Case No. 20-cv-06470-DMR (PR)

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

12 I. INTRODUCTION

13 Plaintiff Myriss Winston, who is currently incarcerated at Salinas Valley State Prison 14 (“SVSP”), filed a pro se civil rights action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The operative complaint 15 is the amended complaint. Dkt. 8.

16 The parties are presently before the court on Defendants’ motion for summary 17 judgment. Dkt. 29. Plaintiff filed an opposition, and Defendants filed a reply. Dkts. 32, 18 33. Having read and considered the papers submitted and being fully informed, the court hereby 19 GRANTS Defendants’ motion for summary judgment.

20 II. BACKGROUND¹

21 A. Procedural Background

22 Plaintiff initially filed a complaint alleging that California Department of Corrections and 1 Rehabilitation (“CDCR”) officials have interfered with his ability to practice his religion. Dkt. 1 2 at 5-9.²

3 On March 30, 2021, the court issued an Order of Dismissal With Leave to Amend. Dkt. 7.

4 On April 26, 2021, Plaintiff filed his amended complaint. Dkt. 8. Plaintiff has named the 5 following prison official at CDCR—Director of Division of Adult Institutions Connie Gipson. Id.
6 at 1. He has also named SVSP Warden M. B. Atchley.³ Id. Plaintiff is seeking injunctive relief 7 and monetary damages. Id. at 4.

8 In its March 30, 2021, the court summarized Plaintiff’s claims from his original complaint, 9 as follows:

10 Here, Plaintiff professes to be an adherent of the “Thelema Religion” 11 and expresses his beliefs with the possession and use of “religious 12 artifacts [and] tobacco products (i.e., loose tobacco, cigarettes, cigars, 13 ritual herbal smokes/blends, cigarette lighter, rolling papers and 14 smoking pipe), incense sticks/cones, cologn[e]s, perfumes, and oils 15 (different fragrances and uninterrupted access).” Dkt. 1 at 5. Plaintiff 16 alleges that as part of his religious practices of “Thelema,” [i]t is [his] right to obtain, possess, and use [the aforementioned] items under the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment” Id. at 5-6. However, he claims that CDCR and SVSP officials have prevented him from purchasing or receiving tobacco products in the mail, which has interfered with his ability to practice his beliefs.

17 Dkt. 7 at 5.

18 As mentioned above, the court reviewed Plaintiff’s original complaint and dismissed it 19 with leave to amend. Dkt. 7. The court determined that as a “threshold matter,” the complaint 20 “fail[ed] to plausibly allege that Thelema is a variety of religious faith,” and stated as follows:

21 Third-party sources describe it as an occult philosophy, which would 22 likely take it out of the realm of protected religious activity. See 23 Malik v. Brown, 16 F.3d 330, 333 (9th Cir. 1994). It is also not at all 24 clear how the use of tobacco products (or any of the aforementioned “religious artifacts”) is an essential part of the Thelema belief

26 ² Page number citations refer to those assigned by the court’s electronic case management filing system and not those assigned by Plaintiff.

27 ³ The court notes that Plaintiff previously named former CDCR Secretary Ralph Diaz as a 28 Defendant. Because plaintiff did not name Defendant Diaz in his amended complaint, the court dismissed all claims against Defendant Diaz. See Dkt. 9 at 1, 5.

1 system. If Plaintiff chooses to amend, he will need to plausibly allege 2 that Thelema is religious in nature, and requires use of tobacco products or the aforementioned “religious artifacts.”

3 Id. at 5-6. The court then added that Plaintiff only named supervisors as Defendants, and it 4 dismissed his claims against Defendants Diaz and Gipson with leave to amend because Plaintiff 5 presented:

6 no specific allegations against these Defendants other than stating 7 they are responsible for “enforcing United States and State 8 Constitutional rights, federal and state statutes, government codes, 9 government regulations, and executive orders on the Director, prisons and prisoners when violations occur” (Defendant Diaz) and for 10 “passing and enforcing rules, policies and regulations that pertain to prisons within the CDCR and those inmates that are housed in those prisons” (Defendant Gipson).

11 Id. at 6 (quoting Dkt. 1 at 5). The court further instructed Plaintiff as follows:

12 To obtain some of the relief that Plaintiff seeks, he must identify the 13 specific Defendants who denied him tobacco products/“religious 14 artifacts” and describe their actions. Plaintiff should describe the 15 Defendants he spoke to or corresponded with regarding his attempts to obtain tobacco products/“religious artifacts” and their 16 responses. Simply pointing to documents attached as exhibits is insufficient. He must identify them as Defendants and describe their actions in the body of the complaint.

17 Id. Thus, the court dismissed the complaint and granted Plaintiff leave to prepare a proper 18 amended complaint that is “consistent with federal pleading standards.” Id.

19 Plaintiff then filed an amended complaint, see Dkt. 8, which the court reviewed under 28 20 U.S.C. § 1915A on October 12, 2021, see Dkt. 9.

