Mr. Malutta's practice is focused on providing comprehensive advice covering the acquisition, use and enforcement of rights under U.S. and international trademark and copyright laws. He counsels clients regarding the proper selection and adoption of trademarks and he prosecutes trademark applications worldwide. Mr. Malutta litigates intellectual property disputes in federal and state courts, as well as before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board. He works for clients that conduct business in a wide range of industries—apparel, biotechnology, computer hardware and software, e-commerce, and food products.

Mr. Malutta also maintains an active practice counseling clients on issues related to the Internet, including the development of comprehensive on-line brand protection plans, drafting all manner of commercial agreements, and advising clients regarding related copyright issues. He also represents clients in international arbitrations to resolve disputes related to domain names.

During law school he spent a summer studying international commercial law at the University of Hong Kong. While studying in Hong Kong, he gained broad exposure to Hong Kong's legal system through an internship with a local law firm.
