Copyright Counter-Notification

Before Submission

- To submit a copyright counter-notification, you must be certain that you have the legal right to post the video to YouTube.
- By submitting a counter-notification, you consent to disclosing the information provided below, including your name, address and phone number, to the claimant.
- A counter-notification is a legal notification to YouTube that the claimant has made a mistake or misidentified your content. To prevent your content from being reinstated to YouTube, the claimant must sue you. If you are not prepared to face the claimant in court, you should not proceed with a counter-notification. If there is any part of this process that is unclear to you, please consult with a lawyer.

Please note: If any portion of the claimant's material is used in your video, please review the information regarding fair use available here before proceeding. If you have further questions, we suggest you consult with a lawyer.

I have read the above statement.

Please note: Submitting a counter-notification triggers a legal process that will potentially allow your video to be restored to YouTube. By submitting a counter-notification, you consent to having your personal information revealed to the original claimant. Please also note that the legal process requires the claimant to sue you to prevent the content from being restored to YouTube.

I have read the above statement.

Please note: A counter-notification is one way of resolving a copyright strike. However, there are two alternatives:

- A copyright strike may expire in 6 months as long as no additional copyright penalties are received during that time.
- A valid retraction from the claimant will restore the content to the site and resolve the strike. More information about the retractions process may be found here.

I have read the above statement.
