STATUTES, RULES AND REGULATIONS

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure

Rule 26(c).....1

Rule 56(f).....12

1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 This Court should reject Apple’s attempt to shield CEO Steve Jobs from providing 3 deposition testimony. Mr. Jobs has first-hand knowledge of matters directly at issue in this 4 monopolization case that cannot be gleaned from any other source. [REDACTED]

5 [REDACTED]
6 [REDACTED]
7 Apple does not come close to meeting its heavy burden of showing “good cause” for a 8 protective order under Rule 26(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.¹ A high-level corporate 9 officer may be shielded from deposition only where “the officer has no first hand knowledge of the 10 facts of the case or where the officer’s testimony would be repetitive.” Google Inc. v. Am. Blind &
11 Wallpaper Factory, Inc., No. C 03-5340 JF(RS), 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 67284, at *10
12 n.3 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 6, 2006) (allowing deposition of Google founder where testimony revealed 13 founder may have been involved in policy change at issue). Broad allegations of harm, 14 unsubstantiated by specific examples or articulated reasoning, do not satisfy Rule 26(c). Kennedy v.
15 Jackson Nat’l Life Ins. Co., No. C 07-0371 CW (MEJ), 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47866, at *3 (N.D.
16 Cal. Apr. 22, 2010); Beckman Indus., Inc. v. Int’l Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 470, 476 (9th Cir. 1992). “A
17 court should not prohibit a relevant deposition ‘absent extraordinary circumstances’ because such a 18 prohibition would ‘likely be in error.’” Lexington Ins. Co. v. Sentry Select Ins. Co., No. 1:08-cv-19 1539 LJO GSA, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 122184, at *8 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 17, 2009) (quoting Salter v.
20 Upjohn Co., 593 F.2d 649, 651 (5th Cir. 1979)). Here, Plaintiffs can readily demonstrate that Mr.
21 Jobs possesses unique knowledge of critical issues and that such testimony will not be repetitive.

22 Apple has utterly failed to support its motion with specific examples of how a deposition of 23 Mr. Jobs would constitute undue hardship, or provide any support for its contention that Mr. Jobs
24 has no unique knowledge of relevant issues. Contrary to established precedent, Apple has also failed
25 to provide an affidavit from Mr. Jobs showing he has no unique first-hand knowledge of matters

26 _____
27 ¹ Unless otherwise noted, citations are omitted and emphasis is added.

1 relevant to the issues in the case. This failure strongly counsels against granting Apple’s motion.
2 See Zamora v. D’Arrigo Bros. Co. of Cal., No. C 04-00047 JW (HRL), 2007 WL 806518, at *6
3 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007) (protective order denied where defendant failed to submit an affidavit
4 swearing that the individual to be deposed did not have the information sought); Lexington, 2009
5 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 122184 (protective order denied where no affidavit submitted and potential 6 deponents possessed relevant personal knowledge).

7 For the reasons set forth below, this Court should deny Apple Inc.’s Motion for a Protective 8 Order Preventing the Deposition of Steve Jobs (Dkt. No. 396) and permit Plaintiffs to depose Mr.
9 Jobs.

10 II. BACKGROUND

11 Plaintiffs are iPod purchasers who allege that Apple unlawfully maintained its dual 12 monopolies in the markets for portable digital media players and digital audio downloads by using 13 pretextual software and firmware updates that were intended to, and had the effect of, excluding 14 competitors from the markets. Dkt. No. 322 (Amended Consolidated Complaint for Violations of 15 Sherman Antitrust Act, Clayton Act, Cartwright Act, California Unfair Competition Law, 16 Consumers Legal Remedies Act, and California Common Law of Monopolization). As a result, 17 Apple has been able to maintain its monopolies longer than would otherwise have been possible, and 18 has been able to charge supracompetitive prices for iPods. Id., ¶¶81-84, 88. Plaintiffs allege that 19 when Apple launched its online digital audio downloads store (now called the iTunes Store) in 2003, 20 it decided to use a proprietary Digital Rights Management (“DRM”) system called FairPlay – rather 21 than other, widely-used open systems – in order to lock iTunes Store customers into using the iPod.
22 Id., ¶¶38-52. As a result, until recently, digital audio downloads purchased from other internet sites
23 (such as Amazon.com or Walmart.com) could not play directly on an iPod. Id., ¶¶68-72. Similarly,
24 songs purchased from the iTunes Store could not play directly on any portable digital media player
25 other than the iPod. Id.

