IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

NEVILLE PORRAS,

No. C 08-5252 CW (PR)

Petitioner,

ORDER GRANTING PETITION
FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

v.

BEN CURRY, Warden,

Respondent.

Petitioner Neville Porras, a state prisoner, has filed a pro se petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254, challenging as a violation of his constitutional rights the seventh denial of parole by the California Board of Parole Hearings (Board) on July 31, 2007. Petitioner previously filed a writ of habeas corpus challenging the Board's denial of parole at his July 12, 2005 parole suitability hearing; this Court denied him relief on August 13, 2008. See Porras v. Davis, Case No. C 06-6285 CW (PR).

On June 22, 2009, the Court issued an Order to Show Cause why the present writ should not be granted. On November 1, 2009, Respondent filed a motion to dismiss the petition for mootness, which the Court denied on December 29, 2009. On March 1, 2010, Respondent filed an answer. On March 22, 2010, Petitioner filed a traverse.

After the matter was submitted, on April 22, 2010, the Ninth Circuit issued its decision in Hayward v. Marshall, 603 F.3d 546 (9th Cir. 2010) (en banc), which addressed federal habeas review of Board decisions denying parole to California state prisoners. On May 21, 2010, the Court ordered the parties

1 to file supplemental briefing explaining how the Hayward en banc 2 decision applies to the facts presented in the present case.
3 Respondent filed supplemental briefing on June 17, 2010;
4 Petitioner filed his response on June 23, 2010.

5 Having considered all of the papers filed by the parties, 6 the Court GRANTS the petition and remands the matter to the 7 Board to reevaluate Petitioner's parole suitability in 8 accordance with this Order.

9 Petitioner has filed a new action with the Court. See 10 Porras v. Noll, Case No. C 09-4936 CW (PR). At Petitioner's
11 September 4, 2008 parole suitability hearing, the Board granted 12 him parole. However, the governor reversed the Board's decision 13 on January 29, 2009. Therefore, Petitioner challenges the 14 governor's reversal in his new action.

15 BACKGROUND

16 I. The Commitment Offense

17 Petitioner committed the offense of conviction on August 18 12, 1988, when he was nineteen years old. The following facts 19 are derived from the California Court of Appeal's decision 20 affirming Petitioner's second-degree murder conviction on direct 21 appeal:

22 Late in the evening of August 11 and early in the 23 morning of August 12, 1988, the victim, Shawn 24 Bartholomew, and his friend, Cosmo Allen Byrd, got 25 drunk with some friends under Waterloo Bridge. The 26 victim and Byrd went to Waterloo Liquors, where Byrd left the victim to return home. Byrd heard someone yell, "'Come here,'" as he walked away from the liquor store. He turned around and saw someone who resembled defendant running. Byrd continued home.

27 During the same night, defendant was in his front 28 yard drinking with his brother, Willie Lester, and Lester's friend, Mike Garcia. William "Moose"
Phillips and Dennis "scooter" Wheeler passed in front

1 of the house and exchanged angry words with 2 defendant. Phillips and Wheeler left, but defendant 3 and his group armed themselves, defendant with a 4 butcher knife, and enlisted the aid of another 5 friend, James Azevedo. The group began searching for 6 Phillips, but without success. All but Lester 7 returned to defendant's front yard. Shortly after 8 they returned, they heard yelling from the alley.
9 The voice sounded to them like Lester's, although 10 Lester denied later that it was he.

11 After hearing the yell, defendant left alone to 12 look for his brother. Eventually, defendant saw the 13 victim and chased him down. Defendant held the 14 victim by the hair and said, "Where's my brother, 15 where's my brother[?]" Lester and Garcia arrived 16 after defendant caught the victim. Lester hit the 17 victim with a stick, and Garcia kicked the victim in 18 the head. Defendant was the only one in the group 19 with a knife, and he later admitted to law 20 enforcement he stabbed the victim.

21 The group left the victim and returned to 22 defendant's yard. Paramedics . . . found the 23 bloodied victim lying in the fetal position. The 24 victim died of a stab wound which pierced his heart, 25 liver, and right lung.

26 People v. Porras, No. C007818, slip op. at 3-4 (Cal. App. Ct.
27 July 18, 1991).

28 Petitioner's version, read into the record at the 2007 parole suitability hearing, differs from the above account:

Porras heard Willie L. (Porras' younger brother) scream out. He saw a broken knife (blade with no handle) lying on the ground as he was running to where the yells were coming from. At this point, Porras encountered the victim and the victim's friend, Cosmo Byrd, B-Y-R-D. Porras stated he was looking for his brother when Cosmo Byrd threw a punch and grazed his forehead. Porras then states the victim grabbed him in a bear hug and a struggle occurred. Porras stated that he reached for his belt and pulled out the knife blade swinging it twice, not knowing if contact was made. Porras then states he and the victim lost their footing. Both fell down with Porras dropping the knife. Both Porras and the victim got up throwing punches at each other. The victim lunged in and grabbed him around the waist when both Porras and the victim fell to the ground again. Porras states that when the victim started to get up, Mike G. ran up and kicked the victim in the face and hit him several times. Porras then stated

1 the victim started to run up the street while he ran 2 toward an alley after picking up the knife blade. He 3 then threw the blade in a vacant lot. After finding 4 his brother, Porrás returned to his home and had no idea the victim was wounded as severely as he was.
Porrás stated, "He never planned, nor had any intentions of hurting anybody."

