UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

DEFENSE FOR CHILDREN
INTERNATIONAL-PALESTINE, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

JOSEPH R. BIDEN, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 23-cv-05829-JSW

ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO DISMISS AND DENYING MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Re: Dkt. Nos. 19, 38

Now before the Court is the motion for preliminary injunction filed by Plaintiffs Defense for Children International-Palestine, Al-Haq, Ahmed Abu Artema, Dr. Omar El-Najjar, Mohammed Ahmed Abu Rokbeh, Mohammad Herzallah, Laila Elhaddad, Waeil Elbhassi, Basim Elkarra, and A.N. (collectively “Plaintiffs”). Also before the Court is the motion to dismiss filed by the President and the Secretaries of Defense and State of the United States (“Defendants”). The Court has considered the parties’ papers, oral argument, testimony, relevant legal authority, and the record in this case, and the Court HEREBY GRANTS Defendants’ motion to dismiss and DENIES Plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary injunction.

BACKGROUND

On October 7, 2023, Hamas attacked Israel, killing approximately 1,200 people and taking 240 citizens hostage. Since that time, Israel has mounted a military campaign against Hamas in the Gaza Strip. During this military campaign, there have been roughly 26,000 people killed and over 63,000 wounded in Israeli attacks. Defendants, the United States President and his

1 Secretaries of Defense and State, as well as numerous other senior administration officials have 2 been engaged in diplomatic discussions in the area, in addition to providing significant military 3 and financial support for Israel.

4 On November 13, 2023, Plaintiffs filed this suit against the Defendants to “take all 5 measures within their power to prevent Israel’s commission of genocidal acts against the 6 Palestinian people of Gaza.” (Compl., Prayer for Relief.) Plaintiffs allege that Defendants violate 7 their duties under Article I of the Genocide Convention by supporting Israel’s military actions 8 following the attacks of October 7, 2023. See Genocide Convention, art. 1, 78 U.N.T.S. at 280.
9 Plaintiffs further allege that Defendants, by providing diplomatic, financial, and military support 10 to Israel, are complicit in Israel’s purported commission of genocide, in violation of Article III(e) 11 and its implementing legislation, which makes genocide a federal crime. See id. at art. 111(e); 18 12 U.S.C. § 1091. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants have violated the duties of the United States 13 under international law and, by its actions, is complicit in the ongoing genocide of the Palestinian 14 people in Gaza.

15 In their motion for a preliminary injunction, Plaintiffs seek an “order enjoining Defendants 16 and all persons associated with them from providing any further military or financial support, aid, 17 or any form of assistance to Israel’s attacks and maintenance of a total siege on Palestinians in 18 Gaza, in accordance with their duty under federal and customary international law to prevent, and 19 not further, genocide.” (Dkt. No. 19, Motion for Preliminary Injunction at 1.) Further, Plaintiffs 20 seek an order from this Court requiring Defendants to “exert influence over Israel to end its 21 bombing of the Palestinian people of Gaza, ... to lift the siege on Gaza, ... [and to] prevent the 22 ‘evacuation’ or forcible transfer and expulsion of Palestinians from Gaza.” (Compl., Prayer for 23 Relief.) Lastly, Plaintiffs seek to have this Court enjoin Defendants “from obstructing attempts by 24 the international community, including at the United Nations, to implement a ceasefire in Gaza 25 and lift the siege on Gaza.” (Id.)

26 In its recent decision, the International Court of Justice (“ICJ”) found that the “acts and 27 omissions complained of ... appear to be capable of falling within the provisions of the Genocide 28 Convention.” (Dkt. No. 87, ICJ opinion dated January 26, 2024, at ¶ 30.) The ICJ found that:

the military operation being conducted by Israel following the attack of 7 October 2023 has resulted in a large number of deaths and injuries, as well as the massive destruction of homes, forcible displacement of the vast majority of the population, and extensive damage to civilian infrastructure. While figures relating to the Gaza Strip cannot be independently verified, recent information indicates that 25,700 Palestinians have been killed, over 63,000 injuries have been reported, over 360,000 housing units have been destroyed or partially damaged and approximately 1.7 million persons have been internally displaced.

(Id. at ¶ 46.)

