ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART
PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES

1 Plaintiffs' consolidated motion for attorneys' fees came on for hearing before this 2 court on November 12, 2008. Plaintiffs Defenders of Wildlife, Sierra Club,<sup>1</sup> The Wilderness 3 Society, and the Vermont Natural Resources Council (referred to collectively as 4 "Defenders") appeared through their counsel, Trent Orr. Plaintiffs Citizens for Better 5 Forestry, Environmental Protection Information Center, Center for Biological Diversity, the 6 Ecology Center, Gifford Pinchot Task Force, Kettle Range Conservation Group, Idaho
7 Sporting Congress, Friends of the Clearwater, Utah Environmental Congress, Cascadia
8 Wildlands Project, Klamath Siskiyou Wildlands Center, Southern Appalachian Biodiversity
9 Project, Headwaters, the Lands Council, and Oregon Natural Resources Council Fund 10 (previously referred to collectively as "Citizens") appeared through their counsel, Peter 11 Frost. Federal defendants, Mike Johanns, the Secretary of the United States Department 12 of Agriculture, Dale Bosworth, the Chief of the United States Forest Service, and the United 13 States Forest Service, an agency within USDA (referred to collectively as "USDA"), 14 appeared through their counsel, Andrew Smith. Having reviewed the parties' papers, the 15 record, and having carefully considered their arguments and the relevant legal authorities, 16 the court hereby GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART plaintiffs' motion for attorneys' 17 fees.

18 BACKGROUND

19 Defenders filed their case, 04-4512 PJH, on October 26, 2004, asserting five claims 20 for relief under the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA"), 5 U.S.C. § 553, the National 21 Forest Management Act of 1976 ("NFMA"), 16 U.S.C. § 1600 et seq., and the National 22 Environmental Policy Act ("NEPA"), 42 U.S.C. § 4231 et seq., against USDA.

23 Defenders subsequently filed a supplemental complaint on February 17, 2005.
24 Defendants American Forest & Paper Association and American Forest Resource Council
25 (collectively "defendant-intervenors") intervened on May 23, 2005. On October 14, 2005, 26 this court granted in part and denied in part defendants' motion for partial summary 27

28 <sup>1</sup>Plaintiff Sierra Club does not seek any fees in conjunction with this motion because all parties agree that based on its size and other factors, it is ineligible for fees.

1 judgment and/or for judgment on the pleadings as to three of the five claims in the 2 Defenders case. The court denied summary judgment as to two of the claims, and granted 3 it as to one. Thus, following the motion, four claims remained. Subsequently, on October 4 17, 2005, the State of California intervened in the Defenders case, and filed a complaint 5 stating two claims (which overlapped with surviving claims in both the Defenders and 6 Citizens cases).

7       Following this court's initial summary judgment order in the Defenders case, on 8 March 21, 2005, Citizens filed their complaint in case number 05-1144 PJH. Citizens 9 subsequently filed a supplemental complaint on November 7, 2005, alleging ten claims 10 under NEPA, the APA, and the Endangered Species Act ("ESA") against USDA.
11 Defendants American Forest & Paper Association and American Forest Resource Council
12 intervened in the Citizens case as well. On April 21, 2006, the court granted defendants' 13 motion for partial summary judgment and/or judgment on the pleadings, and dismissed six 14 of the ten claims in the Citizens case. Accordingly, there were also four remaining claims in 15 the Citizens case at the time the final summary judgment motions in these cases were 16 heard.

17       Although the Citizens and Defenders cases were both assigned to this court, they 18 were never formally related or consolidated. However, because of the overlapping nature 19 of the eight surviving claims in the two cases, on May 10, 2006, the court ordered 20 consolidated briefing on the final summary judgment motions as to the remaining claims.
21 The court heard the final summary judgment motions on November 1, 2006, and on 22 November 21, 2006, after the hearing, ordered supplemental consolidated briefing on the 23 NEPA and ESA claims. On March 31, 2007, the court issued its summary judgment order 24 granting in part and denying in part plaintiffs' and defendants' motions for summary 25 judgment, and enjoining USDA from implementing and/or utilizing the 2005 Forest Rule at 26 issue. USDA subsequently filed a motion to alter the judgment, which this court denied on 27 July 3, 2007. In that order, the court also found that the injunction should be 28 nationwide in scope.