5 (Pet. Ex. 1, July 31, 2007 Parole Consideration Hearing, at 6 11-13.)

7 II. Conviction and Sentencing

8 On October 31, 1989, a San Joaquin County jury convicted 9 Petitioner of second-degree murder. (Cal. Penal Code § 187.)
10 The trial court sentenced him to fifteen years to life in 11 prison, with a consecutive one-year term for use of a knife.
12 (Cal. Penal Code § 12022(b).) Petitioner was received by the 13 California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) 14 on December 1, 1989, and his life term began the same day, with 15 667 days of credit for time served. On direct appeal, the state 16 court of appeal affirmed his conviction. His minimum parole 17 eligibility date was set for June 5, 1999. (Pet. at 6.)

18 III. July 31, 2007 Parole Suitability Hearing

19 Petitioner had been incarcerated for almost twenty years 20 at the time of the 2007 parole suitability hearing. The Board 21 found Petitioner was not yet suitable for parole and that he 22 would pose an unreasonable risk of danger to society or threat 23 to public safety if released from prison, citing an 24 "inexplicable" motive for the crime. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 35.) The 25 Board continued, "You didn't know the victim. Whether you were 26 sufficiently impacted by the use of alcohol is not known to us 27 but in any event, it certainly is inexplicable for the magnitude 28 to the loss." (Id. at 35-36.)

1           As additional evidence of Petitioner's current level of 2 danger to society, the Board cited his juvenile record, which 3 included burglary, trespass and driving under the influence.
4 (Id. at 12-13.) The Board also noted that he had four vehicle 5 code violations as an adult, at least two of which were for 6 driving under the influence. (Id. at 14, 36.) He had no
7 further adult criminal record. (Id. at 14.)

8           The Board observed that Petitioner had no reports of 9 violence while incarcerated. (Id. at 25.) He had five 10 disciplinary reports, or CDC-115s. (Id.) The most recent was 11 in 2004 for having a television in his cell. (Id.) The 12 remaining four CDC-115s were grooming standards violations.
13 (Id.) Recognizing that Petitioner is a Native American and 14 keeps his hair long for religious reasons, the Board disregarded 15 the four reports "because they were all involved with grooming, 16 they had nothing of about anything that we would consider 17 inappropriate conduct violence or anything like that." (Id. at 18 14, 25, 37-38.) He also has received eight disciplinary memos, 19 or CDC-128s, apparently for grooming violations. (Id. at 26.)

20           The Board also noted that Petitioner "programmed in a 21 limited manner while incarcerated," calling his programming 22 "thin." (Id. at 36.) It recommended that Petitioner confront 23 his problems with alcoholism, requesting that he demonstrate his 24 ability to recognize that he was "having problems with alcohol 25 at the time of the commitment offense" and what he "would do to 26 use as a relapse prevention program." (Id. at 37.) Although 27 the Board noted that Petitioner had participated in Alcoholics 28 Anonymous (AA) and Narcotics Anonymous (NA) programming for many

1 years, it had concerns because he stopped attending the meetings 2 after he was placed on C-status for his grooming violations.
3 (Id. at 24, 27.) C-status is the CDCR's classification for 4 inmates whose conduct interferes with prison programming. Cal.
5 Code Regs. tit. 15, §§ 3044(b)(A), 3044(f). Such conduct 6 includes the failure to comply with work assignments, 7 educational program assignments, grooming standards or other 8 program requirements. Id. While the Board recognized that it 9 could not compel him to attend AA as a condition for parole, it 10 did expect him to do self-help relating to his problems with 11 alcoholism. (Id.)

12 The Board also considered Petitioner's failure to develop 13 a marketable skill. (Id. at 36-37.) After he reported that he 14 had not received a work assignment since 1998, when he was 15 placed on C-status, the Board noted, "You're one of the few 16 healthy people that's come before me that's remained unassigned 17 for such a substantial period of time." (Id. at 22, 36.) It 18 pointed to Petitioner's limited vocational training while 19 incarcerated, noting that he received his GED in 1997 and a 20 vocational X-ray certificate in 1998 but had not done further 21 educational or vocational activities. (Id. at 22-23, 36-37.)

22 Finally, the Board noted with approval that Petitioner had 23 secured living arrangements and an employment offer, and that 24 the Board had received no opposition to his parole. (Id. at 25 38.) It concluded that the positive aspects of his behavior did 26 not outweigh the factors of unsuitability. (Id.)

27 IV. State Petitions for Writ of Habeas Corpus

28 Petitioner unsuccessfully challenged the Board's decision

1 in the San Joaquin County Superior Court. (Pet. Ex. 10, State 2 Superior Court Decision, at 1.) In denying the petition, the 3 state superior court found that the Board's decision was 4 "supported by 'some evidence'" that Petitioner "poses an 5 unreasonable risk to society if released." (Id.) Specifically, 6 the court held that the Board identified four factors comprising 7 "some evidence": the commitment offense, Petitioner's criminal 8 history, his "misconduct while incarcerated" and his failure to 9 "develop a marketable skill that can be put to use upon his 10 release." (Id.)

