INSTRUCTIONS TO CONTRIBUTORS

Editorial Policy

It has been our editorial policy since our first issue in 1980 to publish occasional articles, book reviews, illustrations and short news items relating to the works of James Joyce. The majority of our book reviews are commissioned by the editors but we are prepared to consider unsolicited material and suggestions. Review copies of books from publishers, illustrations, advance publicity or news reports of conferences, lectures, film, theatre and artistic events, brief letters and other material relating to Joyce continue to be especially welcome.

Notes for Reviewers

The normal length for reviews of single books is 800 words. Main articles are usually of around 2,000 words.
Reviews are due in by the following deadlines:

*1st December for publication in the February issue
1st April for publication in the June issue
1st August for publication in the October issue*

Please send your contribution in hard copy on disc and/or as a Word Document. It is especially important to include at the head of your review full information about the book you are reviewing . This should be included on the slip provided or else typed clearly at the top of your review in the following form:

Author's name	Book Title
Place	Publisher Date
Pages	ISBN (cloth) (paper)

Please contact the publisher of the book you are reviewing if your information on the book is incomplete. At the end of your review you should type your name in the exact form you would like it to appear in the Broadsheet and a brief note stating your present academic affiliation and/or a recent or forthcoming publication as appropriate. Text received is normally edited to conform to house style and length. We use single inverted commas for speech and quotation. We do not use footnotes or endnotes for scholarly citation but brief parenthetical citations are usable in certain cases. If in doubt about any matters of presentation please consult a recent copy of the Broadsheet. Reviewers would normally be supplied with a review copy of the book on which they are writing which they may keep. Contributors receive a publisher's proof of their contribution immediately prior to publication and three copies of the Broadsheet in which their review appears.

European Joyce Studies

European Joyce Studies

ISSN 0923-9855

General Editor: Fritz Senn

Associate Editor: Christine van Boheemen

No other modernist writer in English has attracted more or broader international attention than James Joyce. Translations, adaptations, and imitations as well as works of criticism are being published in increasing numbers and frequency, and show a proliferating diversity of approaches and perspectives on the work, life, and influence of Joyce.

In view of the internationalism of Joyce studies, and the current dissemination of literary-critical pluralism, this new series hopes to offer a platform for specifically "European" perspectives on Joyce's works, their adaptations, annotation, and translation, studies in biography, the history of and current debates in Joyce criticism, Joyce's place in literary history, matters of influence and the transmission of ideas etc.

In calling this series "European" in the broadest sense, we aim at soliciting not only the submission of articles by European contributors, but more generally all essays and research focusing on issues of European concern such as language, nationality and culture, literary-historical movements, ideology, politics, and distribution, as well as literary-critical perspectives which have European roots such as Freudian and Lacanian psychoanalysis, structuralism, poststructuralism, non-essentialist feminist approaches, and reader-oriented perspectives on the text.

Contributions in the form of thematic volumes are invited and should be submitted to the general editor:

NOTES & ARTICLES

The purpose of this refereed medium is to create a forum for genetic Joyce criticism. In the section Notes & Articles researchers can give notice of their genetic discoveries, new insights, and critical analyses of Joyce's working method.

TOOLS & QUERIES

This section offers a set of research tools that may be of use for genetic investigations (lists of books ordered by James Joyce, a bibliography of genetic Joyce research, chronological surveys of prepublications, etc.). This cooperative site is also a forum for queries: for instance, the editors of The "Finnegans Wake" Notebooks at Buffalo give notice of unsolved enigmas concerning the sources of specific entries. Any help is welcome and will be acknowledged in the edition.

LOST & FOUND

Transmisional departures, variants or dead ends in the writing process tend to disappear in the mass of manuscripts. Thanks to genetic research, isolated lost words are rediscovered occasionally by different researchers. Our Lost & Found section is designed to collect these textual items, accompanied by short textual notes concerning the circumstances of their disappearance.

Genetic Joyce Studies will be updated twice a year.

If you would like to be informed about updates, please contact the editor.

Feedback and suggestions are always welcome.

Hypermedia Joyce Studies was founded in 1994 as a refereed journal of on the works of James Joyce. HJS publishes all its articles electronically on the Web and its form of publication makes it different from and a complement to Joyce scholarship.

Hypermedia Joyce Studies was founded in 1994 as a refereed journal of on the works of James Joyce, and was initiated by Rob Callahan & Louis Aragon. The editorial board also included Alan Roughley and Julian Croft. The first issue was published in December 1995, to coincide with the MLA convention in Chicago and a panel organized by Margot Norris, on 'Theorising Knowledge in Joyce: Intertextual, Encyclopedic and Hypertextual Approaches'. This panel included papers by, among others, Michael Groden & Louis Aragon. In June of the same year, Brown University had hosted the by-annual New England Conference on the Teaching of English, convened by Robert Scholes. Daniel Ferrer gave a keynote speech on hypertext & textual genetics, along with a presentation that involved me and Louis Aragon. The Brown conference was also the occasion of the first panel discussion on hypertext, chaired by Morris Beja, & involving Louis Armand, Jim LeBlanc, and others. Many future hypertext projects were discussed during the Brown conference, which was very much part of a larger impetus in the direction of engaging with hypertext."

