Hi all, we are having an issue with a member id like some suggestions with.

We have a LARGE group with over 1000 members. We are a prominently military town, with alot of YOUNG members and not much money.

Here is the issue...we had a member who has been a member a short time, approx 2 months. We moderate all new members, and she was taken off of moderation. She immediately posted a message to the group last week that was not appropriate, so it was deleted from the database. When we deleted it, we told her the reason, and how to correct it. She got quite nasty, but we ignored it. She again posted the SAME inappropriate post, because she wasnt understanding that even though we had deleted it from the archives, that the members STILL received it. After trying to explain this to her, and getting nowhere we placed her back on moderation and asked her to refresh herself with the "rules and guidelines". Again, the same message comes in, this time with a side note about the mods deleting her messages. IT was rejected. We got some pretty hateful emails and she was removed...per the 2 strikes rule.

She immediately rejoined under the same name and we sent her an email to please reorientate herself with the guidelines. A few days later here comes a post that is inappropriate. IT was rejected and she was again notified why. NOTE: this is a word for word post that has been rejected previously. We get a short note back, thats says "sorry, i wont do it again" WOO-Hoo success!!!! <VBG> but now are getting a barrage (and i do mean barrage of nasty emails...she is threatening to shut the group down...yadda yadda...all because SHE cant follow some simple rules from the main Freecycle Guidelines...(location, no same wants more than 1x a month, home party posts)

Other than removing her AGAIN, how can we deal with someone like her. It is a high possibility she will just join with another name, if she hasnt already. She is very young, so i attribute some of it to her age, but there is no reason to bash us when it is she who cant follow some simple guidelines? And the emails are quite rude and vulgar.

Any help is appreciated.
Jannet

Hi Janet,

If it were me, I would report her to her ISP for abuse and Terms of Service violations and then I would ban her from the group.

Good Luck

I agree, report her and ban her, as for her rejoining with a new name no big deal as long as she is moderated you will know she is the same trouble maker.

Frankly, I'm surprised that she asked to rejoin under the same name. I would not have permitted her to rejoin. That said, I would now remove and ban her and then report her to Yahoo and her ISP. Be sure to include headers. No one has to take this baloney from a member.

I almost said we used to have a lot of that and don't lately, but I'm just superstitious enough to be afraid to say that.

I've had great success allowing members to join and removing their posting privileges. Set their membership to "member cannot post messages" and let them be a part of the group, but not really.

You can keep any eye on them and they will have to continue to create new aliases to join. It eventually becomes tedious for them and does work to getting the point across.

I just did that for the first time recently! I'm so glad not to be the only one.

This is a setting I've never understood. Cannot Post.

This means the person can fulfill wants and take offers right? But can never offer anything themselves? I don't see the sense in that.

It's mostly used for members who post repeated wanted posts and this particular case, it's effective. Sure they can participate in receiving items, but what's the difference between that person and someone who joins and lurks silently in the background? No diff really.

I have used it once or twice with a spammer, so that rather than banning them and having them join under another name, I let them continue as members. Of course, I wouldn't do this if they harvesting emails addys.