11 On June 27, 2008, Petitioner filed a petition for a writ 12 of habeas corpus in the state appellate court. (Answer Ex. A, 13 Appellate Court Pet., at 1.) On August 28, 2008, the court 14 summarily denied the petition. (Pet. Ex. 11, Appellate Court 15 Decision, at 1.)

16 On September 8, 2008, Petitioner filed a petition for a 17 writ of habeas corpus in the California Supreme Court. (Answer 18 Ex. B, Supreme Court Pet., at 1.) On October 22, 2008, the 19 state supreme court summarily denied the petition. (Pet. Ex.
20 12, Supreme Court Decision, at 1.)

21 LEGAL STANDARD

22 The Ninth Circuit's recent en banc decision in Hayward 23 governs the scope of federal habeas review of Board decisions 24 denying parole to California state prisoners. Hayward, 603 F.3d 25 at 546. The court first explained the law in California as it 26 relates to parole suitability determinations:

27 The California parole statute provides that the Board 28 of Prison Terms "shall set a release date unless it determines that the gravity of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of 1 current or past convicted offense or offenses, is 2 such that consideration of the public safety requires 3 a more lengthy period of incarceration for this 4 individual." The crucial determinant of whether the 5 prisoner gets parole in California is "consideration 6 of the public safety."

7 In California, when a prisoner receives an 8 indeterminate sentence of fifteen years to life, the 9 "indeterminate sentence is in legal effect a sentence 10 for the maximum term, subject only to the 11 ameliorative power of the [parole authority] to set a 12 lesser term." Under the California parole scheme, 13 the prisoner has a right to a parole hearing and 14 various procedural guarantees and rights before, at, 15 and after the hearing; a right to subsequent hearings 16 at set intervals if the Board of Prison Terms turns 17 him down for parole; and a right to a written 18 explanation if the Governor exercises his authority 19 to overturn the Board of Prison Terms' recommendation 20 for parole. Under California law, denial of parole 21 must be supported by "some evidence," but review of 22 the Governor's decision is "extremely deferential."

23 Hayward, 603 F.3d at 561-62 (brackets in original) (footnotes 24 and citations omitted). The court further explained,

25 Subsequent to Hayward's denial of parole, and 26 subsequent to our oral argument in this case, the 27 California Supreme Court established in two 28 decisions, In re Lawrence [44 Cal. 4th 1181 (2008)] and In re Shaputis, [44 Cal. 4th 1241 (2008)] that as a matter of state law, "some evidence" of future dangerousness is indeed a state sine qua non for denial of parole in California. . . . As a matter of California law, "the paramount consideration for both the Board and the Governor under the governing statutes is whether the inmate currently poses a threat to public safety." There must be "some evidence" of such a threat, and an aggravated offense
"does not, in every case, provide evidence that the inmate is a current threat to public safety." The prisoner's aggravated offense does not establish current dangerousness "unless the record also establishes that something in the prisoner's pre- or post-incarceration history, or his or her current demeanor and mental state" supports the inference of dangerousness. Thus, in California, the offense of conviction may be considered, but the consideration must address the determining factor, "a current threat to public safety."

Hayward, 603 F.3d at 562 (footnotes and citations omitted).

1           After providing this background on California law as it 2 applies to parole suitability determinations, the Ninth Circuit 3 then explained the role of a federal district court charged with 4 reviewing the decision of either the Board or the governor 5 denying a prisoner parole. According to the Ninth Circuit, the 6 Court must decide whether a decision "rejecting parole was an 7 'unreasonable application' of the California 'some evidence' 8 requirement, or was 'based on an unreasonable determination of 9 the facts in light of the evidence.'"<sup>1</sup> Hayward, 603 F.3d at 10 562-63 (citations omitted); see also Cooke v. Solis, 606 F.3d 11 1206, 1208 n.2, 1213 (9th Cir. 2010) (applying Hayward and 12 explicitly rejecting the state's argument that "the constraints 13 imposed by [the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act 14 (AEDPA)] preclude federal habeas relief" on petitioner's claim; 15 noting that, in Hayward, the court "held that due process 16 challenges to California courts' application of the 'some 17 evidence' requirement are cognizable on federal habeas review 18 under AEDPA").

19   DISCUSSION

20 I.       California Law Regarding Parole Suitability Determinations

21           When assessing whether California's parole board's 22 suitability determination was supported by "some evidence," this 23

24 _____
25           <sup>1</sup> Applying this standard to the facts presented in Hayward, 26 the court concluded that the state court's decision finding there 27 was "'some evidence' of Hayward's future dangerousness because of 28 'the nature of the commitment offense' and 'the somewhat unfavorable psychological and counsel reports,'" one of which noted that Hayward "would pose a 'low' to 'moderate' risk of danger if released, as opposed to 'no' or merely 'low' risk," was not unreasonable and therefore did not warrant federal habeas relief.
Hayward, 603 F.3d at 563.