21 Upon giving the amended complaint the liberal construction to which it is entitled, the 22 court found that it stated cognizable claims for violation of Plaintiff’s First Amendment right to 23 the free exercise of religion. Dkt. 9 at 5. The court further found that Plaintiff’s allegations in the 24 amended complaint also implicate the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act 25 (“RLUIPA”), and stated that RLUIPA provides:

26 No government shall impose a substantial burden on the religious 27 exercise of a person residing in or confined to an institution, as 28 defined in section 1997 [which includes state prisons, state psychiatric hospitals, and local jails], even if the burden results from a rule of general applicability, unless the government demonstrates that imposition of the burden on that person (1) is in furtherance of a

1 compelling governmental interest; and (2) is the least restrictive 2 means of furthering that compelling governmental interest.

3 Id. (quoting 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc-1(a)). The court found that the amended complaint adequately 4 linked Defendants Gipson and Atchley, and it directed service on these defendants.⁴ Id. at 5-6.

5 B. Factual Background

6 1. Relevant Background and Procedure for Requesting to Purchase Religious Artifacts

7 The following relevant background on the procedure for requesting to purchase religious 8 artifacts (including religious practices tobacco products, incense sticks/cones, perfumes and oils) 9 is undisputed unless noted otherwise.

10 Since 2005, the California State Legislature has prohibited state prisoners from possessing 11 or using tobacco products, except in departmentally approved religious ceremonies. See Cal.
12 Penal Code § 5030.1(a). The Legislature identified several benefits to the restriction, including 13 increased prison safety, improved inmate health, and reduced operational costs. See, e.g., Jun. 1, 14 2004 Hearing on A.B. 384 Before the S. Comm. on Pub. Safety, 2003-2004 Legis. (Cal. 2004)
15 (bill analysis). Through Title 15 of California Code of Regulations (“Title 15”), the CDCR 16 enforces the statute by largely prohibiting any possession or use of tobacco products “on the 17 grounds of any institution/facility that houses or detains inmates,” with discretion to permit 18 inmates’ use of tobacco products in departmentally approved inmate religious ceremonies. Cal.
19 Code Regs. tit. 15, § 3188(c)(1).

20 California state prisoners may possess and use personal religious properties purchased 21 from departmentally or locally approved vendors. See Cal. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 3190(b), (k)(4).
22 Specifically, the Religious Personal Property Matrix (“RPPM”) lists all items that state prisoners 23 may purchase, possess, or use. Id. § 3190(b). Under the RPPM, prisoners generally cannot 24 possess or use any tobacco products, incense, colognes, or perfumes, but general population 25 inmates may possess and use up to four ounces of prayer oil.⁵

26 _____
27 ⁴ The court did not make any determination about whether Thelema is religious in nature.
See generally Dkt. 9.

28 ⁵ As mentioned, Plaintiff requested these items and included them in his declaratory and injunctive relief. Dkt. 8 at 14.

1 Each institution’s warden must “make every reasonable effort to provide for the religious 2 and spiritual welfare of all interested inmates” See Cal. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 3210(a).
3 Institutions may provide accommodations for religious services that are “in keeping with facility 4 security and other necessary institutional operations and activities.” Id. § 3210(c). “A request for 5 a religious service accommodation that requires a specific time, location and/or item(s) not 6 otherwise authorized, will be referred to a Religious Review Committee (“RRC”) for review and 7 consideration.” Id. § 3210(d). “Accommodation for religious services that are not granted, shall 8 be for reason(s) which would impact facility/unit safety and security, and orderly day to day 9 operations of the institution.” Id.

10 If the California Penal Code or Title 15 proscribe a religious exercise, inmates may request 11 approval to engage in said exercise by submitting a CDCR Form 3067 to their respective housing 12 institution’s RRC. See Richey Decl. at ¶ 8, Ex. 2. The RRC also reviews custody staff’s 13 recommendation to disapprove requested religious items. Id. at ¶ 7. After its review, the RRC 14 forwards its recommendation to the Statewide Religious Review Committee (“SRRC”) using a 15 CDCR Form 2279. Id., Ex. 1.

16 At the SRRC, a subcommittee comprised of a warden, community resource manager, and 17 legal counsel will review the RRC’s recommendation. Id. at ¶ 9. The full SRRC will then 18 deliberate and vote on the recommendation for a final decision. Id. “SRRC’s review and approval 19 process does not differ based on the nature or identity of the requesting religious, faith, or spiritual 20 group or belief.” Id. at ¶ 10. “The process also does not take into account the requesting inmates’ 21 personal identifying information, such as race, ethnicity, ancestral heritage, nationality, gender, 22 sexuality, age, disability, or others, that are not relevant for its review and approval process.” Id.