1 The court subsequently ordered that Citizens and Defenders consolidate their 2 motions for attorneys' fees, which they have done.

3 DISCUSSION

4 A. Plaintiffs' Motion

5 Defenders and Citizens both claim that they are entitled to fees under the Equal 6 Access to Justice Act ("EAJA") based on their NEPA and APA claims. See Wilderness 7 Society v. Babbitt, 5 F.3d 383, 385 (9th Cir. 1993) (parties that prevail under NEPA and the 8 APA may seek attorney's fees, costs, and other expenses pursuant to the EAJA since 9 NEPA and the APA do not themselves contain a citizen suit provision). However, because 10 Citizens also brought an ESA claim, it also contends that it is entitled to attorneys' fees 11 under ESA, which, unlike NEPA and the APA, does contain a citizen suit provision.

12 1. Legal Standards

13 a. EAJA

14 The EAJA, 28 U.S.C § 2412, allows prevailing parties to recover attorneys' fees in 15 cases brought by or against the United States unless the position of the United States in 16 the litigation was substantially justified, or special circumstances make an award unjust. 28
17 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1)(A). Plaintiffs may be considered prevailing parties for attorneys' fees 18 purposes if they succeed on any significant issue in litigation which achieves some of the 19 benefit the parties sought in bringing suit. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 433 (1983).
20 "[A] plaintiff 'prevails' when actual relief on the merits of his claim materially alters the legal 21 relationship between the parties by modifying the defendant's behavior in a way that 22 directly benefits the plaintiff." Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 111-12 (1992). The 23 prevailing party must also show that it is eligible to receive an award under the EAJA. 28 24 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1)(B); Love v. Reilly, 924 F.2d 1492, 1494 (9th Cir. 1991). A party is 25 "eligible" if it is an organization with a net worth that does not exceed $7,000,000, and it

26 \\\

27 \\\

28 \\\

1 does not have more than 500 employees at the time the action was filed. 28 U.S.C. § 2 2412(d)(2)(B).<sup>2</sup>

3       Once a party has established that it filed a timely application, is eligible for an award, 4 and is the prevailing party, an award of fees is mandatory, unless the government's position 5 was substantially justified or special circumstances exist that make an award of fees unjust.
6       See Love, 924 F.2d at 1494-95. The government has the burden of proving substantial 7 justification. Id. at 1495. To satisfy this burden, the government must demonstrate that its 8 position had a reasonable basis both in law and fact. U.S. v. Real Property, 190 F.3d 977, 9 984 (9th Cir. 1999).

10       The EAJA allows for the award of attorneys' fees "based upon the prevailing market 11 rates for the kind and quality of the services furnished," capped at $125 per hour, "unless 12 the court determines that an increase in the cost of living or a special factor, such as the 13 limited availability of qualified attorneys for the proceedings involved, justifies a higher fee." 14 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1)(D)(2)(A). In order to receive enhanced attorneys' fees, the 15 following three factors must be proven: (1) "the attorney must possess distinctive 16 knowledge and skills developed through a practice specialty;" (2) "those distinctive skills 17 must be needed in the litigation;" and (3) "those skills must not be available elsewhere at 18 the statutory rate." Love, 924 F.2d at 1496. Environmental litigation may constitute an 19 identifiable practice specialty. Natural Resources Defense Council v. Winter, 543 F.3d 20 1152, 1159-60 (9th Cir. 2008). The burden of proving that appropriate counsel cannot be 21 found at the statutory rate rests with the plaintiff. Id. at 1159-60 (citing Real Property, 190 22 F.3d at 985).

23       The Ninth Circuit has developed a two-part test to be applied where a plaintiff's 24 success is limited.

25       First, the court asks whether the claims upon which the plaintiff failed to 26 prevail were related to the plaintiff's successful claims. If unrelated, the final 27 fee award may not include time expended on the unsuccessful claims. If the

28       <sup>2</sup>Here, there is no dispute that all plaintiffs, except for Sierra Club, are eligible to receive an award under the EAJA.

1 unsuccessful and successful claims are related, then the court must apply the 2 second part of the analysis, in which the court evaluates the 'significance of 3 the overall relief obtained by the plaintiff in relation to the hours reasonably 4 expended on the litigation.' If the plaintiff obtained 'excellent results,' full compensation may be appropriate, but if only 'partial or limited success' was obtained, full compensation may be excessive. Such decisions are within the district court's discretion.

