1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Facebook's motion contains at best a series of mischaracterizations, and at worst, outright 3 misrepresentations of events. To begin its story, Facebook relies on an interrogatory answer that 4 emanated from a vague question. Facebook contends the answer was deceptive. An examination of 5 the question and the response reveals that the response, which is the prime basis for Facebook's 6 motion, was appropriate. Facebook continues its story by quite surprisingly contending that the 7 parties who answered this interrogatory "recanted" it. This argument is amazing because Facebook 8 made this very pitch to the Massachusetts Court, where this so-called "recanted" testimony was 9 offered. However, the Massachusetts Court effectively rejected Facebook's claim that the 10 interrogatory response was inconsistent with this subsequent testimony. This finding should have 11 convinced Facebook that any claim for sanctions concerning these same events is unmeritorious.
12 Undaunted, Facebook repackages the failed argument in the Massachusetts Court into this motion 13 for sanctions.

14 Facebook stretches the truth and the events discussed below to an unacceptable level.
15 Neither the actual facts nor the law concerning sanctions, when the true facts are applied to this law, 16 would convince a reasonable party to even consider filing this motion. As demonstrated below, 17 Facebook miscites, misquotes and/or misconstrues Orders and testimony in this failing attempt to 18 support its sanction motion. It should be denied.

19 II. ARGUMENT

20 A. Facebook's Assertion that Either the Superior Court or the Massachusetts Court 21 Has Been Misled by Inconsistent Testimony has Already Been Rejected by the 22 Massachusetts Court

23 Facebook contends sanctions should be issued because of inconsistent positions taken 24 in this litigation as compared to the Massachusetts case. However, the issue of whether inconsistent 25 testimony was provided was already raised and decided against Facebook in the Massachusetts case.
26 Judge Collings looked at the very testimony and discovery responses Facebook here raises in support 27 of its motion. Judge Collings said, "it cannot be stated that the testimony is completely 28 contradictory." Mosko Decl. Exh. I at 24. From this finding alone, this motion must be denied.

1 The Massachusetts case in which ConnectU claims that Facebook principals stole the 2 concept and ideas behind what is now www.facebook.com was filed in September 2004. Mosko
3 Decl. Exh. II at ¶¶ 12-21. A year later, Facebook, then calling itself TheFacebook, Inc., filed a 4 retaliatory action in the Superior Court of California asserting that ConnectU and its principals
5 wrongfully downloaded information from its website. ConnectU's principals, Cameron Winklevoss, 6 Tyler Winklevoss, Howard Winklevoss and Divya Narendra filed a Motion to Quash because the 7 California Court could not exercise personal jurisdiction over them.

8 Facebook contended it could not oppose the Motion to Quash without taking 9 discovery.¹ Facebook then propounded 345 Interrogatories (the first set comprising 230 separate 10 interrogatories, the second set comprising 115), 120 Document Requests and 125 Requests for 11 Admission. Mosko Decl. Exh. VII. Facebook also noticed four individual depositions, and one 12 corporate deposition pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 2025.230 that included 14 separate 13 topics. Mosko Decl. Exh. VIII.

14 During the pendency of the Motion to Quash, Facebook was pursuing its own Motion
15 to Dismiss the Massachusetts case, alleging lack of complete diversity. It was apparent to ConnectU
16 and its principals that the underlying reason for much of Facebook's oppressive discovery requests 17 in the California action was to support its Motion to Dismiss. Indeed, the Superior Court rejected 18 well over half of the written discovery requests, limiting Facebook to three (3) out of fourteen (14)

21 ¹ Facebook mischaracterizes ConnectU's principals' initial opposition to this oppressive 22 discovery. In the motion for sanctions, Facebook claims "ConnectU resisted all discovery, forcing 23 Facebook to seek relief from the Superior Court on several occasions. Id. Exs., CC, DD, EE. The 24 California Court repeatedly sided with Facebook, and issued a number of orders granting motions to 25 compel discovery sought by Facebook." Moving Papers at 5. In truth, the Court record that 26 Facebook conveniently fails to attach or cite, demonstrates that the Court agreed with ConnectU's 27 contention that most of Facebook's requests were improper. Mosko Dec. Exh. III, IV & VI. Out of 28 the fourteen (14) topics Facebook sought to inquire in its alleged jurisdictional deposition, the Superior Court allowed just three (3). Mosko Decl. Exh. III. Santa Clara Superior Court
(Woodhouse, J) Order Dated January 6, 2006. Facebook contested defendants' answers to 84 Special Interrogatories and the court granted its motion to compel on only 18, ordering that defendants need not provide additional responses. Mosko Decl., Exh. IV. Santa Clara Superior Court (Kleinberg, J) Order Dated February 17, 2006. Additionally, Facebook moved to compel further responses to 155 Form Interrogatories and the court granted its motion on only 47, again ordering that defendants need not provide additional responses for the remainder. Mosko Decl. Exh.
VI. Santa Clara Superior Court (Manoukian, J) Order dated March 10, 2006.