26
27
28

1 competitors) that songs purchased from RealNetworks would likely stop playing on iPods in the 2 future because Apple intended to update its software and firmware. Dkt. No. 322, ¶59; see also
3 Ex. 1 (Apple_AIIA00090405-07); Ex. 4 (Apple_AIIA00093875-76); Ex. 5 (Apple Accuses 4 RealNetworks of Hacking).

5 True to its word, beginning with the release of iTunes version 4.7 in October 2004, Apple's
6 updates to the iPod and iTunes software and firmware prevented songs downloaded from 7 RealNetworks' music store from being played on iPods. Dkt. No. 322, ¶60. As a result, Apple was 8 able to maintain its dual monopolies in the portable digital media player and digital audio download 9 markets, and thereby maintain its supracompetitive pricing of the iPod, until at least March 31, 2009.
10 Id., ¶¶62, 67-72.

11 Apple argues that it broke Harmony's interoperability with the iPod not because of any 12 anticompetitive intent, but rather because its contractual obligations with the recording labels
13 required it to issue firmware and software updates periodically to thwart music piracy. Breaking 14 Harmony, according to Apple, was merely a side effect of these necessary updates. Dkt. No. 325, 15 329 (Apple's Motion to Dismiss or, Alternatively, for Summary Judgment).

16 However, discovery to date demonstrates that Apple issued unnecessary and non-improving
17 iTunes and iPod software and firmware updates for the purpose of excluding RealNetworks and 18 other potential rivals, and that Apple's asserted justifications for these updates are pretextual. As the 19 principal case Apple relies on makes clear, a monopolist that modifies its product in a manner that 20 excludes competitors is afforded deference under Section 2 of the Sherman Act only if that product
21 design change provides an added benefit to consumers or is otherwise supported by procompetitive
22 justifications. Allied Orthopedic Appliances Inc. v. Tyco Health Care Group LP, 592 F.3d 991, 998-
23 99 (9th Cir. 2010) ("changes in product design are not immune from antitrust scrutiny and in certain 24 cases may constitute an unlawful means of maintaining a monopoly under Section 2"). [REDACTED]

25 [REDACTED]
26 [REDACTED]
27 [REDACTED]
28 [REDACTED] See Ex. 1 (Apple_AIIA00090405).

1 Plaintiffs can prevail on their Section 2 claims against Apple if they can prove – as supported
2 by discovery to date – that Apple’s asserted procompetitive justifications for the updates that 3 disabled Harmony are pretextual. See Image Tech. Servs., Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 125 F.3d
4 1195, 1212 (9th Cir. 1997) (“A plaintiff may rebut an asserted business justification by 5 demonstrating either that the justification does not legitimately promote competition or that the 6 justification is pretextual.”). As Judge Ware found in his order denying Apple’s motion for 7 summary judgment on Plaintiffs’ Section 2 claims, “the temporal proximity between RealNetwork’s
8 announcement of its iPod-compatible Harmony technology in July 2004 and the release of iTunes
9 4.7, which ended that compatibility, in October 2004 raises questions about the real purpose of 10 Defendant’s software redesign that Plaintiffs should at least have an opportunity to explore through 11 additional discovery.” Dkt. No. 377 at 12-13. Plaintiffs are therefore entitled to probe key
12 witnesses’ understanding of, and asserted justifications for, issuing the updates that disabled
13 Harmony. Image Tech., 125 F.3d at 1219 (“Evidence regarding the state of mind of [defendant’s]
14 employees may show pretext, when such evidence suggests that the proffered business justification 15 played no part in the decision to act.”).