5 Thorne v. City of El Segundo, 802 F.2d 1131, 1141 (9th Cir. 1986).

6 In Hensley, the Supreme Court held that, "[w]here the plaintiff has failed to prevail on 7 a claim that is distinct in all respects from his successful claims, the hours spent on the 8 unsuccessful claim should be excluded in considering the amount of a reasonable fee." 461 9 U.S. at 440; Thorne, 802 F.2d at 1141. Unrelated claims are "distinctly different" and 10 based on different facts and legal theories, while related claims "involve a common core of 11 facts or [are] based on related legal theories." Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434-35, 437 n. 12; 12 Thorne, 802 F.2d at 1141; Jeff D. v. Andrus, 899 F.2d 753, 765 (9th Cir.1989).

13 The Ninth Circuit applies a "course of conduct" benchmark to determine whether 14 claims are related or unrelated: "the test is whether relief sought on the unsuccessful claim 15 is intended to remedy a course of conduct entirely distinct and separate from the course of 16 conduct that gave rise to the injury on which the relief granted is premised." Thorne, 802 17 F.2d at 1141. Further, a plaintiff may be compensated for attorneys' fees incurred for 18 services even on unsuccessful claims that contribute to the ultimate victory in the lawsuit.
19 Schwarz v. Secretary of Health and Human Services, 73 F.3d 895, 903 (9th Cir. 1995); 20 Cabrales v. County of Los Angeles, 935 F.2d 1050, 1052 (9th Cir. 1991).

21 The EAJA provides that the prevailing party can recover litigation expenses and 22 costs in addition to attorneys' fees. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(a)(1); § 2412(d)(1)(A). "Expenses" 23 include those that are normally billed to a client, such as telephone calls, postage, and 24 attorney travel expenses. International Woodworkers v. Donovan, 792 F.2d 762, 767 (9th 25 Cir. 1986).

26 b. ESA

27 In any citizen suit brought under ESA, a district court "may award costs of litigation 28

1 (including reasonable attorney and expert witness fees) to any party, whenever the court 2 determines such award is appropriate.” 16 U.S.C. § 1540(g)(4). Although the Supreme 3 Court has not explicitly considered the contours of “appropriateness” in the context of ESA, 4 it has considered an identical attorneys' fees provision of the Clean Air Act in Ruckelshaus
5 v. Sierra Club. 463 U.S. 680 (1983). The Court held that a party need only prevail in part, 6 i.e., achieve “some degree of success on the merits,” before a district court may determine 7 that an award of attorneys' fees is appropriate. Id. at 694. “[T]he class of parties eligible 8 for fee awards from prevailing parties . . . [is] expand[ed] . . . to partially prevailing parties-9 parties achieving some success, even if not major success.” Id. at 688.

10 Reasonable hourly rates under the attorney fee provision of ESA “must be 11 calculated according to the prevailing market rates in the relevant legal community, with 12 close attention paid to the fees charged by lawyers of reasonably comparable skill, 13 experience and reputation.” Marbled Murrelet v. Pac. Lumber Co., 163 F.R.D. 308, 316 14 (N.D. Cal. 1995). If fees are appropriate, “[t]he most useful starting point for determining 15 the amount of a reasonable fee is the number of hours reasonably expended on the 16 litigation multiplied by a reasonable hourly rate,” in other words, the “lodestar.” Hensley, 17 461 U.S. at 433; Jordan v. Multnomah County, 815 F.2d 1258, 1262 (9th Cir. 1987). While 18 the lodestar is the presumptively reasonable fee award, it may be adjusted to 19 accommodate degree of success. Ferland v. Conrad Credit Corp., 244 F.3d 1145 (9th Cir.
20 2001). In calculating the lodestar, the court must determine both a reasonable number of 21 hours and a reasonable hourly rate for each attorney. Chalmers v. City of Los Angeles, 22 796 F.2d 1205, 1210 (9th Cir. 1986), amended by 808 F.2d 1373 (1987). The district court 23 has tremendous discretion in fashioning a fee award. See Corder v. Howard Johnson &
24 Co., 53 F.3d 225, 229 (9th Cir. 1994); Lads Trucking Co. v. Board of Trustees, 777 F.2d 25 1371 (9th Cir. 1985) (the district court's determination should be reversed only for abuse of 26 discretion); Hummell v. S.E. Rykoff & Co., 634 F.2d 446, 452 (9th Cir. 1980) (“Abuse of 27 discretion is found only when there is a definite conviction that the court made a clear error 28 of judgment in its conclusion upon weighing relevant factors.”).

