Grace Digital unveils iPod tube amplifier

Feb. 4, 2008 | Category: iPod Accessories | email this | digg this

Grace Digital has announced its new Lars & Ivan line of high-end audio products, including a new tube amplifier for the iPod. The Hybrid PA-40Ti is a "high performance integrated iPod tube amplifier," which features a built-in iPod Dock, a four channel input selector, volume control, stereo headphone output, subwoofer output, a remote control, and "high quality" speaker wire connectors. The unit also features a USB port for iPod syncing, as well as video output and the ability to charge the iPod. Output power is rated at 40W RMS. "Most products in this category are either extremely expensive, lack design appeal, or provide poor audio performance," said Greg Fadul, Grace Digital's Chief Marketing Officer. "At $449.99 MSRP, the Hybrid Amplifier model 40PaTi offers high end audio performance, unique design and build quality at an affordable price." To complement the Hybrid amplifier, the company launched two new speaker sets. The Bobo speakers are bookshelf-sized speakers featuring an acrylic front frame and aluminum stand. They will sell for $300/pair, while the Cube S speakers will sell for $500 a pair. The new Lars & Ivan offerings will be available in mid-March.

Mix: Wal-Mart, Google, Semi, iPhoneSender

Feb. 4, 2008 | Category: Mix | ✉ email this | 👍 digg this

Wal-Mart's head of digital media, Kevin Swint, has left the retail giant, and will join Apple this week as head of the company's international movies and TV efforts. Wal-Mart recently closed its online movie download service, while Apple in January announced intentions to expand its iTunes Movie Rentals service internationally in 2008.

Despite the company's intentions to build its own cell phone software platform, Google co-president Sergey Brin spoke of his personal experiences using the iPhone during a recent earnings-related conference call. "I was at a conference in Switzerland," Brin said. "I was able to find a really small hotel, then switch over to the satellite view on my phone to figure out I needed to take a funicular to get up there. It was a really amazing experience."

iPhone user Mike Beauchamp has posted pictures of his phone, after it was run-over by a semi truck, to photo-sharing site Flickr. In the comments, Beauchamp tells the story of how the phone came to end up on the highway, and his delight in discovering that it was still functional. "As I picked it up and cradled it gently in my hands, I saw the screen displaying my caller ID—the screen still worked! I slid my finger gently over the answer slide and paused as I held the tattered and torn device to my ear—my heart must have skipped a beat when I heard my mom's voice at the other end of the phone—the phone still worked," Beauchamp wrote.

Design is Fuel has announced iPhoneSender, a new web browser add-on that allows users of Safari and Firefox to send addresses from their desktop computer to the iPhone via email. The addresses appear as Google Maps links, allowing the user to immediately access the address from the iPhone's or iPod touch's Maps application. "While we love the iPhone and its Google Maps application, we still found ourselves printing directions from Google when in a hurry. Why? Because there wasn't a fast way to get that address and map to our iPhones," says David DeMember of Design is Fuel. "So we developed iPhoneSender, a model of simplicity." iPhoneSender is available as a free download from iphonesender.com, and works on both

iPhone browser market share on the rise

Feb. 4, 2008 | Category: iPhone | ✉ email this | 👍 digg this

According to the latest browser market share data from Net Applications, the iPhone gained market share in both December '07 and January '08. The iPhone had a .12% share of the market in December, compared to a .09% share in November. Its share of the market rose to .17% during the final two days of December, and data shows it had a .13% share of the browser market in January. The iPod touch has also seen its share of the market rise, from .01% in November to .02% in December, and claiming .04% of the market in January. Together, the iPhone and iPod touch accounted for a .17% share of the browser market in January. In addition, Net Applications also investigated the proliferation of the iPhone outside countries where it has seen an official release, and found it to have a presence "in almost every country on Earth." Net Applications' data comes from the browsers of "site visitors to its on-demand network of live stats customers," and is compiled from "approximately 160 million visitors per month."

iPod production being cut?

Feb. 4, 2008 | Category: iPod | ✉ email this | 👍 digg this

Based on recent checks in Asia, Banc of America has said it believes iPod production is being cut, while iPhone production orders remain volatile. According to the firm, iPod March quarter production numbers appear to have been noticeably reduced, down between 10-20 percent from early January, and down 30 percent or more from early December. The group believes these new figures suggest that Apple may see a 5-10 percent decline in iPod unit sales year-over-year, compared to the company's forecast for five percent growth year over year, for the March quarter. Banc of America also said that its recent checks indicate that iPhone production has bounced back, following heavy production cuts in December and early January.