16 III. ARGUMENT

17 A. [REDACTED]

18 Apple’s documents and witnesses demonstrate that Mr. Jobs was centrally involved in the 19 principal issues in this case.³ [REDACTED]

21 [REDACTED]

25 ³ While other witnesses may also testify about some of the emails and statements that will be 26 the subject of Mr. Jobs’ examination, “[t]he mere fact . . . that other witnesses may be able to testify
27 as to what occurred at a particular time or place does not mean that a high-level corporate officer’s 28 testimony would be ‘repetitive.’ Indeed, it is not uncommon for different witnesses to an event to have differing recollections of what occurred.” First Nat’l Mortg. Co. v. Fed. Realty Inv. Trust, No.
C 03-02013 RMW (RS), 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 88625, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 19, 2007).

We are stunned that Real has adopted the tactics and ethics of a hacker to break into the iPod, and we are investigating the implications of their actions under the DMCA and other laws. B. Depositions of High-Level Executives Are Routinely Granted Where the Executives Have Unique, Personal Knowledge

Apple claims depositions of a corporation’s top executive are rarely allowed. This is not true. While cognizant of the potential for “abuse or harassment” of top executives, the overwhelming weight of authority holds that where, as here, an executive has personal knowledge regarding the litigation not readily obtainable from other sources, a protective order will not issue. “[W]hen a witness has personal knowledge of facts relevant to the lawsuit, even a corporate president or CEO is subject to deposition.” WebSideStory, Inc. v. NetRatings, Inc., No. 06cv0408 WQH (AJB), 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20481, at *7 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 22, 2007).⁵

The Ninth Circuit’s seminal decision in Blankenship v. Hearst Co., 519 F.2d 418 (9th Cir. 1975), is directly on point. In that case, the Ninth Circuit held that the district court erred when it denied plaintiffs’ bid to depose George Hearst, publisher of the Los Angeles Herald Tribune. According to the defendants, Mr. Hearst would not have information relevant to plaintiff’s antitrust claims that plaintiff could not learn from other sources. Id. at 429. The Ninth Circuit rejected that argument. As the Court recognized, “[u]nder the liberal discovery principles of the Federal Rules defendants were required to carry a heavy burden of showing why discovery was denied.” Id. The defendants’ assertion that Mr. Hearst had no information unavailable elsewhere, countered by plaintiff’s suggestions regarding evidence he might know, was insufficient to satisfy that burden. Id. The Ninth Circuit ordered that the deposition proceed.

⁵ Celerity, Inc. v. Ultra Clean Holding, Inc., No. C 05-4374 MMC (JL), 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8295 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 25, 2007), relied on by Apple, is unavailing. In that case, the court granted the motion for a protective order pending other methods of discovery and held that the defendant could renew the motion should those other means of discovery prove inadequate. Id. at *15. Critically, in that case, there was no evidence of documents written by the executives dealing with matters central to the litigation. Instead there were allegations only that the executive “participated” in an acquisition of another company and that the executive had been at the company for some length of time and would therefore have knowledge regarding sales of products. This is a far cry from the detailed and specific evidence of Mr. Jobs unique and relevant first-hand knowledge set forth in this brief.

1 Following Blankenship, district courts within this District have regularly denied motions to 2 prevent the depositions of high-ranking officers with relevant knowledge. Indeed, Mr. Jobs was 3 deposed in another Section 2 case in this District, despite Apple's unsuccessful motion for a 4 protective order. In PT Technologies v. Apple Computer, No. 98-cv-01804 (N.D. Cal.), United 5 States Magistrate Judge Maria-Elena James denied Apple's motion for a protective order even 6 though Mr. Jobs submitted a declaration attesting that he was not "the most knowledgeable" about 7 the licensing program at issue. Ex. 12 (PT Technologies, Order Denying Defendant Apple's Motion
8 for a Protective Order, dated December 7, 2000) at 2. The Court found "Defendant Apple has not 9 established that Steve Jobs does not have unique and highly relevant information to the claims at 10 bar." Id. The PT Technologies court further found the burden on Mr. Jobs did not outweigh the 11 need for his deposition and that written questions would not provide Plaintiffs with the opportunity 12 to assess Mr. Jobs testimony as a percipient witness. Id.