1           2. Summary of Fees Requested

2 The court provides a chart summarizing the total fees and costs requested by Defenders
 3 and Citizens plaintiffs, the hours billed by individual attorneys, each of the attorneys' billable 4 rates, and the total fees and expenses claimed.

5 Attorney	Billable Rate	Total Hours Actually Spent	Hours Claimed	Total Fees

25 <sup>3</sup>Defenders revised the amount of fees sought from their opening papers to their reply.
 26 Initially, Defenders sought $511,194.50 in fees for work on the merits (that did not include fees 27 related to the attorneys' fees motion). See Orr Decl. I., ¶ 32. Following the government's 28 opposition, Defenders deducted an additional $10,261.50 from their fee request, and in their reply, Defenders requested $500,933.00. See Reply at 15. The reductions represented 30.1
 hours of a law clerk's time for researching an unsuccessful claim, see Orr Decl. II, ¶ 10, and 13.6 hours of Orr's time spent on the preliminary drafting of the portion of the complaint pertaining to an unsuccessful claim. See id. at ¶ 2, ll. 12-14.

8 3. Attorneys' Experience/Backgrounds

9 Defenders and Citizens filed more than thirty declarations in support of their motion 10 for fees, many of which vouched for the quality of the attorneys' representation in this case, 11 the attorneys' experience and billing rates, and for the fact that plaintiffs could not secure 12 qualified attorneys to take the case at the EAJA statutory rate. The court has summarized 13 below the attorneys' backgrounds and experience based on the submitted declarations.

14 a. Trent Orr (Defenders)

15 Orr graduated from Harvard Law School in 1977. Since then, he has worked almost 16 exclusively for public interest environmental organizations, including among others, the 17 Natural Resources Defense Council, the California Wilderness Coalition, and since 2000, 18 Earthjustice. Earthjustice represented Defenders in the current litigation. It does not bill its 19 clients for its attorneys' fees, but instead provides free legal representation so long as 20 Earthjustice is satisfied that the litigation is in the public interest and meets certain other 21 criteria. Orr has been compensated by Earthjustice for his work, both at an hourly rate as a 22 contractor and on a salaried basis as a staff attorney. He does not receive any additional 23 compensation for any court-awarded fees in the litigation; all fees benefit Earthjustice.

24 Several other attorneys vouch personally for Orr's skills and experience, in addition 25 to his billing rate, including Cynthia Koehler, Robert Perlmutter, and James Wheaton.

26 b. Timothy Preso (Defenders)

27 Preso graduated from Georgetown Law School in 1994. He clerked for a year for a 28 federal appellate judge, and then worked at a law firm for five years (not necessarily in 1 environmental law). Preso became a staff attorney with Earthjustice in 2000. He has 2 worked on several cases involving challenges under NEPA, the APA, and NFMA.

3 Like Orr, he receives a net salary that is not affected by the recovery of attorneys' 4 fees. The declarations that support Orr's fees similarly support Preso's fees.

5 c. Michael Leahy (Defenders)

6 Unlike Orr and Preso, Leahy is a staff attorney for named party, Defenders of 7 Wildlife. Leahy notes that given the other responsibilities of his position at Defenders, he 8 was unable to act as lead counsel, but did play a role on the legal team.

9 Leahy graduated from Georgetown Law School in 2000. He was admitted to law 10 school as a public interest law scholar. Prior to law school, Leahy worked in conservation 11 at the National Audubon Society. After graduating from law school in 2000, he became a 12 staff attorney for Defenders until August 2007. In September 2007, Leahy was promoted to 13 director of the Rocky Mountain region for Defenders, a position that he currently holds.
14 Leahy has served as counsel, including lead counsel, in a number of other environmental 15 cases.

16 d. Peter M.K. Frost (Citizens)

17 Frost graduated from the University of Oregon Law School in 1990. After 18 graduating, he served as a law clerk at a state court of appeals for two years. From 1992-19 1999, he was a staff attorney for the National Wildlife Foundation, and during that time, also 20 taught a clinical environmental law class at Lewis and Clark Law School. In 1999, Frost 21 became an attorney at the Western Environmental Law Center in Eugene, Oregon.
22 Western is a nonprofit public interest law firm. He also teaches an environmental law 23 school class at the University of Oregon Law School. Frost has substantial experience in 24 environmental cases before this court and before the Ninth Circuit. He has also published 25 in the environmental law field.

