

EXHIBIT H

>
>At 10:53 AM 11/4/02 -0500, you wrote: > >Dear Carol,
> >When I came in this morning from Princeton, my colleague John > >Glusman, our editor in chief, reported to me and to Jonathan Galassi a > >conversation he had had with Stephen Joyce, who telephoned this morning > to > > speak to Jonathan, who had not yet arrived. In Jonathan's absence and > mine,

RE Stephen Joyce fyi2.txt

> >John found himself at the receiving end of about twenty minutes' worth of > >Joyce explaining that he had heard about your book, that he was adamantly > >opposed to having any Joyce material, especially from Joyce's letters, used > >to discuss Lucia in public, et cetera. He professed admiration for FSG and > >for Jonathan Galassi but wanted his opposition and distress about the idea > >of a book about his aunt fully registered. He said he absolutely wasn't > >threatening, but he wanted us to know that he'd never lost a law suit. He > >said he was going to fax copies of all his correspondence with you to us, >so > >that we could see the whole paper trail of his communications with you.
He > >said something about your having been in touch with the wrong lawyer for >the > >Joyce estate. He was not coherent and it was difficult to grasp some of >his > >details. He went off on tangents. He said he was doing all this especially > >on behalf of his wife, who is particularly upset... John replied > >noncommittally, and Jonathan does not intend to return Joyce's call, > >although Joyce may of course try to reach him again.
> > Our lawyer, Leon Friedman, doesn't yet have your text, because I >am > >waiting to get the manuscript back from copyediting so that I can make a > >legible xerox to send to him. I will do so as soon as I can. Meanwhile I >am > >sending Leon by messenger today all your backup material about your use of > >quoted material, with which he can become acquainted in the interim.
> > All this is simply fyi.
> > all the best,
> > Elisabeth