1 deposition topics, and limiting each deposition to 2 ¾ hours, despite Facebook’s request that full day 2 depositions be allowed. See footnote 1.

3 Not surprising to ConnectU, much of the discovery that Facebook insisted upon 4 taking in the California action was used in the context of the Motion to Dismiss in Massachusetts.
5 Specifically, Divya Narendra’s membership in ConnectU, which case law quite clearly held to be 6 irrelevant in the Superior Court Motion to Quash, was of great interest to Facebook in the context of 7 its Motion to Dismiss. Much of the discovery in the California case concerned the timing of Mr.
8 Narendra’s membership in ConnectU. See e.g., Facebook’s citation to such discovery in its Moving 9 Papers at 6.

10 The interrogatory and its response that are the source of Facebook’s inconsistent 11 testimony argument in this motion was Number 14, which reads:

12 IDENTIFY current AND former directors, officers, employees, 13 AND agents of CONNECTU (including without limitation, 14 Members, Managers AND Board of Managers as defined in the 15 Limited Liability Company Operating Agreement of ConnectU, 16 LLC -- bates numbers C011285 through 011335), HARVARDCONNECTION, AND WINKLEVOSS
COMPANIES, including without limitation, dates in these positions, duties, job descriptions, authorities AND responsibilities. Mosko Decl. Exh. IX, at 8.

17 The amended response to this interrogatory that Facebook contends was inconsistent with testimony 18 later provided in the Massachusetts case reads in part:

19 Responding party incorporates his initial response and objections 20 herein to this amended response. In addition, Responding Party 21 responds as follows: Members of ConnectU include Cameron
22 Winklevoss, Tyler Winklevoss, Howard Winklevoss, and Divya 23 Narendra, as set forth in the Limited Liability Company Operating 24 Agreement recited in the Interrogatory (“Operating Agreement”) 25 and found at bates numbers C011285 through 011335. These 26 persons have all been members since ConnectU was formed . . .
27 Mosko Decl. Exh. X, at 5.

28 Facebook spent considerable time and effort cross examining the ConnectU witnesses in depositions noticed in the Massachusetts case and in hearings before Judge Collings about this California discovery response. Proving its lack of relevance in the California motion to quash proceeding, this interrogatory response was not even raised during depositions Facebook

1 insisted upon taking in the California action in its jurisdictional discovery efforts. Mosko Decl. Exh.
2 XI.

3 In the Massachusetts proceeding, Facebook tried to convince Judge Collings that 4 deposition testimony, subsequent declarations² and hearing testimony were so inconsistent with this 5 discovery response that ConnectU should be estopped from asserting such testimony or relying upon 6 it. However, Judge Collings issued an Order rejecting Facebook's claim that the discovery 7 responses in the California case judicially estopped ConnectU from further explaining its position.
8 Quite contrary to Facebook's inconsistency argument, Judge Collings found that Mr. Narendra's 9 subsequent declaration and testimony were not "completely contradictory" to this discovery 10 response. Mosko Decl. Exh. I, at 24.

11 As his Order provides, Judge Collings went through a detailed examination of the 12 response to Interrogatory No. 14, and the testimony which Facebook now contends should be the 13 basis for sanctions in this motion. Citing case law on judicial estoppel, Judge Collings stated in part 14 that if a court is to reject subsequent testimony based on an allegation that it is inconsistent with 15 earlier positions, "either the first court [has to have] been misled or the second court will be 16 misled..." Id at 9. Applying this standard, Judge Collings found no inconsistency, and therefore 17 rejected Facebook's judicial estoppel argument. Judge Collings effectively concluded that the 18 Superior Court was not misled by the asserted discovery responses, and that the Massachusetts Court 19 would not be misled by admitting ConnectU's subsequent declarations and testimony.