26 Sharon Dugan and Luke Cole have submitted declarations personally vouching for 27 Frost in terms of his skills and his fees in this case.

28 \\\

1                   e.        Marc Fink (Citizens)

2                    Fink graduated from Lewis and Clark Law School in 1995, and obtained a certificate 3 of completion in environmental and natural resources law. After graduation, Fink was a 4 solo practitioner until 1999, representing environmental organizations in cases against 5 federal agencies. Fink then spent six years as a staff attorney at the same public interest 6 law firm as Frost, the Western Environmental Law Center in Eugene, Oregon. Fink then 7 returned to practice as a solo practitioner for a couple years before joining the Center for 8 Biological Diversity as a staff attorney. Fink has worked on numerous environmental cases 9 in the Ninth Circuit.

10                   4.        Parties' Arguments Generally

11                    At the outset, the court notes that there are several significant issues that USDA 12 does not dispute. Those include: (1) Citizens is eligible for an ESA fee award; (2) Citizens 13 and all but one of Defenders plaintiffs (Sierra Club) are eligible for EAJA fees; (3) USDA's 14 position was not substantially justified, and no special circumstances exist such that a fee 15 award is not appropriate under the EAJA; (4) plaintiffs' counsel are entitled to enhanced 16 hourly rates under the EAJA, and are also entitled to the same hourly rates under the EAJA
17 and ESA; (5) the hourly rates requested by Orr, Frost, and Fink are reasonable; and (6) 18 plaintiffs are entitled to recover their costs and expenses.

19                    Plaintiffs argue that their total hours were reasonable under both ESA and the EAJA.
20 They assert that Defenders and Citizens attempted to divide tasks equitably, but 21 acknowledge that there was some overlap, which they contend was necessary to ensure 22 that their consolidated work reflected their respective clients' interests. Citizens note that 23 Frost and Fink have omitted 34.30 hours spent opposing USDA's motion for judgment on 24 the pleadings and/or for summary judgment, a motion that Citizens lost pursuant to the 25 court's April 21, 2006 order. Frost and Fink also omitted time spent on media matters, on 26 related matters not exclusive to this suit, and on clerical tasks.

27                    As for Defenders attorneys, who have billed nearly 2 1/2 times as much as Citizens 28 attorneys, plaintiffs note that Defenders filed its complaint in October 2004, several months

1 prior to the filing of Citizens' complaint in March 2005. Defenders assert that they were 2 responsible for developing "core facts" in the case regarding USDA's alleged "paradigm" 3 shift that was central not only to success on their APA and NEPA claims, but to the ESA 4 claim brought in Citizens' companion case as well. Defenders argue that given the fact that 5 they obtained "the vast preponderance of the relief sought," their hours were reasonable.
6 They further contend that the number of hours is reasonable in light of "the numerous tasks 7 necessary to bring this case to a successful conclusion, the vigorous opposition of the 8 defendants, the complexity of the issues, and the national importance of the matters in 9 dispute and of the result achieved."

10 Nevertheless, Defenders note that Orr, lead counsel for Defenders, has eliminated 11 424 hours of attorney time valued at $166,902.50, which represents time spent on activities 12 like media contacts, work related solely to the intervention of timber interests, as well as 13 time entries that Orr deemed duplicative or unnecessary.

14 Defenders attorneys also omitted 73.5 hours, or $27,562.50 in fees, spent by 15 attorney Preso on the Interpretive Rule claim - on which plaintiffs did not prevail.
16 Defenders also note that although Orr's role with respect to the losing claim was minimal, 17 Orr himself has reduced his own time by 15%, which represents 145.9 hours and 18 $72,950.00 in fees.

