CASE NO. C 05-4188 RMW (RS)
 REPLY BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL NOTICE

1 Plaintiffs Video Software Dealers Association and Entertainment Software Association
2 respectfully submit this reply memorandum in support of their request for judicial notice.

3 In this challenge to the constitutionality of a recently enacted California law restricting 4 protected expression, the State bears the burden of demonstrating that the law serves a legitimate and 5 compelling state interest in the least restrictive possible way. Factual claims underlying such a 6 showing must be supported by “reasonable inferences based on substantial evidence.” Turner
7 Broadcasting System, Inc., v. FCC, 522 U.S. 622, 666 (1994). In an attempt to satisfy that burden, 8 the State Defendants have attached to their opposition to Plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary 9 injunction five volumes of appendices containing studies presented to by the Legislature in drafting 10 the Act. They apparently are asking this Court to review these studies and draw conclusions about 11 the supposed societal benefits produced by the censorship at issue here.

12 The State Defendants now argue that Plaintiffs do not have the right to present their own 13 evidence, including official court transcripts of expert testimony and sworn expert declarations filed
14 in court, which calls into serious question the research relied upon by the Legislature. The State 15 Defendants, however, cannot bar contrary evidence while touting their own, particularly in the 16 context of a motion for preliminary relief. Consideration of Plaintiffs’ responsive submissions 17 therefore is proper.

18 Defendants suggest that Plaintiffs are limited to citing the studies in the legislative record, 19 Defs.’ Opp. at 6, but that argument entirely misses the point. The State bears the burden of proving 20 to this Court, based on “substantial evidence” as Supreme Court required in Turner, 522 U.S. at 666, 21 that the Act serves a compelling interest in a narrowly tailored manner. As Plaintiffs have explained 22 in their briefs on their motion for a preliminary injunction, the State cannot meet its burden because 23 the Legislature relied on studies that prove very little and ignored a significant body of research that 24 contradicts the studies reviewed by the Legislature. Accordingly, in support of their argument that 25 they are likely to prevail on their constitutional claims, Plaintiffs’ reply brief referenced research that 26 contradicts the studies cited by the State Defendants, and attached a court decision, official court
27 transcripts, and expert declarations filed in court, all of which call into serious question the research
28 relied upon by the Legislature. These materials primarily arose out of a case before the U.S. District

1 Court for the Northern District of Illinois that considered the very same body of research at issue
2 here, and resulted in the invalidation of an essentially identical law on December 2, 2005.

3 These materials should be considered by the Court in deciding whether Plaintiffs have a 4 probability of success on the merits. Evidence of studies ignored by the Legislature is no more
5 hearsay than the body of research cited by the State in its attempt to satisfy its burden.<sup>1</sup> The State’s 6 position would bizarrely limit the substantial evidence inquiry to only that evidence that the 7 Legislature actually considered. That position gives the Court no ability whatsoever to determine 8 whether the Legislature’s body of evidence is truly substantial or, as is the case here, flawed and 9 unrepresentative.

10 In sum, the State Defendants have submitted evidence intended to persuade this Court as a 11 preliminary matter that the Act is based upon substantial evidence. Plaintiffs are entitled to submit 12 their own evidence showing that, “far from drawing ‘reasonable inferences based on substantial 13 evidence,’” as Turner requires, “the Legislature looked at a one-sided subset of scientific research, 14 and even that biased research does not support the Legislature’s sweeping claims about the harm
15 caused by ‘violent’ video games.” Plaintiffs’ Reply at 4. Plaintiffs therefore respectfully ask that this

25 <sup>1</sup> In any event, in the context of a preliminary injunction motion, it is entirely proper for the Court 26 to consider each side’s submissions of relevant materials, regardless of whether they can be 27 characterized as hearsay. E.g., Rosen Entertainment Systems, LP v. Eiger Vision, 343 F.Supp.2d 28 908, 912 (C.D. Cal. 2004) (considering various declarations on ground that “[s]ustaining objections to evidence in opposition to a preliminary injunction would attenuate the ability of the court to determine likelihood of success on the merits before a trial on the merits can take place.”); Flynt Distributing Co., Inc., v. Harvey, 734 F.2d 1389, 1394 (9th Cir. 1984).

1 Court take notice not just of the State Defendants' submitted materials, but Plaintiffs' materials as 2 well.

3 Respectfully submitted.