20 Moreover, Judge Collings accepted Narendra's testimony in his courtroom that 21 Narendra was not a ConnectU LLC member on September 2, 2004, even though the response to 22 Interrogatory No. 14, on which Facebook relied, said that he was. Mosko Decl. Exh. I, at 55. There

23
24 ² In the relevant portion of these declarations, Narendra reconciled any perceived 25 inconsistencies between his response to Interrogatory No. 14 and the statements made in the 26 Massachusetts action. See Mosko Decl. Exh. XII. Specifically, Narendra explained that prior to the 27 formation of ConnectU, he had accepted a job offer in New York City and expected to have very 28 little time to devote to ConnectU. Narendra stated that "[b]ecause of my job, I was unable to contribute time or effort to ConnectU on or about September 2, 2004. Id. At that time, I was uncertain what, if any, contributions I could make to ConnectU, monetary or otherwise, or whether I wanted to assume any of ConnectU LLC's potential liabilities." Id. Narendra further declared that
"[b]ecause our respective roles, contributions, and shares in the company were uncertain, I was not made a Member of ConnectU LLC until well after September 2, 2004." Id.

1 is no inconsistency because Narendra was not a member on September 2, 2004, as Judge Collings'
2 ruled, but by the time he provided the interrogatory response he had been made a member 3 retroactively to ConnectU LLC's April 6, 2004 formation, when he signed ConnectU's Operating 4 Agreement on August 5, 2005. See Section II. C, infra. Thus, when he signed the interrogatory 5 response, he was able to say that he was a member "since ConnectU was formed."

6 So, the essence of Facebook's argument here is that this Court should reject Judge 7 Collings findings and Order, and instead conclude that this alleged inconsistency between the 8 discovery responses and the subsequent Massachusetts Court testimony defrauded the Superior 9 Court and/or the Massachusetts Court, and was so egregious and so vexatious that sanctions should 10 issue. See Facebook's Moving Papers at p. 1 where it states "[sanctions should issue] due to 11 Defendants' and their counsel's deceptive actions related to averments made in this action 12 concerning membership in ConnectU LLC." In fact however, Judge Collings' Order should have 13 ended the issue Facebook raises in this motion, namely whether ConnectU committed any 14 wrongdoing in the course of submitting subsequent testimony in the Massachusetts case as it 15 concerns membership issues of its principals.

16 Facebook's position of inconsistency was rejected by Judge Collings, and should be 17 rejected by this Court. ConnectU's responses to irrelevant discovery cannot serve as a basis for 18 sanctions and Facebook's attempt to relitigate an issue already decided against it should not be 19 tolerated.

20 B. The So-called Inconsistency Could Not Have Influenced the Superior Court in 21 Deciding the Motion to Quash Because Facebook Never Made the Discovery
22 Responses it Contends to be the Source of the Inconsistency Part of the Superior
23 Court Record

24 Facebook's argument that the allegedly inconsistent discovery responses as compared 25 to Massachusetts Court testimony, persuaded the Superior Court to grant a motion to quash, is flat 26 wrong. As Judge Collings found, these discovery responses were not inconsistent with later 27 testimony. And, in any event, these responses about which Facebook complains in this motion could 28 not have had any effect on the Superior Court's decision to grant the Motion to Quash because Facebook never made these discovery responses part of the Superior Court record. Moreover, the 1 Superior Court never saw the discovery responses about which Facebook complains in this motion 2 because they were irrelevant to whether the Superior Court could exercise jurisdiction over the 3 individual defendants.

4 Simply stated, the Superior Court could not have relied upon something that it never 5 saw. The irrelevant discovery at issue in this motion for sanctions concerns when or how individual 6 defendants, and in particular, Divya Narendra, became a member of ConnectU. In its discovery 7 efforts, that Facebook contended were necessary and relevant to the issues in the Motion to Quash, 8 Facebook asked defendants about their membership status in ConnectU in multiple ways. As quoted 9 above, Facebook propounded Interrogatory No. 14. Facebook cites to and characterizes additional 10 discovery responses that Facebook claims deceived the Superior Court. Facebook asserts that this 11 discovery shows that “in more than 100 instances” individual defendants contend that they acted on 12 behalf of ConnectU. See Moving Papers at 6, citing Chatterjee Exhibits O, Q, GG, MM, NN, OO, 13 PP QQ, RR, SS, TT and UU.

14 Facebook’s opposition to the Motion to Quash was filed after the defendants 15 served their discovery responses that Facebook contends were the basis for the Superior Court’s 16 Order granting this Motion to Quash. Facebook’s Opposition to the Motion to Quash is attached to 17 the accompanying Mosko Declaration, Exhibit V-4. The response to Interrogatory No. 14 and the 18 related discovery (i.e. these 100+ instances), are not quoted or even referenced in Facebook’s 19 opposition to the Motion to Quash. Nor are these discovery responses attached to the declarations 20 filed in support of this opposition. See Mosko Decl. Exh. V-5. Hence Facebook’s claim that the 21 Superior Court relied upon them is patently untrue. This motion as it concerns these discovery 22 responses must be denied.