1 Court's analysis is framed by the "regulatory, statutory and 2 constitutional provisions that govern parole decisions in 3 California." Cooke, 606 F.3d at 1213 (citing In re Rosenkrantz, 4 29 Cal. 4th 616 (2002)); see Hayward, 603 F.3d at 561-62. Under 5 California law, prisoners serving indeterminate life sentences, 6 like Petitioner, become eligible for parole after serving 7 minimum terms of confinement required by statute. In re 8 Dannenberg, 34 Cal. 4th 1061, 1069-70 (2005). At that point, 9 California's parole scheme provides that the Board "shall set a 10 release date unless it determines that the gravity of the 11 current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity 12 of current or past convicted offense or offenses, is such that 13 consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy 14 period of incarceration." Cal. Penal Code § 3041(b).
15 Regardless of the length of time served, "a life prisoner shall 16 be found unsuitable for and denied parole if in the judgment of 17 the panel the prisoner will pose an unreasonable risk of danger 18 to society if released from prison." Cal. Code Regs. tit. 15, 19 § 2402(a).

20 In making this determination, the Board must consider 21 various factors, including the prisoner's social history; past 22 and present mental state; past criminal history; the base and 23 other commitment offenses, including behavior before, during and 24 after the crime; past and present attitude toward the crime; and 25 any other information that bears on the prisoner's suitability 26 for release. See id. § 2402(b)-(d).

27 In considering the commitment offense, the Board must 28 determine whether "the prisoner committed the offense in an

1 especially heinous, atrocious or cruel manner." Id.

2 § 2402(c)(1). The factors to be considered in making that 3 determination include:

4 (A) Multiple victims were attacked, injured or killed 5 in the same or separate incidents; (B) The offense 6 was carried out in a dispassionate and calculated 7 manner, such as an execution-style murder; (C) The 8 victim was abused, defiled or mutilated during or 9 after the offense; (D) The offense was carried out in 10 a manner which demonstrates an exceptionally callous 11 disregard for human suffering; (E) The motive for the 12 crime is inexplicable or very trivial in relation to 13 the offense.

14 Id. Other circumstances tending to show unsuitability for 15 parole are a previous record of violence, an unstable social 16 history, previous sadistic sexual offenses, a history of severe 17 mental health problems related to the offense and serious 18 misconduct in prison or jail. Id.

19 Circumstances tending to support a finding of suitability 20 for parole include a lack of a juvenile record, a stable social 21 history, signs of remorse, that the crime was committed as a 22 result of significant stress in the prisoner's life, a lack of 23 criminal history, a reduced possibility of recidivism due to the 24 prisoner's present age, that the prisoner has made realistic 25 plans for release or has developed marketable skills that can be 26 put to use upon release and that the prisoner's institutional 27 activities indicate an enhanced ability to function within the 28 law upon release. Id. § 2402(d). The California Supreme Court stated that due process is denied when "an inquiry focuse[s] only upon the existence of unsuitability factors." Lawrence, 44 Cal. 4th at 1208. In Lawrence, the court reiterated "our conclusion that current dangerousness (rather than the mere

1 presence of a statutory unsuitability factor) is the focus of 2 the parole [suitability] decision." Id. at 1210.

3 As the Hayward court pointed out, the California Supreme 4 Court has held that "the core statutory determination entrusted 5 to the Board and the Governor [in determining a prisoner's 6 parole suitability] is whether the inmate poses a current threat 7 to public safety . . . ." Id. at 1191. Additionally, "the core 8 determination of 'public safety' under the statute and 9 corresponding regulations involves an assessment of an inmate's 10 current dangerousness." Id. at 1205. The court further 11 explained that:

12 a parole release decision authorizes the Board (and 13 the Governor) to identify and weigh only the factors 14 relevant to predicting "whether the inmate will be 15 able to live in society without committing additional 16 antisocial acts." . . . These factors are designed to 17 guide an assessment of the inmate's threat to 18 society, if released, and hence could not logically 19 relate to anything but the threat currently posed by 20 the inmate.

21 Id. at 1205-06 (citations omitted). The relevant inquiry, 22 therefore, is:

23 whether the circumstances of the commitment offense, 24 when considered in light of other facts in the 25 record, are such that they continue to be predictive 26 of current dangerousness many years after commission 27 of the offense. This inquiry is, by necessity and by 28 statutory mandate, an individualized one, and cannot be undertaken simply by examining the circumstances of the crime in isolation, without consideration of the passage of time or the attendant changes in the inmate's psychological or mental attitude.

Shaputis, 44 Cal. 4th at 1254-55.

The "some evidence" of current dangerousness "must have some indicia of reliability." In re Scott, 119 Cal. App. 4th 871, 899 (2004) (Scott I). Indeed, "the 'some evidence' test

1 may be understood as meaning that suitability determinations 2 must have some rational basis in fact." In re Scott, 133 Cal.
3 App. 4th 573, 590, n. 6 (2005) (Scott II).

4 Subsequent to Hayward, the Ninth Circuit issued decisions
5 in Cooke and Pirtle v. California Board of Prison Terms, 2010 WL 6 2732888 (9th Cir. July 12, 2010), both of which focused on the 7 notion that the "some evidence" of current dangerousness must be 8 reliable. In Cooke, the court ultimately reversed the district 9 court's denial of Cooke's challenge to the Board's 2002 decision 10 denying him parole, finding that the Board's stated reasons for 11 denying parole did not support the conclusion that Cooke posed a 12 current threat to public safety. Cooke, 606 F.3d at 1216.

