga studio called Earth & Sea Yoga,⁴ and filed a lawsuit against CNB for wrongful termination.

2 A few days before her preliminary interview with Aetna, Hall commenced a lawsuit 3 against CNB alleging wrongful termination and discrimination in San Francisco Superior Court.
4 Williams v. City Nat'l Bank, Case No. CGC-16-553589.⁵ In it, she alleged she could perform her 5 job even with her back issues but that CNB refused to provide reasonable accommodations. She 6 specifically stated her “disability would not interfere with her ability to perform the job-related 7 functions of her position.” Defendant’s Request for Judicial Notice (“RJN”) Ex. 1.⁶ Hall never 8 voluntarily disclosed the lawsuit to Aetna. She also never volunteered to Aetna anything about her 9 alleged purchase of Earth & Sea Yoga in Lafayette, California in early 2017. Nonetheless, on June 10 7, 2017, she affirmatively represented that she did not own a business and was not working or 11 earning income in spite of her May 16, 2017 registration of the studio with the California 12 Secretary of State as the only member/manager and the California agent. RJN Ex. 2. In late June 13 2017, CNB informed Aetna about the lawsuit and the purchase of the yoga studio. When Aetna 14 confronted Hall about the lawsuit and the studio, she downplayed both, specifically denying she 15 played any meaningful role in the yoga business.

16 From 2016 to 2019, Aetna paid benefits on the assumption Hall would eventually undergo 17 surgery, at which point it would reassess her limitations. In May of 2017, Hall indicated she was 18 waiting for her surgery to be scheduled and that the delay was attributable to insurance issues. In 19 August 2017 she indicated she was waiting for medical clearance to have the surgery, but in 20 March of 2018 Hall admitted for the first time that she had gotten married in the fall of 2016 and 21 given birth in December 2017. On that same call with Aetna, Hall indicated her 14-year-old 22 homeschooled daughter helped care for the newborn and did chores because Hall was unable to

23

24 ⁴ Hall claims never to have been the owner of, or meaningfully involved with, the yoga studio.

25 ⁵ Williams is Hall’s maiden name.

26 ⁶ Aetna requests judicial notice of (1) the complaint in Hall’s case against CNB in state court and 27 (2) the incorporating documents of Earth & Sea Yoga. Hall does not oppose the request, so both 28 items are hereby noticed.

1 walk to the bathroom, dress, or bathe without help. Later that month, Aetna requested updated 2 medical records from Dr. Light. At that time, he was still recommending surgery. Three months 3 later, Hall notified Aetna she had been re-approved for disc replacement surgery but was waiting
4 to schedule the surgery when her husband could take time off work. Relying on Dr. Light's 5 ongoing treatment, Aetna continued to pay benefits.

6 In September 2018, Aetna contacted Dr. Light once again about Hall's surgery. He advised 7 Aetna the surgery had not been scheduled but that Hall was due for a visit in November 2018. As 8 a result of this delay, Aetna conducted a new investigation of Hall's claim, requesting medical 9 records and an updated attending physician statement. Aetna repeatedly attempted to contact Hall 10 and requested other records, like income and business tax returns, but received no response. In 11 January 2019, Aetna terminated the claim for failure to provide requested information.

12 Immediately following the termination, Hall informed Aetna she'd been working with an 13 accountant but had not received a W-2 or 1099 in connection with the yoga studio. She claimed 14 that her only involvement was check-writing for forty-five minutes each month. She also 15 confirmed that her surgery had been scheduled and blamed the delay on Dr. Light's staffing 16 issues, which he later disputed. Aetna re-opened the claim but advised it would schedule a formal 17 medical review to confirm work capacity if the surgery did not occur by May 2019.

18 On May 28, 2019 Dr. Light called Aetna and reported that Hall's surgery had been 19 scheduled but later cancelled because she had not returned his office's calls or messages 20 concerning pre-operation visits and preparation. He also stated he would not be renewing her 21 disability extension and completed a form to the same effect. Two days later, Aetna sent a letter to 22 Hall indicating her benefits were being terminated due to her lack of response and a lack of 23 medical documentation supporting her disability. Again, Hall immediately contacted Aetna and 24 asked for reconsideration. She submitted a note from her May 7, 2019 visit with Dr. Light, but 25 Aetna's nurse reviewer determined there was insufficient medical evidence to support functional 26 limitations from light physical tasks. The nurse reviewer noted most of Dr. Light's findings were 27 normal and that Hall's condition did not seem to have worsened since 2017.