Upon adoption of the Genocide Convention, the United Nations General Assembly defined genocide as a denial of the right of existence of entire human groups, as homicide is the denial of the right to live of individual human beings; such denial of the right of existence shocks the conscience of mankind, results in great losses in the form of cultural and other contributions represented by these human groups, and is contrary to moral law and to the spirit and aims of the United Nations.

(Id. at ¶ 65, citing resolution 96(I) of 11 December 1946.) The ICJ further observed that the Genocide Convention “‘was manifestly adopted for a purely humanitarian and civilizing purpose’, since ‘its object on the one hand is to safeguard the very existence of certain human groups and on the other to confirm and endorse the most elementary principles of morality.’” (Id.) (citation omitted). The International Court found that it considered it “plausible [that the] rights in question in these proceedings, namely the right of Palestinians in the Gaza Strip to be protected from acts of genocide and related prohibited acts identified in Article III of the Genocide Convention, ... are of such a nature that prejudice to them is capable of causing irreparable harm.” (Id. at ¶ 66.) (citation omitted).

The ICJ further ruled that “Israel must, in accordance with its obligations under the Genocide Convention, in relation to Palestinians in Gaza, take all measures within its power to prevent the commission of all acts within the scope of article II of this Convention, in particular: (a) killing members of the group; (b) causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group; (c) deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part; and (d) imposing measures intended to prevent births

1 within the group. ... The Court further considers that Israel must ensure with immediate effect that 2 its military forces do not commit any of the above-described acts.” (Id. at ¶ 78.)

3 Similarly, the undisputed evidence before this Court comports with the finding of the ICJ 4 and indicates that the current treatment of the Palestinians in the Gaza Strip by the Israeli military 5 may plausibly constitute a genocide in violation of international law. Both the uncontroverted 6 testimony of the Plaintiffs and the expert opinion proffered at the hearing on these motions as well 7 as statements made by various officers of the Israeli government indicate that the ongoing military 8 siege in Gaza is intended to eradicate a whole people and therefore plausibly falls within the 9 international prohibition against genocide. (See, e.g., Dkt. No. 19-6, Declaration of Drs. Cox, 10 Sanford, and Trachtenberg, at ¶¶ 9-14.)

11 It is every individual’s obligation to confront the current siege in Gaza, but it also this 12 Court’s obligation to remain within the metes and bounds of its jurisdictional scope.

13 ANALYSIS

14 A. Legal Standard for Motion to Dismiss.¹

15 A motion to dismiss is proper under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) where the 16 pleadings fail to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. A court’s “inquiry is limited to 17 the allegations in the complaint, which are accepted as true and construed in the light most 18 favorable to the plaintiff.” Lazy Y Ranch Ltd. v. Behrens, 546 F.3d 580, 588 (9th Cir. 2008).

19 Even under the liberal pleading standard of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2), “a 20 plaintiff’s obligation to provide ‘grounds’ of his ‘entitle[ment] to relief’ requires more than labels 21 and conclusions, and formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.”
22 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (citing Papasan v. Allain, 478 U.S. 265, 286 (1986)). Pursuant to 23 Twombly, a plaintiff cannot merely allege conduct that is conceivable but must instead allege 24 “enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Id. at 570. “A claim has facial 25 plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable 26 inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662,

27 _____
28 ¹ Because the Court finds that it lacks subject matter jurisdiction to hear the case, Plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary injunction must be denied as well, without further analysis.

1 678 (2009) (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

2 B. The Political Question Doctrine Bars Plaintiffs’ Claims.

3 The Court finds that the claims alleged here raise fundamentally non-justiciable political 4 questions. At its core, the political question doctrine is concerned with the separation of powers 5 between the separate branches of government, and limits jurisdiction of the courts to “cases and 6 controversies.” See U.S. Const. Art. III, § 2; see also Powell v. McCormack, 395 U.S. 486, 518 7 (1969); Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 210 (1962). The political question doctrine “first found 8 expression in Chief Justice Marshall’s observation that ‘[q]uestions, in their nature political, or 9 which are, by the constitution and laws, submitted to the executive, can never be made in this 10 court.’” Corrie v. Caterpillar, Inc., 503 F.3d 972, 980 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing Marbury v. Madison, 11 5 U.S. 1 (1 Cranch) 137, 170 (1803)); see also Baker, 369 U.S. at 210 (holding that the 12 nonjusticiability of political questions is founded on the doctrine of separation of powers, whether 13 a matter has been committed to another branch of government by the Constitution). The doctrine 14 “excludes from judicial review those controversies which revolve around policy choices and value 15 determinations constitutionally committed for resolution to the halls of Congress or the confines of 16 the Executive Branch.” Japan Whaling Ass’n v. Am. Cetacean Soc’y, 478 U.S. 221, 230 (1986).