13 Specifically, the court stated:

14 [E]ach of the Board's findings . . . lacked any 15 evidentiary basis. Nothing in the record supports 16 the state court's finding that there was "some 17 evidence" in addition to the circumstances of the 18 commitment offense to support the Board's denial of 19 Petitioner's parole. The Parole Board's findings 20 were individually and in toto unreasonable because 21 they were without evidentiary support. When habeas 22 courts review the "some evidence" requirement in 23 California parole cases, both the subsidiary findings 24 and the ultimate finding of some evidence constitute 25 factual findings. Here, there was no evidence that 26 reasonably supports either the necessary subsidiary 27 findings or the ultimate "some evidence" finding.
28 Accordingly, we hold that the state court decision was "'based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence.'" Hayward, 603 F.3d at 563 (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2)). Cooke is entitled to a writ of habeas corpus.

24 Id.; see also Pirtle, 2010 WL 2732888 at *8 (affirming the 25 district court's decision to grant habeas relief, concluding, 26 "In sum, there is no evidence in the record to support the 27 Board's finding that Pirtle poses a current threat to public 28 safety. The Board's stated reasons for the denial of parole

1 either lacked evidentiary support, had no rational relationship 2 to Pirtle's current dangerousness, or both.").

3 II. Analysis of Petitioner's Claims

4 Petitioner argues that: (1) he was denied due process
5 because the Board relied on factors that are categorically false 6 and possess no indicia of reliability; (2) the Board failed to 7 follow California and federal law because it did not compare his 8 conduct to other instances of the same type of crime and then 9 use its proportionality matrix to determine a parole date; 10 (3) he was denied due process because the Board failed to 11 consider all of the reliable and relevant information; (4) he 12 was denied due process by the Board's use of the commitment 13 offense to predict current dangerousness; and (5) his liberty 14 interest was violated by the arbitrary denial of parole. The 15 Court considers claims one, three, four and five together as a 16 claim that the Board violated his due process rights when it 17 failed to base its denial of parole on "some evidence" of his 18 current dangerousness. Claim two is considered separately.

19 The Board and the state courts identified four principle 20 factors providing "some evidence" that Petitioner would be a 21 danger to society: (1) the commitment offense; (2) his criminal 22 record as a juvenile; (3) his behavior while incarcerated; and 23 (4) his lack of marketable job skills. The Board also 24 determined that Petitioner's alcoholism constituted "some 25 evidence" of his current dangerousness.

26 The Board found that Petitioner's motive for the crime was 27 inexplicable because he did not know the victim and it was not 28 clear to the Board if he had been drinking. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 35-

1 36.) Petitioner admits that he did not know the victim.<sup>2</sup> (Pet.
2 at 17.) He points to evidence in the record indicating that he 3 had been drinking heavily on the night of the commitment 4 offense. (Id. at 17-19.) Further, his psychological reports 5 suggest that the motive for the crime was "prolonged exposure to 6 aggravation and stress." (Pet. Ex. 2 at 8; see Cal. Code Regs.
7 tit. 15, § 2402(d)(4).) Nevertheless, the record indicates that 8 Petitioner armed himself with a knife for what otherwise would 9 have been a street fight. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 35.) The Board's 10 consideration of the commitment offense did not violate 11 Petitioner's federal due process rights.

12 Even though the Board was justified in considering the 13 commitment offense, the California Supreme Court has expressly 14 rejected the argument "that the aggravated circumstances of a 15 commitment offense inherently establish current dangerousness."
16 Lawrence, 44 Cal. 4th at 1213. Indeed, "the immutable 17 circumstance that the commitment offense involved aggravated 18 conduct does not provide 'some evidence' inevitably supporting 19 the ultimate decision that the inmate remains a threat to public 20 safety." Id. at 1191 (emphasis in original). Instead, there 21 must be additional evidence that shows the commitment offense to 22 "be predictive of current dangerousness many years after 23 commission of the offense." Shaputis, 44 Cal. 4th at 1255.

24 The Board determined that Petitioner's juvenile record 25 provided additional evidence of his current dangerousness.

26 _____
27 <sup>2</sup> Other parts of the record, however, indicate that the victim 28 and Petitioner were neighbors and had "previously argued with [each other] a number of times." (Pet. Ex. 2 at 7.)