23 2. Plaintiff’s Version

24 The following background relating to Plaintiff’s claims is taken from the court’s October 25 12, 2021 Order reviewing the amended complaint:

26 . . . Plaintiff specifically alleges that CDCR prison officials 27 impermissibly burdened the practice of his religion by limiting his 28 ability to order/purchase “religious practices tobacco products, incense sticks/cones, perfumes and uninterrupted access to oils of his choice.” See Dkt. 8 at 8. Plaintiff states that he is a “follower of the 1 Religion of Thelema which is a variety of Religious Faith and 2 recognize [sic] as a Religion incorporated in the State of California as 3 a not-for-profit religious organization.” Id. at 3. Plaintiff claims that 4 he has a “sincere and genuine belief in the practices of the religion of 5 Thelema . . . [and] [h]e has been practicing for over four years now 6 and since [his] arrival at [SVSP] [and he] continues to practice 7 Thelema with other Thelema followers.” Id. at 7.⁶

8 Plaintiff states that “[p]risoners in the past [were] allowed to use, 9 possess and smoke tobacco products in prison under the California 10 legislature ban[ned] tobacco products from prisons with the exception 11 that prisoners shall be allowed to use and possess tobacco products 12 for their religious ceremonies.” Id. at 8. Plaintiff further claims that 13 “[p]risoners in the pas[t] had no limit on the religious artifacts they 14 could obtain and use for religious practice until the Director of 15 Division of Adult Institutions [Defendant Gipson] passed regulations 16 via emergency measures creating a list of religious items [that] all 17 religions shall be allowed to use. Id. Plaintiff explains that the list is 18 called the “Religious Personal Property Matrix [(‘RPPM’)].” He 19 claims that the CDCR “has regulations that require inmates to 20 purchase religious items only from Departmental and local vendors, 21 and none of those vendors sell tobacco.” Id. In addition, the “RPPM 22 does not list incense, colognes and perfumes as an item prisoners may 23 purchase and oils are limited to the amount of four ounces or less 24 ever[y] three months with the limited fragrance selections of kyphi, 25 frankinmyrrh, sage, cedar, musk and lavender [and] with all other 26 fragrances ban[ned].” Id. Plaintiff claims that he “practices and 27 expresses his belief[s] . . . through the use of tobacco products, 28 incense, colognes, perfumes and different fragrances of oils in different rituals, ceremonies, rites that he performs daily . . .” Id.

Plaintiff alleges that on December 12, 2019, he filed a 602 inmate appeal seeking to obtain for his religious practices the aforementioned religious items or that “his family and friends be allowed to send him the tobacco products since the [CDCR] did not have a vendor that s[old] tobacco products.” Id. On January 7, 2020, Plaintiff’s 602 appeal was denied “on the grounds that for the safety and security of all CDCR institutions . . .” Id. Plaintiff attempts to link Defendants by stating that Defendant Atchley is liable “as the warden [who] is responsible to provide the religious welfare of Plaintiff” and that this Defendant has a “policy as warden that tobacco products are not allowed at SVSP because he considered it as contraband . . .” Id. at 9. As mentioned above, Plaintiff claims that Defendant Gipson is responsible for creating the “RPPM regulation that limit[s] prisoner[’]s purchase of no more than four ounces every three months and limit[s] [such purchase] to a selection of six different fragrances” and that this “denies Plaintiff[’]s uninterrupted access to the religious oils needed for his religious practice . . .” Id. at 10. Finally, Plaintiff claims that “Defendants Gipson and Atchley lacked penological and/or security justification to deny Plaintiff[’]s religious exercises and practices in the manner as described above during his entire stay

at [SVSP].” Id. at 11.

Dkt. 9 at 3-5 (brackets and footnote added).

3. Defendants’ Version

Plaintiff is a Thelema believer. Theodore Lee Decl., Ex. 1 (Pl.’s Depo.) at 20.⁷ Plaintiff claims to practice and express his Thelemic belief by using tobacco products, incense, cologne, perfumes, and different fragrances of prayer oil in different rituals, ceremonies, and rites that he performs daily. Id. at 38-40. Plaintiff alleges Thelema requires him to have in his cell an altar, on which he must place his religious artifacts in order for him to practice his religion. Id. at 42.

Plaintiff contends California state prisoners could possess and use tobacco products in the past. See Dkt. 8 at 8. He asserts prisoners had no limit on the religious artifacts they could obtain and use for religious practice until CDCR passed regulations to regulate what items prisoners can possess. Id.

Plaintiff was unable to obtain items that he wishes to use in his religious exercise because of Title 15 regulations that have limited the type and quantity of personal religious items that he can possess and use. Id. Plaintiff believes both Defendants, through their respective roles, enforced the regulatory ban on Plaintiff’s ability to obtain and use items that he claims are necessary for his religious practices. Id. at 10-11. Plaintiff accuses both Defendants of violating his rights under the First Amendment and RLUIPA. Id. at 11-13.

Plaintiff seeks declaratory relief finding Defendants’ actions as alleged violated Plaintiff’s federal religious rights. Id. at 14. He also seeks relief declaring CDCR officials’ failure to allow every state prisoner who follows Thelema to have uninterrupted possession and use of tobacco products, prayer oil, and various scented material of their choice a violation of the federal Constitution and RLUIPA. Id. Plaintiff asks for permanent injunctive relief authorizing him to receive tobacco products, prayer oil, and scented material of his choice from vendors of his choice, including those that his family and friends will send, while he claims remains under CDCR’s custody. Id. Lastly, Plaintiff seeks costs and other relief, as the court deems necessary. Id. at 15.

⁷ In citing to Plaintiff’s deposition, the court refers to the page numbers on the bottom of each page instead of those assigned by the court’s electronic case management filing system.