1 Hall formally appealed Aetna’s decision on November 14, 2019. She did not submit any 2 new documentation of her medical condition on appeal; she re-submitted the medical records
3 already on file. For the first time, Hall argued her job required her to perform cognitively difficult 4 tasks and her chronic pain, lack of improvement, and narcotic pain medication prevented her from 5 undertaking such tasks. She also indicated she was unable to schedule her surgery in 2019 because 6 she lost her health insurance. Aetna sent the file to a peer reviewer, Dr. Eric Kerstman, for 7 comment. Dr. Kerstman called Dr. Light on three separate occasions but never received a 8 response. He found Hall’s medical care was consistent with her diagnosis of chronic low back pain 9 but did not find clinical evidence to support a finding of functional or cognitive impairment from 10 June 1, 2019 onward. Aetna declined to perform a medical exam both because Hall was appealing 11 a past termination of benefits and because current functionality was not being contested by a 12 medical professional.⁷

13 D. The Policy

14 The policy reads: “You will be deemed to be totally disabled when, as a result of disease or 15 injury, you are unable to perform with reasonable continuity the substantial and material acts 16 necessary to pursue your own occupation in the usual or customary way and you are not working 17 in your own occupation.” AR 1623 (emphasis in original). One’s “own occupation” is “[a]ny 18 employment, business, trade, or profession and the substantial and material acts of the 19 occupation you were regularly performing for your employer when your period of disability 20 began. Own occupation is not necessarily limited to the specific job you performed for your 21 employer.” Id. at 1628 (emphasis in original). “Your period of disability ends on the first to occur 22 of:

- 23 • The date you are not disabled.
- 24 • The date you fail to give proof that you are still disabled.

25 _____
26 ⁷ Aetna notes Hall had been overpaid $116,836 in benefits after Social Security’s retroactive 27 contribution. In March 2020, Aetna requested reimbursement, but Hall has declined thus far.
28 Aetna indicated at the hearing it was not attempting to recover the overpayment at this time.

1 severity of her back issues and argues that without any documentation of resolution or 2 improvement, the withdrawal of Dr. Light’s certification does not indicate she can suddenly 3 perform her own occupation. Evidence of past impairment may not, however, form the basis for a 4 finding of disability. See Nagy v. Hartford Life & Acc. Ins. Co., 800 Fed.Appx. 555, 556 (9th Cir.
5 2020) (upholding a decision to deny benefits under de novo review in part because plaintiff’s 6 proffered medical records did not address the relevant time period). Moreover, Aetna points out 7 that its early medical reviews are highly deferential to Dr. Light’s opinion that Hall needed 8 surgery. Without his endorsement, Aetna could reasonably doubt the severity of Hall’s symptoms.

9 The policy clearly denotes that a period of disability ends on the date a claimant “fail[s] to 10 give proof that [she is] still disabled,” or “cease[s] to meet the Care of Physician Requirement,” 11 which requires claimants to be under the care of a physician until the care will not improve a 12 condition or prevent it from worsening. AR 1623-24 (emphasis omitted). Hall has not 13 substantiated her allegation that Dr. Light’s withdrawal was a consequence of insurance trouble.
14 Further, Dr. Light signed a form confirming he was no longer certifying her disability and 15 subsequently refused to return Aetna’s calls during the appeals process. Even assuming a lapse in 16 insurance was, indeed, the cause of Dr. Light’s refusal to continue certifying her disability, Hall 17 has also declined to engage, or failed to explain the reasonable absence of, a new treating doctor.
18 In the context of her refusal to submit additional evidence on appeal, an unsigned, handwritten 19 note apparently from Dr. Light’s office reinstating care and asserting Hall was not released back to 20 work cannot show total disability. Hall has thus both failed to offer proof of her disability and 21 ceased to meet the physician requirement. On that basis, her motion must be denied.

22 Hall offers five arguments attacking the procedural soundness of Aetna’s review, all of 23 which are unavailing. First, Hall focuses on Aetna’s reversal of its approval of her benefits without 24 any recent, documented improvement in her condition. She relies on a Sixth Circuit case for the 25 proposition that cancellation of long-held benefits in the absence of evidence that a claimant’s 26 condition has improved is arbitrary and capricious. See Kramer v. Paul Reverse Life Ins. Co., 571 27 F.3d 499, 507 (6th Cir. 2009). She invokes an Eighth Circuit case for a similar proposition: “[I]n 28

1 determining whether an insurer has properly terminated benefits that it initially undertook to pay 2 out, it is important to focus on the events that occurred between the conclusion that benefits were 3 owing and the decision to terminate them.” McOsker v. Paul Revere Life Ins. Co., 279 F.3d 586, 4 590 (8th Cir. 2002).

