19	On December 22, 2006, Plaintiff Hair Club For Men, LLC ("Hair Club") filed the instant
20	action against Defendants RCDC Corporation ("RCDC"), its principal Robert Clark ("Clark"),
21	and its former employee Silvia Herrera ("Herrera"), alleging claims for breach of contract,
22	misappropriation of trade secrets and unfair competition. On June 27, 2005, Hair Club, RCDC
23	and Clark entered into an Asset Purchase Agreement under which Hair Club purchased certain
24	assets from RCDC in connection with retail non-surgical hair restoration and replacement.
25	Among the purchased assets were certain client contracts and client lists. The purchase price
26	depended in part upon how many of RCDC's clients transferred their business to Hair Club in the
27	year following the inception of the	agreement. Amon	g other things, RCDC	and Clark agreed not to engage in the "Purchased Business" – i.e., the business of non-surgical hair restoration – 2 within twenty miles of any Hair Club establishment for a period of two years. The agreement 3 also was contingent upon two "key employees" of RCDC going to work for Hair Club. One of 4 these employees, Herrera, began working for Hair Club in June 2005. Herrera executed a non-5 disclosure, non-competition and non-solicitation agreement with Hair Club which provided that 6 in the event she left Hair Club she would not engage in the business of hair replacement within 7 ten miles of a Hair Club facility for a period of two years.

8 In November 2006, Herrera resigned from her position at Hair Club. A number of Hair 9 Club customers who had made appointments with Herrera subsequently cancelled their 10 appointments and stated that they would not be returning to Hair Club for services. Hair Club 11 asserts that Herrera's car has been seen outside RCDC's place of business on several occasions, and that three of Hair Club's former clients that had been serviced by Herrera have been seen at 12 13 RCDC's business premises. Hair Club asserts that Herrera and RCDC are violating their non-14 compete agreements and using Hair Club's proprietary information to service clients at the 15 RCDC facility.

16 Along with its complaint, Hair Club filed an application for a temporary restraining order 17 and a motion for preliminary injunction, seeking inter alia to enjoin RCDC from employing 18 Herrera; to enjoin RCDC, Clark and Herrera from servicing any of Hair Club's non-surgical hair 19 restoration clients; and to enjoin Herrera from engaging in the business of hair replacement or 20 hair restoration.

21 Defendants filed opposition on December 28, 2006, asserting that RCDC, Clark and 22 Herrera are entitled to provide services other than the non-surgical hair replacement services 23 covered by the agreements at issue, that such services include skincare and related services, and 24 that there is no evidence that the clients who were seen at RCDC's premises were there for 25 prohibited services rather than skincare or other services not prohibited by the parties' 26 agreements. Defendants also argue that the non-competition agreement entered into by Herrera 27 is unenforceable and that in any event she has not violated that agreement. Finally, Defendants assert that it is Hair Club that has breached the parties' agreements by failing to solicit business 2 from the client list purchased from RCDC until eight months after transfer of the list, thus 3 depressing the purchase price of the RCDC assets.

4 The standard for issuing a TRO is the same as that for issuing a preliminary injunction. 5 Brown Jordan International, Inc. v. Mind's Eve Interiors, Inc., 236 F. Supp.2d 1152, 1154 (D. Hawaii 2002); Lockheed Missile & Space Co., Inc. v. Hughes Aircraft Co., 887 F.Supp. 1320, 6 7 1323 (N.D. Cal. 1995). In the Ninth Circuit, a party seeking a preliminary injunction must show 8 either (1) a likelihood of success on the merits and the possibility of irreparable injury, or (2) the existence of serious questions going to the merits and the balance of hardships tipping in the movant's favor. Roe v. Anderson, 134 F.3d 1400, 1401-02 (9th Cir. 1998); Apple Computer, Inc. v. Formula Int'l, Inc., 725 F.2d 521, 523 (9th Cir. 1984). These formulations represent two points on a sliding scale in which the required degree of irreparable harm increases as the probability of success decreases. Roe, 134 F.3d at 1402.

Based upon the record currently before it, the Court concludes that Hair Club has not demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits. While Defendants did enter into various non-compete agreements, it is not clear from the evidence presently in the record that Defendants are violating those agreements. Moreover, Hair Club has not demonstrated that it will be irreparably injured if Defendants are permitted to continue operations pending a hearing on Hair Club's motion for preliminary injunction. Given that Hair Club is a much larger business than RCDC, the Court is not persuaded that the equities favor granting injunctive relief at this time. Because of the serious nature of Hair Club's allegations, however, the Court will set a hearing on Hair Club's motion for preliminary injunction so that it may hear argument for both sides before issuing a ruling based upon a more complete record.