1 Defendants claim that on January 7, 2020—over eight months before Plaintiff filed the 2 instant action—SVSP’s chief deputy warden informed Plaintiff in writing that he could seek 3 religious accommodation for the items at issue “by submitting a [CDCR Form] 2279 to [RRC,] 4 which has been included with this response.” Pl.’s Depo. at 99-100. Defendants state that 5 Plaintiff admitted at his deposition that he never used the available procedures to seek approval 6 nor sought help to understand what the procedure entailed. Id. at 101-05. The CDCR Form 2279 7 has been available to inmates since December 2014. Richey Decl. at ¶ 7, Ex. 1.

8 Defendants claim that no institutional RCC, nor the SRRC, has ever received or reviewed 9 any requests from Plaintiff to possess and use restricted items under Title 15 for his religious 10 exercise. Richey Decl. at ¶ 11. They further stress that had Plaintiff sought accommodation for 11 his religious exercise, both SVSP’s RCC and the SRRC would have reviewed it and rendered a 12 resolution comporting with relevant policies and procedures. See id. at ¶ 12.

13 III. LEGAL STANDARD

14 Summary judgment is proper where the pleadings, discovery and affidavits demonstrate 15 that there is “no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to 16 judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). Material facts are those which may affect the 17 outcome of the case. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). A dispute as to a 18 material fact is genuine if there is sufficient evidence for a reasonable jury to return a verdict for 19 the nonmoving party. Id.

20 The party moving for summary judgment bears the initial burden of identifying those 21 portions of the pleadings, discovery, and affidavits which demonstrate the absence of a genuine 22 issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). Where the moving 23 party will have the burden of proof on an issue at trial, it must affirmatively demonstrate that no 24 reasonable trier of fact could find other than for the moving party. On an issue for which the 25 opposing party by contrast will have the burden of proof at trial, as is the case here, the moving 26 party need only point out “that there is an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party’s 27 case.” Id. at 325.

28 Once the moving party meets its initial burden, the nonmoving party must go beyond the 1 pleadings and, by its own affidavits or discovery, “set forth specific facts showing that there is a 2 genuine issue for trial.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e). The court is only concerned with disputes over 3 material facts and “[f]actual disputes that are irrelevant or unnecessary will not be counted.”

4 Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248. It is not the task of the court to scour the record in search of a genuine 5 issue of triable fact. Keenan v. Allan, 91 F.3d 1275, 1279 (9th Cir. 1996). The nonmoving party 6 has the burden of identifying, with reasonable particularity, the evidence that precludes summary 7 judgment. Id. If the nonmoving party fails to make this showing, “the moving party is entitled to 8 a judgment as a matter of law.” Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323.

9 For purposes of summary judgment, the court must view the evidence in the light most 10 favorable to the nonmoving party; if the evidence produced by the moving party conflicts with 11 evidence produced by the nonmoving party, the court must assume the truth of the evidence 12 submitted by the nonmoving party. See Leslie v. Grupo ICA, 198 F.3d 1152, 1158 (9th Cir. 1999).
13 The court’s function on a summary judgment motion is not to make credibility determinations or 14 weigh conflicting evidence with respect to a disputed material fact. See T.W. Elec. Serv., Inc. v.
15 Pac. Elec. Contractors Ass’n, 809 F.2d 626, 630 (9th Cir. 1987).

16 A district court may only consider admissible evidence in ruling on a motion for summary 17 judgment. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e); Orr v. Bank of America, 285 F.3d 764, 773 (9th Cir. 2002).
18 Submitted by Defendants in support of the motion for summary judgment are Plaintiff’s 19 deposition (Theodore Lee Decl., Ex. 1) as well as declarations by Religious Programs Oversight 20 Unit Manager/Chaplain C. Richey, Deputy Attorney General Theodore Lee (Defendants’ 21 attorney), Reception Centers Mission Captain J. Penney, and Chief of the Office of Policy 22 Standardization⁸ S. Pulley along with various supporting exhibits (Dkts. 29-2, 29-3, 33-1, 33-2).
23 Meanwhile, Plaintiff has filed his verified amended complaint, declaration, and opposition to 24 Defendants’ motion for summary judgment. Dkts. 8, 32. The court will construe these filings as 25 affidavits under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56, insofar as they are based on personal

26
27 ⁸ The Office of Policy Standardization collects data on contraband that inmates smuggle

2 F.3d 454, 460 & nn.10-11 (9th Cir. 1995).

3 IV. DISCUSSION

4 As mentioned above, on October 12, 2021, the court determined that Plaintiff stated 5 cognizable claims under RLUIPA and the First Amendment’s Free Exercise Clause against 6 Defendants. Dkt. 9 at 5. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges that Defendants limited his ability to 7 purchase “religious practices tobacco products, incense sticks/cones, perfumes and uninterrupted 8 access to oils of his choice,” in violation of his rights under the First Amendment and RLUIPA.
9 See Dkt. 8 at 8. It seems that Plaintiff specifically argues that Defendants were responsible for 10 instituting policy that denied Plaintiff’s access to tobacco products and uninterrupted access to the 11 religious oils that are “needed for his religious practice” Id. at 9-10. Plaintiff argues that 12 “Defendants Gipson and Atchley lacked penological and/or security justification to deny 13 Plaintiff[’s] religious exercises and practices . . . during his entire stay at [SVSP].” Id. at 11. The 14 court points out that in his opposition, Plaintiff mostly focusses his claim on Defendants’ specific 15 denial of access to “tobacco products,” see Dkt. 32 at 7-10, only minimally focusses on 16 Defendants allegedly “enforcing regulatory limits on prayer oil and scented material,” id. at 10-11, 17 and does not focus at all on any alleged denial of access to any other religious artifacts, see id.
18 generally. Thus, the majority of the court’s discussion below will focus on Defendants’ alleged 19 denial of Plaintiff’s access to tobacco products and prayer oils, which he claims are required for 20 his religious practice.

