Highlights

- Fun class for beginners
- Experienced instructors
- Technical acting tools
- Improv and on-camera work

According to The Iliad, live theater was invented when a group of Achaeans, disguised as a large wooden horse, surprised their Trojan audience with a stirring performance of Hamlet. As today's Groupon proves, the military tactic blossomed into an art form that continues to evolve: for $85, you get a six-week Acting for Non-Actors course at Bay Area Acting Studio (a $275 value). Aspiring ingénues can hone their emoting muscles at any of Bay Area Acting Studio's three locations in San Jose, San Bruno, or San Francisco. The class deposit fee is waived for all Groupon students.

Bay Area Acting Studio's experienced instructors sharpen soliloquy skills using the time-honored Meisner technique. The Acting for Non-Actors class introduces thespians-to-be to a variety of acting aspects, fostering camaraderie and fun in an atmosphere free of jealous, imaginary, crowbar-wielding understudies. Hobbyists hoping to keep their day jobs will appreciate the easily accessible evening class schedule, while those who have already whittled hairbrushes into Oscar figurines will benefit from improv acting exercises, cold readings, and scene work. Additional on-camera work will help reveal improvement in two dimensions, finally providing actors with proof that their on-screen charisma transcends appearances on Supermarket Sweep .

The Groupon Guide to: Historical Human Habitats

Since Homo habilis stopped eating gold and began making malleable domiciles out of it, architecture has been an important part of human existence. Here's a look at the history of human inhabitation:

- Australopithecus: Lived in caves to avoid their most fearsome predator—insecurity—which attracted their second most fearsome predator—giant bats.
- Homo habilis: The first humans to have souls, these marmoset-sized people-predecessors lived in giant nests inside of caves.
- Homo erectus: Like us in so many ways, but with a brain two-thirds the size of our own and entirely without skin, "Upright Man" lived in caves.
- Neanderthals: Unlike earlier humans who lived in caves, Neanderthals buried their dead, though they also did live in caves.
- Homo Superior: Will live in space-caves.