FDA: iPods unlikely to interfere with pacemakers

Feb. 1, 2008 | Category: iPod | ✉ email this | 👍 digg this

Contrary to a study presented last May, a new U.S. Food and Drug Administration study shows that iPods, and other portable media players, are unlikely to cause cardiac implantable pacemakers to malfunction. FDA researcher Howard Bassen and colleagues tested a variety of iPods, and found they did not produce enough of an electromagnetic field to interfere with installed pacemakers. The researchers used a saline-filled bag to simulate the human body, a coil sensor to pick up electromagnetic emissions, and tested four different iPod models: both a fourth- and fifth-generation iPod, an iPod nano, and an iPod shuffle. "We measured magnetic field emissions with a 3-coil sensor placed within 1 cm (half an inch) of the surface of the player. Highly localized fields were observed (only existing in a one square cm area)," the researchers wrote in a report published in the journal BioMedical Engineering OnLine. "Based on the observations of our in-vitro study we conclude that no interference effects can occur in pacemakers exposed to the iPods we tested."

'Rough Cut' of iPhone development book now available

Jan. 31, 2008 | Category: iPhone | ✉ email this | 👍 digg this

A pre-release, "Rough Cuts" version of iPhone Open Application Development by Johnathan A. Zdziarski is now available from O'Reilly Media. Zdziarski is the developer of the first fully-functional application using the open iPhone toolkit, and most recently was responsible for explaining the situation regarding release of the iPhone 1.1.3 jailbreak update. According to O'Reilly's web site, the book "explains in clear language how to create applications using Objective-C and the iPhone API, which in some ways resembles Apple's desktop API and in some ways strikes new ground. After covering installation of the toolkits and some background about the operating system and Objective-C, the book offers detailed recipes and working examples for everyone's favorite iPhone features. Graphics and audio programming, the CoreImage and CoreSurfaces interfaces for games programming, interfacing with iTunes, and the use of sensors are all covered.” Users who purchase the online Rough Cuts version can send suggestions, bug fixes, and comments directly to the author and editors, helping to shape the final release. The Rough Cuts version of the book is available from O’Reilly for $20 for an online-only copy. A pre-order of the print book runs $26, or users can purchase a bundle that offers both early online access and a final print copy for $44.

Evidence of Italian carrier found in iPhone 1.1.3 firmware

Jan. 31, 2008 | Category: iPhone | ✉ email this | 👍 digg this

A carrier bundle found inside the iPhone’s 1.1.3 software package suggests that TIM (Telecom Italia Mobile) will be the device’s exclusive carrier in Italy. Macity reports (translated link) that bundles for AT&T in the U.S., Orange in France, O2 in the UK, and T-Mobile in Germany are all present in the software package, alongside a file named “TIM_Italy.bundle,” the only bundle associated with a yet-unannounced network partner. Previously, a file named “TIM_Italy.plist” appeared in iPhone firmware version 1.1.2, offering further evidence that Apple intends for the telecom to be the handset’s carrier in Italy. According to the report, sources which Macity considers reliable had previously said that TIM has already completed negotiations with Apple to carry the iPhone, and that company is working towards a pre-summer launch of the device.

According to data from Nielsen Online, iTunes has passed RealPlayer in unique users to become the second most popular streaming media player on the market, trailing only Microsoft’s Windows Media Player. The data shows that iTunes was the only player with a positive growth rate over the last year, growing nearly 27% from Dec. 2006 to Dec. 2007 to an estimated 35.7 million unique users. Windows Media Player grew only slightly over the same time period, to nearly 76 million estimated unique users. Usage of the standalone Quicktime Player fell slightly over the period, while RealPlayer usage fell 17.5%.

iZAP Lithium Battery Line for the iPod

At the CES show today, iZAP introduced its new line of iZAP Lithium batteries for use with the Apple iPod.

These lithium battery packs are designed to specifically work with the iPod, and extend the playback time of these devices.

iZAP's Portable Energy charges and power packs are designed to work with the iPod, including the iPod mini, Shuffle, Nano, and Video. When used with the iPod shuffle, the iZAP battery can extend the playback time 60 hours. That means you can go for days without having to recharge.

The iZAP line of lithium batteries for the iPod can be recharged up to 1000, and has up to four times the power of conventional batteries. ZAP is best known for their line of electric cars, and surprised CES-goers this year with their venture into mobile devices. The iZAP lithium batteries for the iPod will be available for purchase soon at www.zapworld.com.

Drag, drop, and sync. Your iPhone. Customized.

iToner enables you to quickly transfer custom ringtones for your iPhone - without modifying, hacking or having to reset your iPhone. Simply drag and drop your MP3 or AAC audio files on iToner's window, click the Sync button, and you're done.

Your iPhone allows you to assign different ringtones for your different contacts. With iToner, now you can have a Barry White ringtone for when your girlfriend calls, Frank Zappa for when your college buddies ring you up, or the theme from Jaws for when your boss is calling.