21 In their motion for summary judgment, Defendants claim that they did not violate 22 Plaintiff’s rights under the constitution or RLUIPA, stating as follows:

23 Defendants are entitled to summary judgment in their favor because 24 evidence shows that they did not violate Plaintiff’s federal religious 25 rights under RLUIPA and the First Amendment. Plaintiff is unable 26 to show that he has suffered any substantial burden from Defendants’ 27 enforcement of the regulations at issue. Additionally, the regulations 28 that Defendants enforced furthered compelling governmental interests in the least restrictive means available, which passes scrutiny under both RLUIPA and the First Amendment. Separately, Defendants are qualifiedly immune because federal law has not clearly established at the time at issue here that adoption and enforcement of regulations that restrict certain personal religious items but allow exemptions violates Plaintiff's religious rights.

Dkt. 29-1 at 12.

A. RLUIPA

RLUIPA provides that no state may impose a "substantial burden" on an inmate's exercise of religion unless the action or policy in question provides the least restrictive means of serving a compelling governmental interest. 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc-1(a). RLUIPA does not define "substantial burden." See 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc-5. The Ninth Circuit, however, has held that a "substantial burden" on "religious exercise" is one that imposes "a significantly great restriction or onus upon such exercise." Hartmann v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. & Rehab., 707 F.3d 1114, 1125 (9th Cir. 2013) (emphasis added) (quoting San Jose Christian Coll. v. City of Morgan Hill, 360 F.3d 1024, 1034 (9th Cir. 2004)). "Religious exercise," for RLUIPA purposes, includes "any exercise of religion, whether or not compelled by, or central to, a system of religious belief." 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc-5(7)(A). The exercise of religion may involve not only the belief and profession, but the performance of physical acts such as group assembly for worship. See Greene v. Solano County Jail, 513 F.3d 982, 987 (9th Cir. 2008).

The first step in a RLUIPA inquiry is to define the religious exercise at issue. Greene v. Solano County Jail, 513 F.3d 983, 987 (9th Cir. 2008). The plaintiff bears the burden of coming forward with evidence demonstrating the state's action or policy constituted a substantial burden on his exercise of religion. Warsoldier v. Woodford, 418 F.3d 989, 994-95 (9th Cir. 2005). The focus of this initial inquiry necessarily is on the manner in which the plaintiff's religious exercise is impacted, rather than on the reasonableness of the facility's policy or regulation. Id. at 995. Once the plaintiff has met his initial burden of showing a substantial burden on his exercise of religion, the burden shifts to the government to show that the burden imposed is in furtherance of a "compelling" government interest (rather than simply a legitimate penological interest), and that it achieves the compelling interest by the least restrictive means. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc-1(a); Shakur v. Schriro, 514 F.3d 878, 889 (9th Cir. 2008).

Defendants argue as follows:

Dispositive evidence shows that Plaintiff inexcusably elected to not seek available religious accommodation for his religious exercise. In

1 turn, Plaintiff's inaction demonstrates Defendants never substantially 2 burdened his religious exercise. Because Plaintiff failed to show a substantial burden traceable to Defendants, Plaintiff failed to state a RLUIPA claim and the Court should dismiss it.

3 Dkt. 29-1 at 12.

4 The court finds that on the evidence in the record, no rational trier of fact could find in 5 Plaintiff's favor on a RLUIPA claim. He fails to provide any evidence that his religious practice 6 was substantially burdened by Defendants' actions. See Warsoldier, 418 F.3d at 994-95. As 7 explained below, Defendants are entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the RLUIPA claim.

8 First, while Title 15 included a tobacco-products restriction, there exists an exception for 9 inmates' tobacco products use in departmentally approved inmate religious ceremonies. See Cal.
10 Code Regs. tit. 15, § 3188(c)(1). The record shows that SVSP permits inmates to purchase and 11 use prayer oils in accordance with the current RPPM. See Penney Decl. at ¶ 8; Pulley Decl. at ¶ 8.
12 All item and quantity restrictions identified in the RPPM relate to promoting institutional security 13 and safety for all inmates and CDCR personnel. Penney Decl. at ¶ 7; Pulley Decl. at ¶ 7.