17 According to Supreme Court jurisprudence, there are six criteria to determine whether a 18 dispute presents a nonjusticiable political question:

19 Prominent on the surface of any case held to involve a political 20 question is found [1] a textually demonstrable constitutional 21 commitment of the issue to a coordinate political department; or [2] 22 a lack of judicially discoverable and manageable standards for 23 resolving it; or [3] the impossibility of deciding without an initial 24 policy determination of a kind clearly for nonjudicial discretion; or 25 [4] the impossibility of a court’s undertaking independent resolution without expressing lack of the respect due coordinate branches of government; or [5] an unusual need for unquestioning adherence to a political decision already made; or [6] the potentiality of embarrassment from multifarious pronouncements by various departments on one question.

26 Baker, 369 U.S. at 217. The presence of any one factor indicates the existence of a political 27 question. Id. If any one of these factors is “‘inextricable from the case,’ the court should dismiss 28 the case as non-justiciable because it involves a political question.” Id. If a claim or issue

1 involves a nonjusticiable political question, courts will lack subject matter jurisdiction and cannot 2 consider those claims. See, e.g., Republic of Marshall Islands v. United States, 865 F.3d 1187, 3 1200 (9th Cir. 2017).

4 The most important considerations in reaching a determination that a question falls into the 5 category of political questions are the first two outlined in Baker: “the appropriateness under our 6 system of government of attributing finality to the action of the political departments and also the 7 lack of satisfactory criteria for a judicial determination . . .” Coleman v. Miller, 307 U.S. 433, 8 454-55 (1939). Among the areas that the courts have traditionally deemed to involve political 9 questions is that of foreign relations, which “is committed by the Constitution to the executive and 10 legislative – ‘the political’ – departments of the government, and the propriety of what may be 11 done in the exercise of this political power is not subject to judicial inquiry or decision.” Oetjen v.
12 Central Leather Co., 246 U.S. 297, 302 (1918).

13 Foreign policy is constitutionally committed to the political branches of government, and 14 disputes over foreign policy are considered nonjusticiable political questions. See, e.g., Haig v.
15 Agee, 453 U.S. 280, 292 (1981) (“[T]he conduct of foreign relations ... [is] exclusively entrusted 16 to the political branches ... [and] immune from judicial inquiry or interference.”). “The President 17 is the sole organ of the nation in its external relations, and its sole representative with foreign 18 nations.” United States v. Curtiss-Wright Exp. Corp., 299 U.S. 304, 319 (1936 (citation omitted)); 19 see also Am. Ins. Ass’n v. Garamendi, 539 U.S. 396, 414 (2003) (“historical gloss on the 20 ‘executive power’ vested in Article II of the Constitution has recognized the President’s ‘vast 21 share of responsibility for the conduct of our foreign relations.’”) (citation omitted). “[T]he 22 nuances of the foreign policy of the United States ... are much more the province of the Executive 23 Branch and Congress than of this Court.” Crosby v. Nat’l Foreign Trade Council, 530 U.S. 363, 24 386 (2000). The foreign policy decision whether to provide military or financial support to a 25 foreign nation is “a quintessential political question” and likely “inappropriate for judicial 26 resolution.” See Abusharar v. Hagel, 77 F. Supp. 3d 1005, 1006 (C.D. Cal. 2014); Caterpillar, 27 503 F.3d at 983. “If the court is being called upon to serve as a forum for considering the wisdom 28 of discretionary decisions made by the political branches in the realm of foreign policy or national

1 security, then the political-question doctrine is implicated, and the court cannot proceed.” 2 Mobarez v. Kerry, 187 F. Supp. 3d 85, 92 (D.D.C. 2016) (opinion by Ketanji Brown Jackson, J.).