13 In PT Technologies, plaintiffs had far less evidence tying Mr. Jobs to the challenged conduct 14 than Plaintiffs do here, relying on testimony about Mr. Jobs' role in the licensing program at issue.
15 Id. [REDACTED]

19 District courts regularly deny motions to protect corporate heads from depositions where 20 those individuals have personal knowledge of issues relevant to the case. DR Sys. v. Eastman Kodak
21 Co., No. 08cv699-H (BLM), 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83755, at *8 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 14, 2009)
22 (protective order denied where corporate executive had some personal knowledge of topics relevant 23 to claims and defenses at issue); First Nat'l Mortg. Co., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 88625, at *7 (where 24 executive may have "at least some relevant personal knowledge," the protective order was denied);
25 First United Methodist Church of San Jose v. Atl. Mut. Ins. Co., No. C-95-2243 DLJ, 1995 U.S.
26 Dist. LEXIS 22469, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 19, 1995) (granting motion to compel deposition of 27 company president, holding, "where a corporate officer has first hand-knowledge of important, 28 relevant, and material facts in the case the deposition should be allowed"); Detoy v. City & County of

1 San Francisco, 196 F.R.D. 362 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (San Francisco Chief of Police ordered to sit for

3 Courts in other circuits reach the same conclusion when the person to be deposed has 4 personal knowledge relevant to the lawsuit. See Ex. 13 (In re Payment Card Interchange Fee and
5 Merchant Discount Antitrust Litigation, No. 1:05-md-1720-JG-JO, Order Denying Motion for 6 Protective Order (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 16, 2008) (denying protective order precluding the deposition of JP
7 Morgan Chase & Co. Chairman and CEO James L. Dimon)); Six W. Retail Acquisition, Inc. v. Sony
8 Theatre Mgmt. Corp., 203 F.R.D. 98, 104 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (CEO deposed in antitrust case where he 9 participated in meetings and there was ample evidence of the CEO's "hands-on involvement in 10 various aspects" of the conduct at issue in the case); Naftchi v. New York Univ. Med. Ctr., 172
11 F.R.D. 130 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (ordering president of NYU medical center to appear for deposition 12 since he had personal knowledge).

13 Apple's cases are unpersuasive and actually support Plaintiffs' position. In Serrano v. Cintas
14 Corp., No. 04-40132, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 57624 (E.D. Mich. June 10, 2010), the CEO submitted
15 a sworn declaration stating that he had no knowledge regarding many of the issues in the litigation.
16 Id. at *9. Of course, no such declaration could be submitted by Mr. Jobs here because the record
17 plainly demonstrates he has first-hand knowledge regarding matters central to Plaintiffs' case.
18 Moreover, in that out-of-circuit case, the only purported knowledge the CEO possessed was based 19 on excerpts from a speech at an annual meeting. Id. at *10. [REDACTED]

25 ⁶ Cardenas v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., No. 99-1421 (JRT/FLN), 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
26 9510 (D. Minn. May 16, 2003), also relied on by Apple, fares no better. That case from the Eighth
27 Circuit merely stands for the proposition that where it has not been shown that the senior executive 28 has any unique knowledge or where the "same information" can be obtained through less intrusive means, a deposition of a senior executive may be restricted. Here, Plaintiffs have demonstrated Mr.
Jobs possesses relevant unique information and that this information is not available via other means.