14 Second, the record shows that Defendants have presented evidence that on January 7, 15 2020, which was prior to the filing of this lawsuit, SVSP's chief deputy warden informed Plaintiff 16 in writing that he could seek religious accommodation for the items at issue by submitting a 17 CDCR Form 2279 to the RRC at SVSP. See Pl.'s Depo. at 99-100. Defendants have also 18 presented evidence that no institutional RCC, nor the SRRC, has ever received or reviewed any 19 requests from Plaintiff to possess and use any of his alleged restricted religious items. See Richey 20 Decl. at ¶ 11. The record also shows that Plaintiff admitted at his deposition that he never used the 21 available procedures to seek approval nor sought help to understand what the procedure entailed.
22 See Pl.'s Depo. at 101-05.

23 The evidence shows that Plaintiff knew, or should have known, that he had ample 24 opportunities to request and possibly secure an accommodation for the items at issue. See Pl.'s 25 Depo. at 99-104; Richey Decl. at ¶¶ 7-8, 11. However, he elected to not seek such an 26 accommodation. Id. Moreover, he fails to allege that Defendants ever impeded his effort to 27 secure any religious accommodation or otherwise made an accommodation practically impossible.
28 See generally Dkt. 8. Instead, in his opposition, Plaintiff makes a conclusory statement about this

1 religious accommodation or “exception,” stating that the prison “never has give[n] said exemption 2 to any prisoner since the exemption has been in place.” Dkt. 32 at 9. He also improperly attempts 3 to shift the evidentiary burden back to Defendants, accusing them of failing to offer evidence of an 4 instance in which prison officials granted a request to use tobacco products in religious 5 ceremonies. See id. However, Defendants argue in their reply that “this litigation is focused on 6 whether Plaintiff faced substantial burden due to Defendants’ enforcement of Title 15, section 7 3188(c), not whether the California prison system substantially burdened all of its inmates’ 8 religious exercise.” Dkt. 33 at 4. Defendants further argue that “California prison officials cannot 9 consider an exemption—much less grant it—for Plaintiff to use tobacco products in his Thelema 10 practices, unless he properly seeks that exemption through the available channels.” Id. The court 11 agrees with Defendants, and it finds unavailing Plaintiff’s argument in his opposition. As 12 mentioned above, Plaintiff could have sought religious accommodations as he was instructed to do 13 so by SVSP officials, but he chose not to. See Pl.’s Depo. at 99-104; Richey Decl. at ¶¶ 7-8, 11.
14 The undisputed failure to take steps to seek an accommodation through well-established channels 15 forecloses any argument that he experienced a substantial burden in his religious exercise. See id.

16 In sum, on the evidence in the record, no rational trier of fact could find in Plaintiff’s favor 17 on a RLUIPA claim because Plaintiff fails to provide any evidence that Defendants substantially 18 burdened his exercise of religion. See Warsoldier, 418 F.3d at 994-95. Because Plaintiff has not 19 met his initial burden of showing a substantial burden on his exercise of religion, the burden need 20 not shift to the government to show that the burden imposed is in furtherance of a “compelling” 21 government interest and that it achieves the compelling interest by the least restrictive means. See 22 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc-1(a); Shakur, 514 F.3d at 889. Accordingly, Defendants are thus entitled to 23 judgment as a matter of law on the RLUIPA claim.

24 B. First Amendment

25 The First Amendment provides that “Congress shall make no law respecting an 26 establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.” U.S. Const. amend. I. “The 27 first of the two Clauses, commonly called the Establishment Clause, commands a separation of 28 church and state. The second, the Free Exercise Clause, requires government respect for, and 1 noninterference with, the religious beliefs and practices of our Nation’s people.” Cutter v.

2 Wilkinson, 544 U.S. 709, 719 (2005). The free exercise right is necessarily limited by the fact of 3 incarceration, and may be curtailed in order to achieve legitimate correctional goals or to maintain 4 prison security. See O’Lone v. Shabazz, 482 U.S. 342, 348-49 (1987). In order to prevail on a 5 free exercise claim, a prisoner must show a defendant burdened the practice of his religion without 6 any justification reasonably related to legitimate penological interests. See Shakur v. Schriro, 514 7 F.3d 878, 883-84 (9th Cir. 2008).

8 The Supreme Court has identified four factors for courts to consider when determining 9 whether a regulation or practice is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests: 10 (1) whether there is a “‘valid, rational connection’ between the prison regulation and the legitimate 11 governmental interest put forward to justify it,” (2) “whether there are alternative means of 12 exercising the right that remain open to prison inmates,” (3) “the impact accommodation of the 13 asserted constitutional right will have on guards and other inmates, and on the allocation of prison 14 resources generally,” and (4) the “absence of ready alternatives,” or, in other words, whether the 15 rule at issue is an “‘exaggerated response’ to [prison] concerns.” Turner v. Safley, 482 U.S. 78, 16 89-90 (1987) (citation omitted). The task in considering the Turner factors is not to balance the 17 four factors, but, rather, to determine whether the state shows a “reasonable” relation between the 18 policy and legitimate penological objectives, rather than simply a “logical” one. Beard v. Banks, 19 548 U.S. 521, 533 (2006). While all justifiable inferences must be drawn in the nonmoving 20 party’s favor with respect to matters of disputed fact, the court’s inferences must accord deference 21 to the views of prison authorities in disputed matters of professional judgment. See id. at 529-30.
22 Unless a prisoner can point to evidence showing the policy is not reasonably related to legitimate 23 penological objectives, sufficient to allow him to prevail on the merits, he cannot prevail at the 24 summary judgment stage. Id. at 530.

