

1 on procedural grounds has two components, one directed at the underlying 2 constitutional claims and one directed at the district court's procedural holding.” Id.
3 at 484-85. “When the district court denies a habeas petition on procedural grounds
4 without reaching the prisoner's underlying constitutional claim, a COA should issue
5 when the prisoner shows, at least, that jurists of reason would find it debatable 6 whether the petition states a valid claim of the denial of a constitutional right and 7 that jurists of reason would find it debatable whether the district court was correct in 8 its procedural ruling.” Id. at 484. As each of these components is a “threshold 9 inquiry,” the federal court “may find that it can dispose of the application in a fair 10 and prompt manner if it proceeds first to resolve the issue whose answer is more 11 apparent from the record and arguments.” Id. at 485. Supreme Court jurisprudence 12 “allows and encourages” federal courts to first resolve the procedural issue, as was 13 done here. See id.

14 The petition was dismissed because the statute of limitations deadline was 15 November 9, 2005, this petition was not filed until March 22, 2006, and petitioner’s 16 only argument for not dismissing, that circumstances warrant equitable tolling to 17 save the petition from being untimely, was unavailing. Because jurists of reason 18 would not find this conclusion debatable or wrong, the request for a certificate of 19 appealability (Docket No. 19) is DENIED.

20 The clerk shall transmit the file, including a copy of this order, to the Court of 21 Appeals. See Fed. R.App.P. 22(b); United States v. Asrar, 116 F.3d 1268, 1270 (9th 22 Cir. 1997). Petitioner may then ask the Court of Appeals to issue the certificate, see 23 R.App.P. 22(b)(1), or if he does not, the notice of appeal will be construed as such a 24 request, see R.App.P. 22( b)(2).