1 C. Plaintiffs' Deposition Notice Was Timely

2 This Court should reject Apple's suggestion that Plaintiffs unduly delayed in their request to 3 depose CEO Jobs, as any delay is due solely to Apple's delinquencies. Even though this case has 4 been pending since 2005, Apple has only recently began producing documents relevant to the merits
5 of Plaintiffs' claims.⁷ In the last four weeks, Apple has produced more than 1 million pages of 6 documents in response to Plaintiffs' long-standing discovery requests, most dating back to May 7 2009. Bernay Decl., ¶14. [REDACTED]

8 [REDACTED]

9 Plaintiffs informed Apple on November 3, 2010 that it intended to depose Mr. Jobs, and met 10 and conferred with Apple in telephone conferences on November 5 and November 9, and in 11 correspondence on November 12 and 16. Bernay Decl., ¶¶2-6. Plaintiffs originally noticed the 12 deposition for November 30, 2010, but agreed to take that date off calendar to permit further meet 13 and confer discussions on the issue. Ex. 14 (Plaintiffs' Notice of Deposition of Steve Jobs, dated 14 November 9, 2010). Plaintiffs re-noticed the deposition for the last day of discovery to ensure 15 defendant Apple would have enough time to prepare Mr. Jobs and to clear his schedule. Ex. 15 16 (Plaintiffs' Amended Notice of Deposition of Steve Jobs, dated November 24, 2010). Plaintiffs also 17 wanted to ensure that other depositions of lower-level executives would occur prior to Mr. Jobs'
18 deposition in an effort to guard against unnecessarily repetitive testimony from Mr. Jobs.

19 _____

20 Gutescu v. Carey Int'l, Inc., No. 01-4026-CIV-MARTINEZ/SIMONTON, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
21 27502 (S.D. Fla. June 24, 2003), is similarly unavailing. That case from Florida stands for the 22 proposition that where the corporate executive has no unique, superior or first-hand knowledge, a 23 motion to compel may be denied. In Gutescu there was no indication that the executive had any 24 knowledge regarding plaintiff's claim, let alone unique, superior or first-hand knowledge. See also
25 Porter v. Eli Lilly and Co., No. 1:06-cv-1297-JOF, 2007 WL 1630697 (N.D. Ga. June 1, 2007)
26 (declining to order deposition where plaintiffs made no effort to explain the executive's personal 27 knowledge or inability to get the information via other means).

28 ⁷ Initially, Apple was obligated by the Court's Order only to respond to discovery requests pertaining to class certification. Dkt. No. 128 (Order Re Plaintiffs' Motion for Administrative Relief). Even after that bifurcation order was lifted, Apple continued to delay, insisting that it was not obligated to respond to discovery until its pending motion to dismiss or for summary judgment was decided. See Dkt. No. 347 (Declaration of Paula M. Roach Pursuant to Rule 56(f) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in Support of Plaintiffs' Opposition to Apple's Motion to Dismiss or Alternatively, for Summary Judgment), ¶¶9-15.

1 During meet and confer negotiations, Plaintiffs explained that Mr. Jobs has unique personal
2 knowledge regarding issues at the heart of Plaintiffs' case and explained that he drafted a number of 3 documents produced by Apple that are relevant to the claims in the case. Bernay Decl., ¶¶4, 6, 4 10, 12.

5 [REDACTED]
6 [REDACTED]
7 [REDACTED]
8 [REDACTED] Ex. 6 (Robbin Tr. at 115:4-116:7, 176:7-177:15); Ex. 7 (Cue 9 Tr. at 19:14-22, 20:4-21:1, 37:21-39:22, 49:13-51:15, 125:1-24).

10 IV. CONCLUSION

11 As Apple's own authority recognizes, Mr. Jobs' "prestigious position is an unimpressive 12 paper barrier shielding him from the judicial process." Mulvey v. Chrysler Corp., 106 F.R.D. 364,
13 366 (D.R.I. 1985). Because Mr. Jobs possesses relevant first-hand information about issues critical 14 to this case that is unavailable from other sources, defendant's motion for a protective order must be 15 denied.