The first edition of HJS featured work by Thomas Jackson Rice, Donald Pease, Fritz Senn, Derek Attridge, Michael Dittmore, Alan Roughley and Louis Aragon.

Library Opening Hours

The Foundation's official opening hours are from 10 to 5 p.m. from Monday to Friday and by appointment.

Library Holdings

Books

The core of the Foundation is a library of more than five thousand volumes. It contains Joyce's works in various editions, among them some first editions, or illustrated editions and some collectors' items. The author's numerous notes, drafts, corrections, proof sheets and revisions of nearly all his works are available in facsimile volumes. There are dozens of translations into more than forty languages (including Korean, Japanese, Georgian, and Malayalam) and, of course, an extensive body of secondary literature: bibliographies, biographies, monographs, comments, thematic and comparative studies. Moreover, the Foundation offers a large store of background literature: reference books, information on Ireland, Catholicism, mythology, general literary history, literary theory -- whatever is useful in research and furthers a better understanding of Joyce's work. There are also dissertations, studies, essays, in typescript or on microfilm.

Of particular interest: Thom's Dublin Directory of 1904, an original copy of "The Day of the Rabblement".

Journals

The Foundation has a complete set of some out-of-print Joyce publications (James Joyce Review, A Wake Newsletter) and subscribes to all the current ones: James Joyce Quarterly, James Joyce Broadsheet, James Joyce Literary Supplement, A Finnegans Wake Circular, European Joyce Studies, Irish Literary Supplement, Joyce Studies Annual and Joyce-related single issues of journals, magazines, typewritten and off-prints. In recent years a number of theses and dissertations have been donated to the Foundation.

Ideally we would like to stock everything related to Joyce and are eagerly looking for ALL kinds of Joyceania. We are grateful to authors who send us their work and we like to be notified of all pertinent publications.

Audio /Video

The collection of records, cassettes and CDs consists of various readings of Joyce's works, including his own reading from the "Aeolus" episode and from "Anna Livia Plurabelle", the centenary production of Radio Telefis Eireann of Ulysses and a complete German reading of Ulysses, as well as readings from Dubliners, A Portrait of the Artist and Finnegans Wake, and numerous performances of Molly's soliloquy in English and German. The audio collection also includes recordings of Joyce-related music: arias, Irish songs, and music hall. Apart from the librettos and song books, the music section holds scores of settings of Chamber Music and Pomes Penyeach, as well as some original settings like Stephen Chmura.

The video collection includes John Huston's The Dead, Joseph Strick's Ulysses and A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, Mary Ellen Bute's Finnegans Wake, The Abbey Theatre Company's production of Exiles, Werner Nekes' Ulysses, and many other plays and televised programmes about James Joyce.

Autographs

The Foundation has a modest collection of autographs which includes about 50 letters and postcards written by Joyce as well as letters from friends and acquaintances, the great majority of which come from the bequest of Carola Giedion-Welcker. One small slip of paper has the original draft of what became a few sentences in Finnegans Wake (244.35-245.3).

Art Work

The Foundation has portraits of Joyce by Frank Budgen, Horst Janssen, Wilhelm Gimmi, Louis le Brocq, Tullio Pericoli, Lawrence Lee and others. There are also drawings and illustrations of the works by Paul Flora, Rudolf Mumprecht, Robert Motherwell, Henri Matisse, Louis le Brocq, Wilhelm Föckersperger, and Aldo Bachmayer.

The Foundation holds photographs of Joyce by Gisèle Freund as well as those of Joyce in Zurich in 1938 taken by Carola Giedion-Welcker. There is also a substantial collection of Joycean caricatures.

The Lawrence collection is the largest collection of photographs documenting Ireland from the late 19th century. The Foundation has acquired a number of prints from the original glass plates held at the National Library of Ireland which document Joycean locations in Dublin.

There is furthermore a large and growing photograph collection of Joyceans and Joyce events, both within the Foundation and from various Joyce conferences.

Photographic and other material is available to publishers, museums, etc. (please inquire about fees).

The Death Mask

One of the four original death masks (from the Carola Giedion-Welcker bequest) resides in the archive, as well as some personal effects such as a suitcase and walking sticks.

Kcalia

Artifacts relating to Joyce include a Jacob's biscuit tin, jars of Plumtree's Potted Meat (empty), vanishing cakes of lemon soap, a few items of contemporary clothing, funeral habits and two moustache cups the likes of which Milly gave to Bloom. Some old newspapers of the turn of the century are complemented by facsimiles of the Freeman's Journal, The Irish Times and The Evening Telegraph of the 15th and 16th June 1904.

32

We also have more than 50 T-shirts from Joycean events around the world, including the International Joyce Symposia and Bloomsday events and other ephemera like programmes, playbills, buttons, board games, playing cards, medals and other souvenirs. And finally, a large collection of posters from Joyce conferences, symposia and exhibitions rounds off the collection.

New Acquisitions

Frank Budgen's papers have been given to the Zurich James Joyce Foundation. Among these papers are letters, drafts, and photos including 2 telegrams from Joyce, 2 letters from Joyce, 5 letters from Lucia, letters from Stuart Gilbert, Sylvia Beach, Jane Lidderdale, Harriet Weaver, Paul Léon, Ezra Pound, Ottocaro Weiss and others.