1 (Pet. Ex. 1 at 12-13.) The California Code of Regulations 2 addresses whether the "prisoner on previous occasions inflicted 3 or attempted to inflict serious injury on a victim, particularly 4 if the prisoner demonstrated serious assaultive behavior at an 5 early age," as a factor tending to show unsuitability for 6 parole. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 2402(c)(2). Here, none of 7 Petitioner's juvenile offenses involved violence. (Pet. Ex. 1 8 at 12-13.) Therefore, although Petitioner does have a juvenile 9 record, he "does not have a record of assaulting others as a 10 juvenile or committing crimes with a potential of personal harm 11 to victims," other than the commitment offense itself. Cal.
12 Code Regs. tit. 15, § 2402(d)(2). Petitioner's non-violent 13 juvenile record is not "some evidence" of his current 14 dangerousness. To hold otherwise "would actually violate the 15 parole regulations, which consider a lack of 'any significant 16 history of violent crime' to be an indicator of suitability for 17 parole." Pirtle, 2010 WL 2732888 at *6 (quoting Cal. Code Regs.
18 tit. 15, § 2402(d)(6)) (emphasis in original). Further, the 19 Board did not ask Petitioner any questions about the 20 circumstances surrounding the incidents on his juvenile record 21 and failed to link his record to his current level of 22 dangerousness. (See id. at 12-13, 36.) The state superior 23 court likewise failed to explain how his juvenile record 24 provided "some evidence" of his current dangerousness, simply 25 citing his "prior criminality" as a factor that weighed against 26 his parole suitability. (Pet. Ex. 10 at 1.) Additionally, 27 Petitioner is now forty-one years old, and his juvenile record 28 is an immutable fact that, without more, does not constitute

1 "some evidence" of his current dangerousness. See Lawrence, 44 2 Cal. 4th at 1191.

3 Next, the Board and the state courts considered 4 Petitioner's behavior while incarcerated. The Board did not 5 appear to have relied on his behavior as "some evidence," noting 6 that "[t]he area of disciplines [sic] is a bright spot" for 7 Petitioner. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 24.) Although he has had five CDC-8 115 disciplinary reports, the Board noted that "none of them are 9 violent, none of them are about weapons." (Id. at 25.)
10 Further, Petitioner's psychological evaluation from 2005 pointed 11 out that neither possessing an unauthorized television set nor 12 failure to cut his hair has any "bearing on this inmate's 13 overall risk factors in a community setting." (Pet. Ex. 2 at 14 1.) Nonetheless, the state superior court cited his "misconduct 15 while incarcerated" as "some evidence" of his current 16 dangerousness. (Pet. Ex. 10 at 1.)

17 The Court agrees with the Board and the psychologist that 18 Petitioner's conduct while incarcerated is a factor in favor of 19 his parole, not against it. His disciplinary record stems 20 almost entirely from his failure to cut his hair for religious 21 reasons. In light of the Supreme Court's decision in Cutter v.
22 Wilkinson, 544 U.S. 709, 720 (2005) (holding that the Religious 23 Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act "alleviates 24 exceptional government-created burdens on private religious 25 exercise"), the Ninth Circuit has held that the CDCR's refusal 26 to permit a religious exception for Native Americans to its hair 27 grooming policy violates their right to religious freedom.
28 Warsoldier v. Woodford, 418 F.3d 989, 991 (9th Cir. 2005). The

1 Board recognized this, noting that "the Supreme Court said that 2 those sort of grooming standards didn't matter anymore" when it 3 decided that the violations "are of no concern to the Panel."
4 (Pet. Ex. 1 at 25, 37.) For the reasons stated above, the Court 5 finds unreasonable the state superior court's determination that 6 Petitioner's conduct while incarcerated constituted "some 7 evidence" of current dangerousness.

8 Although the Board correctly discounted Petitioner's CDC-9 115 disciplinary reports, it did cite his lack of programming as 10 "some evidence" of his current dangerousness. It concluded that 11 "from all appearances before me today, you appear to be a very 12 -- a very healthy and vibrant sort of person so we have no way 13 of knowing what's -- what's involved in this that you've failed 14 to develop a marketable skill that can be put to use upon your 15 release." (Pet. Ex. 1 at 36-37.) Petitioner was placed on C-16 status and prevented from programming from 1998 to 2006 for 17 failing to cut his hair for religious reasons. (Pet. at 21.)
18 Between 1989 and 1998, prior to being placed on C-status, 19 Petitioner had participated in numerous programing activities.
20 He completed his GED and a certificate in vocational x-ray and 21 participated in AA, a literacy life skills class, a sexually 22 transmitted disease control class and classes on Hepatitis C, 23 tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS.<sup>3</sup> (Id.) Petitioner was also on the 24 waiting list for a class on alternatives to violence. (Id.)
25 His supervisors commended him for his "excellent and above 26

27 <sup>3</sup> Petitioner took the disease control class and the classes 28 on Hepatitis C, tuberculosis, and HIV/AIDS after 1998. From October, 1998 to December, 1999, Petitioner was allowed to participate in limited self-help activities while on C-status.
(Id. at 22.)

1 excellent work" as a culinary porter. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 30.) Even 2 while he was on C-status, Petitioner was able to participate in 3 AA and NA programs between 2001 and 2003. (Id. at 32.) Then, 4 he was once again excluded from participation. (Pet. at 21-22.)
5 He was unable to complete any other educational, programming or 6 self-help activities for the remaining time he was on C-status.
7 (Id. at 21.) Following Cutter and Warsoldier, Petitioner was 8 taken off C-status on February 27, 2006 and placed on the 9 assignment list. (Id.) He immediately signed up for work 10 waiting lists. (Id. at 23.) He was particularly interested in 11 a position with support services or the vocational print shop.
12 (Pet. at 22.) However, as of the date he filed the present 13 petition, he has been unsuccessful in receiving a work 14 assignment. (See id.) He completed an anger management class 15 called "Cage Your Rage" soon after being taken off C-status.
16 (Id.) He did not participate in other programming between 17 February, 2006 and July 31, 2007, the date of the Board hearing, 18 but he remains on waiting lists for several programs. (See id.)

