It's great that there is a resource - but I think we do need some hard and fast guidelines on more things. There are too many variations throughout the local groups. This makes it even harder for members to know what they can and can not post to the various groups they belong to (and we all know that lots of members belong to multiple groups). I don't think we are asking for the world, just more clarification.

We all know "free, legal, and appropriate for all ages" - but even that is open to interpretation. What is "appropriate for all ages"? Movies for example. Can someone offer a DVD they purchased that is rated "R" that they no longer watch? That is not "appropriate for all ages". What about a movie rated "PG"? Again, that is not "appropriate for all ages". How about a romance novel that has some really racy parts in it? That is not "appropriate for all ages". Are old issues of Play__Boy mag allowed? Some consider that art, some consider it smut. What about a magazine such as "Art in America"? It sometimes contains nudes, but those are thought of as art by many, including the museums where the original artwork hangs.

What we are asking for are more guidelines so that we all, as local moderators, can do our job properly. In our members eyes we are representatives of Freecycle.org, so give us more specifics on how to represent the organization!

Should we allow a member who has a WANTED to tell us how their husband is off in Iraq and the money he makes isn't enough to provide for his family here at home so that's why they need a fish tank? What about a member who wants the fish tank and tells us it's because they just went through a divorce and the wife got everything and now I don't have enough money to buy a new fish tank that I want to put in my downstairs bathroom and move some of my existing tropical fish into? How about a fish tank wanted because we just filled bankruptcy because we were really reckless with our money for a long time and now we don't have any credit cards left but we are learning how to be more careful and we just really want a fish tank to start as a hobby? How about someone who just simply states Wanted - fish tank for tropical fish and they don't tell you why they want/need it at all.

There are just too many variables to have a consistent feel across the groups around the globe. My understanding is that the purpose is to keep things out of landfills - not to judge who and who is not worthy of getting someone else's used stuff.

 newsletter -- clarification

The Mod Manual is a wonderful resource - Karen worked hard to compile it and it's an awesome piece of work. She also worked very hard to make sure that all "philosophies" were presented - those people who want to reject sob stories, for example, were provided sample letters to use. Those who want to allow pets were provided some resources to help keep pets safe, etc. None of it is intended to mean that this is the policy.

The only "hard and fast" rules that a moderator must follow are those in bold in the moderator "FAQ" section.

See: http://www.freecycle.org/manual/index_faq.htm (note that even the bolded rules note when there are variations among groups - for example, not every group has the "same wanted only every 30 days" rule.

Everything else is up to the local moderator. I think that you are not the only one confused about the fact that the mod manual is meant to be a resource - compiled from the work of other moderators and what they use for their groups. It's indispensable - but it's not policy other than that page, in bold. So the bottom line in your group is that "you" draw the line. You will need to decide where it is in your mind, maybe poll your members, and go from there. I hope that helps?