19 Turning to USDA's opposition, the court finds that like its motion to alter or amend 20 the judgment, USDA has once again significantly mischaracterized the case. Its 21 mischaracterizations include USDA's assertions that this case was "not particularly 22 complex or lengthy," that it "turned on a single judicial opinion," that it could be resolved 23 based on a small number of existing Ninth Circuit cases, and that plaintiffs did nothing more 24 than reiterate the legal and factual arguments already addressed by the Ninth Circuit in 25 Citizens for Better Forestry v. USDA, 341 F.3d 961 (9th Cir. 2003) (referred to hereinafter 26 as "Citizens I"). The court finds that none of these characterizations are accurate, and is 27 once again baffled by what are at best erroneous, and perhaps disingenuous, 28 representations regarding the case.

1           Moreover, instead of addressing plaintiffs' requested fees in accordance with the 2 applicable ESA and the EAJA legal standards, and with respect to the particular billing 3 records in this case, USDA has, for the most part, simply analogized this case with Citizens 4 I, arguing that the fees in this case should be commensurate with the fees sought in that 5 case. USDA divides this case and the Citizens I case into tasks, and compares the time 6 spent on particular tasks in this case with time spent on particular tasks in the Citizens I 7 case. USDA's approach is to reduce plaintiffs' counsels' hours per task based on the 8 amount of time spent on certain tasks by Citizens I attorneys. Accordingly, USDA's 9 opposition is almost entirely based on the premise that this case is comparable to Citizens
10 I, and that "reasonable" fees and hours per task can be determined based on those sought 11 and awarded in Citizens I.

12           In addition to the task-related comparisons with the Citizens I case, USDA also 13 objects to plaintiffs' fee request on the following bases:

- 14           (1) plaintiffs' failure to account for plaintiff-intervenor State of California's role in 15 litigation, and to deduct that time from claimed hours;
- 16           (2) plaintiffs' failure to properly account for ineligible plaintiff Sierra Club's role in 17 the litigation; and
- 18           (3) Defenders' counsel Preso's and Leahy's hourly rates.

19           5. Analysis

20           1. USDA's Comparison of this Case with *Citizens I

21           As noted on the record at the November 12, 2008 hearing, the court is troubled by 22 USDA's approach in opposing the instant motion. Instead of lodging legitimate objections 23 to the billing records in this case, USDA chose to simply undertake a task-by-task 24 comparison of this case and Citizens I. Not only is there no authority supporting USDA's 25 approach, but the cases themselves are more dissimilar than they are similar. USDA is 26 therefore comparing apples with oranges. Some of the most notable distinctions between 27 this case and Citizens I are as follows:

- 28           (1) This case, unlike Citizens I, involved a consolidation of two cases. Two summary judgment motions regarding standing, ripeness, and mootness were

1 necessitated prior to the point at which the court consolidated briefing on the 2 merits of the NEPA, APA, and ESA claims in this case;

- 3 (2) In Citizens I, the district court dismissed the case on standing grounds. That 4 was not the case here. Here, numerous claims survived the initial summary 5 judgment phase, thus necessitating another summary judgment round that 6 did not take place in Citizens I;
- 7 (3) There are more parties in this case, and the Defenders plaintiffs and 8 attorneys were not involved in Citizens I;
- 9 (4) There were significantly more claims raised in this case, and the claims 10 challenged a different rule, the 2005 Rule instead of the 2000 Rule;
- 11 (5) The plaintiffs in this case achieved a much higher degree of success than the 12 plaintiffs in Citizens I - they obtained a nationwide injunction on the merits of 13 their claims; and
- 14 (6) The court had to grapple with difficult issues that, contrary to USDA's 15 characterization, had not been decided by the Ninth Circuit.

16 This list is by no means exhaustive. Most, if not all, of the tasks that USDA has 17 chosen to compare are themselves dissimilar.

18 The court therefore rejects USDA's suggestion that it need simply compare this case 19 with Citizens I. Although the court rejects USDA's approach, it nevertheless finds that 20 several reductions in plaintiffs' requested fees, some alluded to by USDA, are warranted as 21 set forth below.

22 2. Reductions

23 Initially, the court notes that the correct comparison in this case is a comparison of 24 Citizens' hours and fees with those of Defenders, and vice versa. There is no dispute that 25 Defenders filed its complaint first and did indeed perform some of the necessary legwork 26 prior to Citizens' involvement in the case. Moreover, even Citizens acknowledges that at 27 times, Defenders, and specifically, Orr, performed the "lion's share" of certain tasks, 28 namely the review of the administrative record.