19 The Board had the above information available to it at the 20 2007 parole suitability hearing. Therefore, the Court finds 21 unavailing the Board's conclusion that it "had no way of 22 knowing" why Petitioner's "programming is very thin." (Pet. Ex.
23 1 at 36-37.) Petitioner did a commendable job participating in 24 programming before he was placed on C-status. After he was 25 removed from C-status, he attempted to work and program without 26 much success. (Id.) It is clear from the record that 27 Petitioner's recent programming has been limited because he was 28 placed on C-status. Furthermore, Petitioner has been able to 1 earn a GED and an x-ray certificate in prison and also has pre-2 incarceration marketable skills in auto mechanics as well as 3 carpet and tile laying. (Pet. Ex. 2 at 5.) The Court finds 4 unreasonable the Board's and the state superior court's 5 conclusions that Petitioner's failure to program constitutes 6 "some evidence" of his current dangerousness to society.

7 Petitioner's history of alcohol abuse was raised by the 8 Board; however, the state superior court did not consider it as 9 "some evidence" of his current dangerousness. (Pet. Ex. 10 at 10 1.) Respondent incorrectly claims that Petitioner has not 11 participated in any substance abuse programming. (Answer at 9.) 12 As noted above, Petitioner participated in AA prior to and 13 during part of his C-status classification. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 32.)
14 After Petitioner informed the Board that he was not currently 15 active in AA but had been in the past, he explained that he 16 thought "a lot of it's [sic] sets you up for failure. Makes you 17 kind of like rely on other things other than yourself." (Id. at 18 24.) Petitioner stated he preferred a program where he had the 19 power to control his activities and, to that end, he regularly 20 attended a Native American sweat lodge at the prison. (Id.; 21 Answer Ex. 2, Ex. 4, at 17.) He provided the Board with a 22 letter from Three Rivers Indian Lodge, a Native American alcohol 23 treatment facility that offers AA meetings as well as other 24 alcohol treatment plans. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 20.) He indicated that 25 he could utilize their services after his release. (Id.) The 26 Board told Petitioner that, although he did not have to attend 27 AA, he should meet two requirements: "demonstrat[e] that you've 28 got an ability to recognize the fact that you were having

1 problems with alcohol at the time of the commitment offense and 2 what you would do to use as a relapse prevention program."
3 (Pet. Ex. 1 at 37.) Petitioner has met both requirements.

4 First, the record indicates that Petitioner recognizes his 5 alcoholism and its contribution to his past offenses.
6 Petitioner showed a great deal of insight to the Board and the 7 psychologist about the role of alcohol in his life. (Pet. Ex 2 8 at 5-7.) Although the Board did not ask him about the 9 relationship between his alcohol abuse and the commitment 10 offense, it had psychological reports which indicated that 11 Petitioner had addressed this issue. In the 2001 psychological 12 evaluation, the psychologist reported that Petitioner 13 "acknowledges that he has abused alcohol in the past. He 14 reports that he last used alcohol in 1988, the time of his 15 incarceration." (Id. at 5.) Furthermore, Petitioner clearly 16 connected his alcohol abuse to the commitment offense, 17 "insightfully not[ing]" that "alcohol limited his vigilance to 18 avoid fighting. He strongly asserted that he intends to never 19 drink alcohol again. The inmate seemed genuinely penitent for 20 his crime and seems to understand the circumstances culminating 21 in the crime." (Id. at 7.) Petitioner recognized his alcohol 22 addiction and has gained insight into its connection to the 23 commitment offense.

24 Petitioner told the Board, "I don't want to do this again 25 or be through this again or hurt anybody else because of that so 26 I have to take it upon myself to make sure I don't do nothing 27 like this again." (Pet. Ex. 1 at 27.) When the Board 28 characterized his approach as a desire not to return to prison,

1 Petitioner emphasized, "And I don't want to hurt anybody else
2 either." (Id.)

3 Second, Petitioner has created a feasible relapse
4 prevention program. Since being taken off C-status, Petitioner 5 has chosen not to return to AA but, instead, has taken the 6 things he learned in AA and applied them to his life. (See Pet.
7 Ex. 1 at 27.) If the Board had concerns about Petitioner's 8 relapse prevention plan, it could have questioned him further;
9 instead, the Board turned to another subject. (See id.)

10 The Board also failed to take into account Petitioner's 11 use of the sweat lodge while incarcerated and his letter from 12 Three Rivers Indian Lodge, a facility that may fit Petitioner's 13 needs better than AA. (Id. at 20, 37.) The Ninth Circuit's 14 recent decision in Pirtle found that a petitioner who objected 15 to AA's "emphasis on a higher power" could not be denied parole 16 for failing to attend AA when no secular programming was 17 available. Pirtle, 2010 WL 2732888 at *6. The court concluded 18 that the petitioner's "failure to attend a program that is not 19 available has no probative value, and thus cannot support the 20 Board's decision in any way." Id. Like Pirtle, Petitioner 21 provided the Board with a program he could participate in if he 22 were released. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 20.)