3 Here, Plaintiffs’ challenge to the appropriateness of providing financial and military aid to 4 Israel is a challenge to the manner in which the President and Executive Branch officials conduct 5 the foreign affairs of the United States. Plaintiffs’ request to have this Court enjoin the 6 government of the United States from providing military or financial assistance to Israel invokes 7 matters are “intimately related to foreign policy and national security” and are “largely immune 8 from judicial inquiry and interference.” Haig, 453 U.S. at 292; Harisiades v. Shaughnessy, 342 9 U.S. 580, 589 (1952). Both Congress and the President have determined that military and 10 economic assistance to Israel is necessary at this time. See, e.g., Dickson v. Ford, 521 F.2d 234, 11 235–36 (5th Cir. 1975). Plaintiffs’ claims fail the first Baker factor because the judiciary “cannot 12 intrude into our government’s decision to grant military assistance to Israel ... [as] that foreign 13 policy decision is committed under the Constitution to the legislative and executive branches.” 14 Caterpillar, 503 F.3d at 983.

15 “Whether to grant military or other aid to a foreign nation is a political decision inherently 16 entangled with the conduct of foreign relations.” Caterpillar, 503 F.3d at 983. Where both “the 17 Congress and the President have determined that military and economic assistance to the State of 18 Israel is necessary,” the question of “whether foreign aid to Israel is necessary at this particular 19 time is a ‘question uniquely demand[ing] single-voiced statement of the Government’s views’ and 20 is therefore inappropriate for judicial resolution.” Id. (citations omitted).

21 In Caterpillar, the Ninth Circuit relied on the political question doctrine and determined 22 that the courts “cannot intrude into our government’s decision to grant military assistance to Israel, 23 even indirectly.” Id. This Court is accordingly guided by the political question doctrine and finds 24 that, having sued members of the Executive directly, ruling on Plaintiffs’ request for an injunction 25 would implicate several other Baker factors. For example, the judiciary is not equipped with the 26 intelligence or the acumen necessary to make foreign policy decisions on behalf of the 27 government. “[T]he very nature of executive decision as to foreign policy is political, not judicial 28 ... They are decisions of a kind for which the Judiciary has neither aptitude, facilities, nor 1 responsibility and have long been held to belong to the domain of political power not subject to 2 judicial intrusion or inquiry.” Chicago & Southern Airlines v. Waterman S.S. Corp., 333 U.S.

3 103, 111 (1948).

4 In addition, making such foreign policy determinations would require this Court to 5 “implicitly question[], and even condemn[], United States foreign policy toward Israel” and would 6 “potential[ly] ... cause international embarrassment were a federal court to undermine foreign 7 policy decisions in the sensitive context of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.” Caterpillar, 503 F.3d 8 at 983-84. “We simply cannot square the primacy of the Executive in the conduct of foreign 9 relations and the Executive Branch’s lead role in foreign policy ... with an injunction that compels 10 the United States to” end support and exert influence over Israel. Republic of Marshall Islands, 11 865 F.3d at 1201.

12 Because any determination to challenge the decision of the executive branch of 13 government on support of Israel is fraught with serious political questions, the claims presented by 14 Plaintiffs here lie outside the Court’s limited jurisdiction. See Caterpillar, 503 F.3d at 980 (“It is 15 not the role of the courts to indirectly indict Israel for violating international law with military 16 equipment the United States government provided and continues to provide”); see also 17 Schlesinger v. Reservists Comm. To Stop the War, 418 U.S. 208, 215 (1974) (“[T]he concept of 18 justiciability, which expresses the jurisdictional limits imposed upon federal courts by the ‘case or 19 controversy’ requirement of Art. III, embodies ... the political question doctrine.”).

20 CONCLUSION

21 There are rare cases in which the preferred outcome is inaccessible to the Court. This is 22 one of those cases. The Court is bound by precedent and the division of our coordinate branches 23 of government to abstain from exercising jurisdiction in this matter. Yet, as the ICJ has found, it 24 is plausible that Israel’s conduct amounts to genocide. This Court implores Defendants to 25 examine the results of their unflinching support of the military siege against the Palestinians in 26 Gaza.

27 The Court GRANTS Defendants’ motion to dismiss without leave to amend and DENIES 28 Plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary injunction. A separate judgment shall issue and the Clerk is