5 Reliance on these cases is misplaced. Though the quoted line from McOsker generally 6 supports Hall’s theory, in the same case the court recognized that when “information available to 7 an insurer alters in some significant way,” an insurer may reevaluate or “change its mind.” Id. at 8 589. Though nothing indicates Hall’s condition spontaneously resolved in the two weeks between 9 Dr. Light’s last certification and his call to Aetna, a treating physician’s sudden announcement that 10 he will not continue to certify a disability is exactly the type of significant alteration contemplated 11 by McOsker. Similarly, in Kramer, the court found a denial of benefits after five years arbitrary 12 and capricious where the insurer provided “no explanation” for the abrupt about-face. Kramer, 13 571 F.3d at 507. Together with Hall’s failure to engage another doctor and her refusal (or 14 inability) to schedule surgery, Dr. Light’s disavowal casts doubt on the veracity of Hall’s claims of 15 total disability.

16 Second, Hall argues Aetna improperly failed to consider that Hall was awarded social 17 security benefits. In its final denial of Hall’s appeals, Aetna wrote: “We understand that [Hall] has 18 been approved for Social Security Disability (SSD) benefits. However, our disability 19 determination and the SSD determination are made independently and are not always the same.
20 We don’t have an explanation for why Social Security made their determination but it may be 21 because of the Social Security Administration (SSA) regulations.” AR 590. This was not, Hall 22 argues, the “meaningful[] review” required by the Ninth Circuit. Cruz-Baca v. Edison Int’l Long 23 Term Disability Plan, 708 Fed.Appx. 313, 315 (9th Cir. 2017).

24 Hall presents Aetna’s explanation out of context. It contextualized: “For example, SSA 25 regulations require that certain disease/diagnoses or certain education or age levels be given 26 heavier or even controlling weight in determining whether an individual is entitled to SSD 27 benefits. The Long Term Disability Insurance policy does not have these requirements. In

1 addition, Social Security reviews claim files less frequently and it is possible that they have not 2 reviewed your file recently and therefore they may not have the same information that we have in 3 our file.” AR 590. While these additional sentences only lightly “grapple” with the award of SSD 4 benefits on a generic level, they suggest that Aetna considered the reasons the decisions may have 5 come out different ways. See Cruz-Baca, 708 Fed.Appx at 315; Glenn v. MetLife, 461 F.3d 660, 6 671 n.3 (6th Cir. 2006) (noting a difference between mentioning a piece of contrary evidence and 7 discussing it).

8 Third, and arguably most importantly, Hall argues Aetna misinterpreted Dr. Light’s May 9 2019 call to Aetna. She insists he only informed Aetna that he was no longer the treating doctor, 10 not that he believed Hall could return to work. Hall asserts Aetna knew what Dr. Light meant, and 11 called him to clarify, but ultimately rushed forward to deny benefits without his response. As 12 discussed above, however, Hall submits no evidence substantiating her claim that she lost or 13 changed her insurance or that Dr. Light’s call was directly attributable to an insurance change.
14 Again, the burden rests on the claimant to prove she is entitled to benefits and she has not offered 15 any evidence to counter the reasonable assumption that Dr. Light contacted Aetna because he was 16 no longer comfortable certifying her disability for medical reasons.

17 Fourth, Hall contends that Aetna may not point to her delay in scheduling, and ultimate 18 failure to undergo, surgery as a reason for denying benefits. See Elliott v. Life Ins. Co. of North 19 Am. Inc., 2019 WL 2970843, at *7 (N.D. Cal. July 9, 2019) (“[T]he Court declines to find 20 [plaintiff’s] decision not to undergo [invasive] brain surgery is indicative of a lack of credibility.”).
21 While there is an argument to be made that if Dr. Light’s withdrawal of his disability certification 22 was, in fact, just a symptom of Hall’s gap in insurance coverage, Hall remains medically eligible 23 for serious surgery. This, in turn, supports her contention that she was totally disabled at the time 24 of termination. Without more, however, this fact does not prove that contention by a 25 preponderance of the evidence.

26 Fifth, Hall argues that the decision to terminate her benefits was improper because it was 27 erroneously based on an unsupported conclusion by a medical consultant contrary to a treating 28

1 doctor and without an examination. Hall contends Dr. Kerstman’s paper review did not consider 2 Hall’s job duties or explain why he “rejected the findings of the physician who had actually 3 examined plaintiff and found plaintiff could not work.” Mot. at 20. Furthermore, she argues, 4 Aetna did not conduct its own examination of Hall even though the policy gave Aetna the right to 5 do so. Lastly, Hall insists a “reasoned and deliberate review” should be especially required in 6 cases where the insurer does not physically examine the claimant.

7 This argument also misses the mark. Both the record review and the examination were 8 optional. Hall does not make any kind of argument, let alone a persuasive one, about why Aetna 9 was required to undertake either one in this instance. Lastly, this argument, as did the previous 10 four, attacks Aetna’s process rather than focusing on Hall’s entitlement to benefits at the time of 11 termination. Hall has thus failed to show that Aetna’s procedures and review were not “reasoned 12 and deliberate.”

13 V. CONCLUSION

14 Hall has not demonstrated she is entitled to benefits and her motion must therefore be 15 denied. Aetna’s cross motion is granted.
