Nokia CEO Says the Door to U.S. Market is in San Diego

Juha-Pekka Tikka 5/28/09

Nokia CEO Olli-Pekka Kallasvuo says San Diego plays a key role in the Finnish mobile phone giant's plans to stage a comeback in the U.S. market. Kallasvuo was questioned by Wall Street Journal columnist Walt Mossberg at the All Things Digital D7 conference in Carlsbad, CA, about Nokia's (NYSE: NOK) decline with U.S. carriers. Nokia operates a handset engineering facility in San Diego specifically for the U.S. market and Kallasvuo said, "I've been working on this for a long time. And it's kind of interesting, the idea that we're in San Diego now; we have about 2 or 2.5 years ago started to make U.S.-market-specific products right here in San Diego."

Back home in Finland, Kallasvuo famously said in 2006 he wouldn't sleep until Nokia had improved its position in the United States. Nokia lost its No. 1 rank in the U.S. after missing the trend for clamshell phones and thinner designs. The Finnish company now has approximately 9 percent of the U.S. market, while globally the company's market share is 35-40 percent. This week Nokia took flak after the debut of its Ovi application store flopped. (Ovi is Finnish for 'door')

Nokia cut its workforce in San Diego from 1,100 to 500 in late 2006 when the company retreated from its CDMA operations. Nokia's San Diego operation focuses only on North America, so there would be handsets designed for the U.S. that exist nowhere else. That is an exception in the company's global strategy. Last year, Nokia and San Diego's CDMA giant Qualcomm settled their legal disputes, and in January the two former rivals announced they were cooperating in the development of U.S. mobile devices.

Kallasvuo was showing Nokia's new flagship phone, the N97, at the D7 conference yesterday. But the N97 does not have a U.S. carrier, and it costs $699.

What's it like to work in Santa Monica?

beaches, deserts and mountains.

Our Santa Monica offices have grown to become one of the largest development centers in the United States. Many of our Google Santa Monica engineers work on some of Google's hardest problems, in realms such as Search Quality, YouTube, Ads, Video and Photos. Our solutions revolve around Google principles: we put the users first, we love academic endeavors and active learning, and we encourage engineers to spend 20% of their time on their own projects to inspire creativity.

As Google continues to improve and expand the search services it provides to the world, and expand its reach into video, photography and audio, we'll need the type of engineering talent that can take us to the next level – and the one after. We need engineers just like you.

Showcasing opportunities in Irvine

Located in the heart of Southern California, Google's Irvine office is leading the latest innovations at Google – in one of the most desirable cities in the US.

Irvine one of the safest cities in the nation, and is just minutes away from attractions such as Newport Beach, Laguna Beach, Disneyland, and many others. Google's Irvine office has an intimate and friendly atmosphere, even though we work on a wide variety of projects. Work at Google Irvine includes massive data storage, forecasting, inventory management, novel presentation layers, optimization, and search.

The Irvine office has established itself as a key center of development for many of Google's advertising-related initiatives. Recently, Irvine became the home to the suite of Revenue and Reporting projects that collectively underpin the AdWords platform. These tools allow Google to support our advertisers at a worldwide scale.

Ex. K

Together, these projects provide advertisers with a personalized and powerful support experience that maximizes the value of each ad dollar spent.

Google Irvine continues to expand the company's horizons with efforts that take online advertising beyond the current state of the art. Here, development teams dedicated to Google TV Ads work to build a flexible, all-digital system for buying more accountable and measurable TV advertising. Similarly, Google Analytics teams work to build a unified web-analytics reporting platform. And with Google Online Audio Ads, teams are working to insert ads into the fastest growing segment of online usage, namely music.

manufacturing facilities form an integrated global production network, giving us flexibility to adjust our production volumes to fluctuations in market demand in different regions.

Each of our plants employs state-of-the-art technology and is highly automated. In 2009, we made significant capital investments in our plant in Chennai to expand its production capabilities.

Our mobile device manufacturing and logistics—which we consider to be a core competence and competitive advantage—are complex, require advanced and costly equipment and typically require outsourcing to third parties. Outsourcing has typically been utilized to adjust our production to seasonal demand fluctuations. During 2009, we had sufficient production to handle in-house the manufacturing volume of mobile device engines, which include the hardware and software that enable the basic operation of a mobile device, and as a result, we outsourced less than 1% of our manufacturing volume. This compared to 2008, during which outsourcing covered approximately 17% of our manufacturing volume of mobile device engines.

Overall, we aim to manage our inventories to ensure that production meets demand for our products, while minimizing inventory-carrying costs. The inventory level we maintain is a function of a number of factors, including estimates of demand for each product category, product price levels, the availability of raw materials, supply-chain integration with suppliers and the rate of technological change. From time to time, our inventory levels may differ from actual requirements.

Design and user experience

At Devices & Services, we endeavor to take a human approach to designing mobile devices, services and software. Using the customer feedback, information on consumer usage patterns and other consumer data collected by us, we are focusing on creating designs that consumers will want and love to use. This ethos is central to our design work and brand.

At the heart of our design approach is people—we are focusing our efforts on designing products and services and their combinations that are delightful and exciting to use. Our approach is to design the whole experience from the packaging to the product, to the icons and the whole digital interface. We understand that through thorough research, understanding of consumer trends, local studies, rapid prototyping of styles, shapes and interactions we would have key tools needed to create a portfolio of products and services and their combinations that are relevant to billions of people.

Based in China, Europe and the United States, our multi-disciplinary design team comprising more than 300 people includes psychologists, researchers, anthropologists, user experience experts and technology specialists representing over 30 different nationalities.

Research and Development

Devices & Services' research and development (R&D) expenses amounted to EUR 3.0 billion in 2009. At the end of the year, Devices & Services employed 17 196 people in R&D.

Nokia's portfolio of mobile devices, services and their combinations is centered around mobile phones, smartphones and mobile computers. Reflecting this approach to market, we have dedicated R&D teams addressing our short to medium-term needs in these areas. This set-up ensures that the teams have visibility of and accountability for the creation process from start to finish. It is also designed to support a better consumer experience as well as better time to market and R&D productivity. Horizontal teams address common elements across the portfolio, such as application and service frameworks, quality and delivery, and architecture and technology development. We have a strong Devices & Services R&D presence in Beijing in China; Copenhagen in Denmark; Greater Helsinki, Salo, Tampere and Oulu in Finland; Ulm in Germany; Bangalore in India; London and Farnborough in the United Kingdom; and San Diego in the United States.

Longer-term, more exploratory technology development comes under the scope of Nokia Research Center, a global network of research centers and laboratories Nokia maintains, in many cases in collaboration with outside partners. Nokia Research Center looks beyond the development of current