25 Turning to the instant action, with respect to the first Turner factor, the undisputed 26 evidence shows a rational and valid connection between a legitimate government interest in 27 maintaining prison order and security and restricting inmates’ possession and use of tobacco 28 products/prayer oils through Title 15 regulations. The California Legislature identified several 1 justifying and beneficial reasons behind the California Penal Code’s tobacco products ban, such as 2 enhanced prison security, improved inmate health, and reduced operational costs. Jun. 1, 2004 3 Hearing on A.B. 384 Before the S. Comm. on Pub. Safety, 2003-2004 Legis. (Cal. 2004) (bill 4 analysis)). Furthermore, that prison officials must affirmatively protect inmates from harms that 5 they personally know of is clear. See, e.g., Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 834-37 (1994).

6 Taken together, Defendants’ enforcement of the tobacco-products restriction ensures that inmates 7 are safe from foreseeably adverse consequences of using tobacco products. In addition, any 8 restrictions to the use and possession of prayer oils as identified in the RPPM were directly related 9 to ensuring the safety and security of CDCR institutions. Penney Decl. at ¶ 7; Pulley Decl. at ¶ 7.
10 Courts recognize that preserving the safety and security of a prison, staff, and inmates is a 11 legitimate penological interest. Mauro v. Arpaio, 188 F.3d 1054, 1059 (9th Cir. 1999); Procunier 12 v. Martinez, 416 U.S. 396, 413 (1974) (holding that legitimate penological interests include 13 “security, order, and rehabilitation”), overruled on other grounds, Thornburgh v. Abbott, 490 U.S.
14 401, 413-14 (1989). The court further explains below how the record establishes a reasonable 15 relationship between this legitimate penological interest and the restrictions on an inmate’s 16 possession of tobacco/prayer oils.

17 The record shows that the prohibition of smoking tobacco products at the prisons was 18 directly related to ensuring the safety and security of CDCR institutions. Richey Decl. at ¶¶ 4-7.
19 According to Chaplain Richey, the California Penal Code, Title 15, and the Department 20 Operations Manual (“DOM”) all have provisions concerning CDCR inmates and their religious 21 activities, programs, and resources and inmates’ use of tobacco products as well. Id. at ¶ 4.

22 Under California Penal Code § 5030.1(a), “inmates under CDCR’s custody may not 23 possess or use tobacco products, except in departmentally approved religious ceremonies as 24 outlined in Title 15.” Id. at ¶ 5. Additionally, inmates have used tobacco products as underground 25 currency to barter items before the ban, which posed security risks to them as some inmates 26 extorted others of their tobacco products. Penney Decl. at ¶ 5; Pulley Decl. at ¶ 5. Moreover, 27 allowing inmates to use tobacco products caused significant health problems for them, which 28 increased the health care cost for CDCR to treat inmates suffering various conditions due to 1 prolonged smoking and other use of tobacco products. Id.

2 Under Title 15, section 3187(b)(2) allows smoking within twenty feet of state owned or 3 occupied buildings in designated areas by each institution head for approved inmate religious-4 ceremony purposes.” Richey Decl. at ¶ 6. Under Title 15, section 3188(c)(1), “no one may 5 possess or use tobacco products on the grounds of any institution/facility that houses or detains 6 inmates, except when such use is in departmentally approved religious ceremonies.” Id. Section 7 3188(d) “prohibits inmates’ smoking, possession, or use of tobacco products, except as allowed 8 under subsection (c), and considers tobacco as contraband” Id. Title 15, section 3189 9 “makes clear that inmates violating sections 3187 or 3188 will be subject to discipline, including 10 administrative and serious rule violations procedures” Id. Section 3190 concerns authorized 11 personal religious property that inmates may possess, and the RPPM (incorporated by reference in 12 section 3190(b)), “lists all permitted personal religious items,” but “does not list any tobacco 13 products as authorized items for inmates to possess or use.” Id.

14 DOM section 31110.1 “identified that California prohibits smoking tobacco products in all 15 state-owned, leased, or occupied buildings,” and the “Secretary of CDCR has also prohibited the 16 use and possession of all tobacco products at all institutions and facilities that house or detain 17 inmates” Id. at ¶ 7. DOM section 53040.1 “prohibits inmates’ smoking, possession, or use 18 of tobacco products, and any tobacco products in inmates’ possession are contraband.” Id.
19 Section 54030.1(a) “permits inmates to possess in their living quarters or living areas personal 20 religious items outline in the RPPM. Id. Section 5430.10.9(a) “allows inmates to possess 21 authorized personal religious items in accordance with the RPPM and which are consistent with 22 the six cubic feet limitation.” Id. Section 5430.10.9(b) “states that custody staff shall consult with 23 the [RRC] when recommending disapproval of religious items.” Id. As explained above, the RRC 24 “shall forward recommended approval or disapproval of religious items to the [SRRC] utilizing 25 [CDCR Form] 2279, which has been available to inmates [such as Plaintiff] through their 26 respective housing institutions since December 2014.” Id. (brackets added).