However, the court remains troubled by the significant discrepancies in Defenders' and Citizens' fees. As noted, Defenders' fees are nearly two and one-half times those of Citizens, and exceed Citizens' requested fees by a staggering $328,918.03. The court finds that this discrepancy is not entirely justified by Defenders' early involvement or by its

1 surplus efforts. Instead, it suggests that Defenders simply has not exercised the same 2 degree of billing judgment exercised by Citizens in this case.

3 For example, Defenders' lead counsel's hourly rate of $500 exceeds that of Citizens' 4 lead counsel's by a range of $75-200, depending on the billing year. Although there is 5 nothing in the record that suggests that $500 is not a legitimate billing rate for Orr, the court 6 finds the same is not true for the number of hours expended by Orr and by Defenders on 7 certain tasks, as set forth in more detail below.

8 a. State of California's Role

9 USDA argues that Defenders and Citizens plaintiffs' counsels' hours spent on the 10 final summary judgment briefs should be reduced because USDA assumes that plaintiff-11 intervenor, the State of California, participated in the summary judgment briefing. Plaintiffs 12 note that the State of California did not spend much time on the case, but instead ceded 13 primary responsibility for record review and drafting of the briefs to Defenders and Citizens.
14 Raissa Lerner, a deputy attorney general for California filed a declaration in support of 15 plaintiffs' reply, and notes that the State is not seeking any fees and that she is unaware of 16 the number of hours the State contributed to the final summary judgment effort. She 17 asserts that the State indeed ceded primary responsibility to Citizens and Defenders, and 18 notes that the State's hours would be "far less than that of either of the primary plaintiff 19 groups."

20 The State of California has not submitted a fee application; nor has USDA 21 demonstrated that Defenders and/or Citizens duplicated work performed by the State.
22 Accordingly, the court declines to reduce plaintiffs' fee request on this basis.

23 b. Defenders Counsel Preso's and Leahy's Hourly Rates

24 USDA argues that Preso's hourly rate of $375, and Leahy's hourly rate of $275 are 25 too high when compared with Citizens' attorneys' rates. USDA asserts that both Preso and 26 Leahy possess only eight years of experience specializing in environmental law, and notes 27 that Leahy has far less litigation experience. USDA further notes that Preso's rate is the 28 same as that of Frost, who has sixteen years experience in environmental litigation. It also

1 notes that Fink, a Citizens attorney with eleven years environmental litigation experience, 2 more than Preso, has a rate that is $50/hour less than Preso's.

3 In reply, Defenders argues that Leahy and Preso independently established the 4 rates they seek. They contend that their supporting declarations support the rates, and that 5 it is not necessary for the court to bring their rates in line with those of Citizens attorneys.

6 The court, however, finds Leahy's and Preso's hourly rates excessive and not 7 reasonable, especially when compared to Frost's. See Chalmers, 796 F.2d at 1210; see 8 also Love, 924 F.2d at 1496. The court thus finds that Leahy's hourly rate should be 9 reduced from $275/hour to $225/hour, and Preso's hourly rate should be reduced from 10 $375/hour to $250/hour.

11 The reduced hourly rates result in a total reduction of $24,015.00 to Defenders' fees, 12 which represents an $18,375.00 reduction attributable to Preso, and a $5,640.00 reduction 13 attributable to Leahy. Accordingly, after this reduction, Defenders' overall fees and costs 14 are now $497,469.71.

15 c. Sierra Club's Role

16 USDA argues that Defenders' billing records indicate active participation by the 17 Sierra Club, and that Defenders' fees should be reduced on this basis. Defenders respond 18 that Sierra Club did not provide staff counsel to work on the case, and that the case would 19 have been brought absent the Sierra Club plaintiffs.

20 The court finds Defenders' overall award should be reduced by the number of hours 21 that it billed for time related exclusively to communications with Sierra Club. The court has 22 reviewed Defenders' billing records accordingly, and finds that Orr's fees should be 23 reduced by 8 hours, or $4,000.00, and Preso's fees should be reduced by 0.5 hours, or 24 $125.00, for a total reduction of $4,125.00.

25 Accordingly, after this reduction, Defenders' overall fees and costs are now 26 $493,344.71.

1           d.     Drafting of Complaints

2           Defenders spent 220.6 hours on complaint-related tasks, while Citizens claimed 21.6 3 hours for the same tasks.