23 Petitioner has not consumed any alcohol since his 24 incarceration in 1988 and has been sober for twenty-two years.
25 (Id. at 7.) There is therefore no evidence that Petitioner will 26 be unable or unwilling to manage his alcohol problem effectively 27 upon release, as he has already done for more than two decades.
28 The record does not support the Board's determination that

1 Petitioner's history of alcohol abuse constitutes "some 2 evidence" of his current dangerousness.

3 The remaining factors discussed in the California Code of 4 Regulations weigh in Petitioner's favor. See Cal. Code Regs.
5 tit. 15, § 2402(d). As discussed above, Petitioner's 6 institutional behavior, lack of violent criminal history and 7 signs of remorse all count in favor of his parole. Id., 8 § 2402(d)(1), (3), (6), (9). Additionally, Petitioner appears 9 to have a stable social history. Id., § 2402(d)(2). He 10 maintains a close relationship with his family, especially his 11 parents, and has also remained connected with friends. (Pet.
12 Ex. 1 at 17-20.)

13 Furthermore, Petitioner has "made realistic plans for 14 release." Cal. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 2402(d)(8). The Board 15 noted Petitioner's parole plans with approval. (Pet. Ex. 1 at 16 38.) He will live with his parents in Stockton or with his 17 friend, Curtis Riggins. (Id. at 19.) Mr. Riggins, who owns and 18 operates Curtis Custom Tile Marble Gallery, has given Petitioner 19 a firm offer of employment. (Id.) Petitioner's parole plans 20 weigh in favor of his parole suitability and do not provide 21 "some evidence" of current dangerousness to society.

22 Finally, no other factors weigh against Petitioner's 23 parole. Petitioner has no record of sadistic sexual offenses 24 and there are no psychological factors or mental health problems 25 that could provide "some evidence" of his current dangerousness.
26 § 2402(c)(4), (5). Indeed, his psychological reports are 27 overwhelmingly positive. In the 2005 report, Dr. E. W. Hewchuk 28 emphasizes that Petitioner "remains genuinely remorseful for his

1 part in the tragic loss of human life, and his lengthy prison 2 record is a reflection of both compliance and a motivation to 3 change." (Pet. Ex. 2 at 1.) Dr. Hewchuk agreed with 4 Petitioner's 2001 psychological report that he poses "no greater 5 risk of reoffending than the average citizen." (Id. at 1, 8.)

6 The Court therefore concludes that the Board's and the 7 state courts' determinations that Petitioner's commitment 8 offense, prior criminality, misconduct while incarcerated and 9 failure to program constituted "some evidence" of unsuitability 10 was an "unreasonable application" of the California "some 11 evidence" requirement, and was "based on an unreasonable 12 determination of the facts in light of the evidence." Hayward, 13 603 F.3d at 562-63 (citations omitted); see also Cooke, 606 F.3d 14 at 1216; Pirtle, 2010 WL 2732888 at *8. As a result, Petitioner 15 is entitled to federal habeas relief on his due process claim.

16 Petitioner also raises an alternate due process claim for 17 habeas relief relating to the Board's sentencing matrix.
18 Petitioner claims his due process rights were violated because 19 he is overdue for release pursuant to the Board's sentencing 20 matrix. Petitioner argues that his commitment offense was not 21 especially egregious compared to other second degree murders.
22 He claims that he has met the maximum sentence prescribed by the 23 sentencing matrix. (Pet. at 33.)

24 Petitioner misinterprets the matrix. He is serving an 25 indeterminate sentence under California Penal Code § 1168. When 26 a prisoner is sentenced under § 1168, the Board determines 27 whether the prisoner is suitable for parole. Cal. Penal Code 28 § 3040(b). If the prisoner is found suitable, the Board will

1 set a release date after consulting the matrix. However, the 2 matrix need not be consulted if the Board finds a prisoner to be 3 unsuitable for parole. Dannenberg, 34 Cal. 4th at 1071 (citing 4 Cal. Penal Code § 3041).

5 Here, the Board found Petitioner to be unsuitable for 6 parole. Accordingly, it was not required to consult the matrix 7 or calculate good time credits. Petitioner's due process claim 8 relating to the Board's sentencing matrix is therefore DENIED.

9 CONCLUSION

10 For the foregoing reasons, the Court GRANTS the Petition 11 for a Writ of Habeas Corpus. Within thirty (30) days from the 12 date of this Order, the Board must set a parole date for 13 Petitioner unless it finds new evidence, arising after his most 14 recent hearing in 2008, of current dangerousness. Within thirty 15 (30) days, Respondent must file a notice with the Court 16 confirming the parole date. Within seven (7) days after the 17 parole date, Respondent must file a notice with the Court 18 indicating whether Petitioner has been released on parole. The 19 Court retains jurisdiction to enforce its order.

20 The Clerk of the Court shall terminate all pending 21 motions, enter judgment and close the file. Each party shall 22 bear his own costs.

23 IT IS SO ORDERED.