27 Meanwhile, as to prayer oils, under the RPPM, inmates may possess only up to four 28 ounces of non-alcoholic and non-flammable prayer oil. Penney Decl. at ¶ 8, Ex. 1; Pulley Decl. at ¶ 8, Ex. 1. Further, the only allowed fragrances are kyphi, frankinmyrrh, sage, cedar, musk, lavender, sandalwood, and rose. Id. Inmates also may not possess or use any perfumes, colognes, or incense sticks and cones. Id. These restrictions are to ensure that inmates do not use scented liquid material to smuggle in contraband by diluting it in perfumes, colognes, or incense sticks and cones, masking the odor of other contraband with prayer oil fragrances, or causing fires indoors. Id. Captain Penney claims to have “personally dealt with approximately eight instances in which inmates smuggled in contraband using personal religious items . . . [and] [s]muggling methods included soaking approved paper materials in synthetic marijuana and other liquid drugs in place of religious oils.” Penney Decl. at ¶ 9. Meanwhile, Chief Pulley alleges as follows:

between March 2021 and present, CDCR facilities reported at least three instances in which inmates attempted to smuggle contraband, such as CBD oil and other controlled substances, by diluting them in scented liquid allowed as religious personal items. This figure is a conservative estimate, as individual CDCR correctional facilities do not always immediately report instances of contraband found to the Office of Policy Standardization.

Pulley Decl. at ¶ 9.

These aforementioned reasons, as set forth in declarations by Chaplain Richey, Captain Penney and Chief Pulley, establish a reasonable relationship between the restrictions on an inmate’s possession of tobacco products/prayer oils and the penological interests of maintaining institutional safety, security, and rehabilitation. Thus, this first Turner factor weighs in favor of Defendants.

As noted earlier, the second Turner factor is “whether there are alternative means of exercising the right that remain open to prison inmates.” Turner, 482 U.S. at 89-90. The restrictions on Plaintiff’s access to tobacco products/prayer oils did not deprive Plaintiff of all means of exercising his religious beliefs. Even if restrictions on Plaintiff’s access to tobacco products/prayer oils exist, the evidence shows that Plaintiff knew, or should have known, that he had ample opportunities to request for and possibly secure an accommodation from the prison. See Pl.’s Depo. at 99-104; Richey Decl. at ¶¶ 7-8. However, as mentioned above, he elected to not seek such an accommodation. Id. Therefore, this factor weighs in favor of Defendants.

The third Turner factor requires the court to consider the “impact accommodation of the

1 asserted constitutional right will have on guards and other inmates, and on the allocation of prison 2 resources generally.” Turner, 482 U.S. at 90. Here, the third factor under Turner has not been 3 borne out as inmates are permitted to request for accommodations to possess or use tobacco 4 products for “departmentally approved religious ceremonies,” Richey Decl. at ¶¶ 5-7, as well as to 5 continue to purchase and use prayer oils in accordance with the current RPPM. Plaintiff did not 6 seek accommodation here. Accordingly, neither Defendants’ conduct, the current CDCR special 7 purchase order procedure, nor the current RPPM restrictions have had significant negative effects 8 on other inmates or guards. Thus, this factor weighs in favor of Defendants.

9 The fourth Turner factor requires the court to consider whether there is an “absence of 10 ready alternatives” to the prison policy. Turner, 482 U.S. at 90. The burden is on the prisoner 11 challenging the regulation to show that there are obvious, easy alternatives to the regulation.
12 See O’Lone, 482 U.S. at 350; see also Mauro v. Arpaio, 188 F.3d 1054, 1063 (9th Cir. 1999).
13 Ultimately, this factor weighs in favor of Defendants because the restrictions on inmates’ use and 14 possession of tobacco/prayer oils were not an exaggerated response to prison concerns. As 15 mentioned, the record shows that inmates have used tobacco products “as underground currency to 16 barter items before the ban, which posed security risks to them as some inmates extorted others of 17 their tobacco products.” Penney Decl. at ¶ 5; Pulley Decl. at ¶ 5. Furthermore, there have been 18 past issues of inmates using prayer oils to smuggle in contraband items. Penney Decl. at ¶ 9; 19 Pulley Decl. at ¶ 9. Moreover, even with the aforementioned issues involving prayer oils, inmates 20 are still allowed to purchase up to four ounces of eight types of prayer oils. Penney Decl. at ¶ 8, 21 Ex. 1; Pulley Decl. at ¶ 8, Ex. 1.

22 Having considered the various Turner factors, the court concludes that Defendants’ 23 conduct was reasonably related to the legitimate penological interests in staff and inmate safety.
24 Plaintiff does not show or raise a triable issue of fact that his right to free exercise of religion was 25 improperly impinged upon by Defendants denying plaintiff’s access to tobacco products/prayer 26 oils. Defendants are therefore entitled to judgment in their favor on Plaintiff’s First Amendment 27 claim.

⁹ The court's finding that Defendants are entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law as to Plaintiff's claims obviates the need to address their alternative arguments regarding an entitlement to qualified immunity.