4           Both Defenders and Citizens filed a complaint and a supplemental complaint.
5 Defenders' first complaint was 13 pages and contained only one claim, alleging a violation 6 of the APA based on USDA's failure to provide opportunity for comment on the 2004 7 Interpretive Rule, the claim on which the court granted summary judgment in favor of 8 USDA. Defenders' supplemental complaint was 34 pages long, and raised five claims, four 9 of which were brought under the APA and involved the 2004 Interpretive Rule and the 2005
10 Rule, and one brought under NEPA and the APA. The amended complaint set forth a 25 11 page history and background of the 2005 Rule.

12           Citizens' supplemental complaint, filed after Defenders' complaint, alleged ten claims 13 for relief, eight of which overlapped with the five claims brought by Defenders (Citizens 14 broke its claims down more narrowly than Defenders.) Citizens also alleged two additional 15 claims - one under NEPA and the APA, and the other under ESA – both of which were 16 ultimately successful.

17           Regarding the 199 hour discrepancy, Defenders assert that their time was not spent 18 simply on drafting the complaints, but that extensive legal research was required, in 19 addition to detailed review of the 1982 Rule, 2000 Rule, 2002 Proposed Rule, and the 2005 20 Rule. Defenders note that they have already deleted 13.6 hours or $6,800 worth of time 21 spent on the 2004 Interpretive Rule claim, which was unsuccessful. Defenders further note 22 that they filed their supplemental complaint before Citizens filed their first complaint, and 23 that Citizens had the benefit of Defenders' complaint, which set forth a highly detailed 24 comparison of the four planning rules.

25           The court finds that it was reasonable for Defenders' time on this task to exceed that 26 of Citizens, but not by nearly ten times the amount. The court therefore finds that 27 Defenders is entitled to no more than 50 hours related to the research and drafting of the 28 complaint and supplemental complaint, a reduction of 170.6 hours. Because neither party

1 has delineated how much time each attorney spent on this task, see Orr Decl. I at ¶ 24, the 2 court has averaged Defenders attorneys' hourly rates, which results in an average rate of 3 $325, and has multiplied that by 170.6 hours, for a total reduction of $55,445.00.

4 Accordingly, after this reduction, Defenders' overall fees and costs are now 5 $437,899.71.

6 e. Orr's Review of Administrative Record

7 Defenders spent a total of 193.3 hours reviewing the administrative record and the 8 Forest Service Directives for the 2005 Rule. By comparison, Citizens spent 53.8 hours on 9 this task, or one-fourth of the amount of time.

10 USDA specifically takes issue with Orr's review of the administrative record. It 11 claims that as an experienced attorney, Orr should have recognized that the case did not 12 turn on the record, and suggests that the record review should have been assigned to a 13 paralegal as opposed to an attorney billing $500/hour.

14 Defenders note that Orr reviewed the entire record and summarized the results of 15 that review for all plaintiffs' counsel, thus eliminating the need for other plaintiffs' counsel to 16 conduct such an in-depth review.<sup>4</sup> They also note that at least 30 hours of Defenders' time 17 was spent ensuring that USDA corrected numerous record defects and produced a fully-18 indexed record. At the hearing, Orr stated that given the organization of his law firm, it was 19 not possible for another attorney or support staff to review the record.

20 The court recognizes that the administrative record in this case was more 21 complicated and lengthier than USDA's characterization of it. Nevertheless, the court finds 22 it unreasonable for an experienced environmental attorney with a $500/hour billing rate to 23 spend nearly five weeks reviewing the record. Accordingly, the court finds that Defenders' 24 fees related to this task should be reduced by 110.3 hours and $55,150.00, such that 25 Defenders are entitled to 80 hours at $500/hour, Orr's billing rate.

26
27
28 <sup>4</sup>At the November 12, 2008 hearing, Citizens agreed that Orr performed the "lion's share" of reviewing the administrative record for all of the plaintiffs.

h. Other Reductions

The court declines to make any additional reductions to plaintiffs' attorneys' fees, and overrules any remaining objections lodged by USDA.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, the court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART plaintiffs' motion for attorney's fees and costs. Taking into account the above reductions, the court concludes that Defenders are entitled to $318,791.46 in fees and costs, which represents a $202,693.25 reduction from the fees and costs Defenders requested, and Citizens are entitled to $176,191.68 in fees and costs, which represents a $16,375.00 reduction from the fees and costs Citizens requested.