23 Without question, Facebook knew that the timing and circumstances of Mr.
24 Narendra’s and the other individual defendants’ membership in ConnectU (the position allegedly 25 asserted in these 100+ discovery responses) were irrelevant to whether the California Court could 26 exercise jurisdiction over them. Facebook had done thorough and compelling research proving this 27 membership issue to be irrelevant. These cases were cited and quoted in Facebook’s Opposition to 28 the Motion to Quash. See Mosko Decl. Exh. V-4. Facebook’s opposition convincingly established

1 that a person's official status or capacity in a fictitious entity cannot immunize that person from the 2 personal jurisdiction of a forum, even where the alleged wrongful actions were taken in that person's 3 official capacity. Id. at 6. Accurately citing and quoting two 1984 United States Supreme Court 4 cases, Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S. 783 (1984) and Keeton v. Hustler Magazine, 465 U.S. 770 (1984), 5 Facebook's opposition to the Motion to Quash states, "' We today totally reject the suggestion that 6 employees who act in their official capacity are somehow shielded from suit in their individual 7 capacity [from personal jurisdiction].'" Mosko Decl. Exh. V-4 at 6. Facebook further and correctly 8 emphasized in its Opposition: "in California there simply is no 'fiduciary shield' or jurisdictional 9 immunity for non-resident corporate officers or directors or general partners who act on behalf of a 10 corporation or partnership if the individual's behavior otherwise would subject them to personal 11 jurisdiction." Id.

12 The circumstances surrounding the Motion to Quash were as follows: Facebook's 13 Superior Court Complaint alleged that individual defendants had wrongfully accessed Facebook's 14 website and downloaded information that Facebook contended was confidential or proprietary.
15 Mosko Decl. Exh. XIII, at ¶ 19. Individual defendants' Motion to Quash asserted that the California 16 Court could not exercise personal jurisdiction over them. As with all motions challenging the 17 exercise of personal jurisdiction over a defendant, the plaintiff has the burden of establishing the 18 facts allowing the forum court to assert jurisdiction. Rio Properties, Inc. v. Rio Int'l Interlink, 284 19 F.3d 1007, 1019 (9th Cir.2002).

20 As demonstrated, for the real purpose of discovering issues related to its Motion to 21 Dismiss, Facebook propounds this irrelevant discovery that forms the basis of its current motion for 22 sanctions, i.e. Chatterjee Declaration Exhibits O, Q, G, GG, MM, NN, OO, PP, QQ, RR, SS, TT and 23 UU. See Moving Papers at 6. Having already done research that concludes such discovery, i.e. the 24 circumstances surrounding individual defendants' membership in ConnectU, to be irrelevant in the 25 Motion to Quash, Facebook files its opposition without citing or referring to this discovery.
26 Essentially, Facebook, by its correct and logical decision not to make this discovery or the responses 27 to it part of the Superior Court record, concedes this discovery was irrelevant and could not have 28 been a basis for that Court's order granting the Motion to Quash.

1 Yet despite this concession, in this motion, as in the unsuccessful motion for judicial 2 estoppel before Judge Collings, Facebook argues that the Superior Court granted the Motion to 3 Quash because of Mr. Narendra's membership in ConnectU. Compare Facebook's argument in the 4 motion for judicial estoppel, Mosko Decl. Exh. XV, at 8-14, with Facebook's moving papers in this 5 motion, at page 7. Amazingly, in its Moving Papers, Facebook tells this Court it believes the 6 Superior Court granted the Motion to Quash based on individual defendants' discovery responses, 7 asserting they acted in their capacity as members of ConnectU LLC. See Moving Papers, page 7, 8 lines 20 - 23. Not only does this argument fly in the face of the United States Supreme Court 9 authority Facebook cited in its opposition to the Motion to Quash, it also ignores the complete record 10 as it concerns said motion.

11 In the individual defendants' Reply to the Opposition to the Motion to Quash, they 12 did not respond to the authority cited by Facebook concerning their status with ConnectU. Instead, 13 the Reply provides alternative compelling reasons, having nothing to do with the individual 14 defendants' membership status in ConnectU, for the Superior Court to grant the Motion to Quash.
15 As with most motions that raise the issue of whether a court can assert personal jurisdiction over a 16 defendant, and as this Court recently commented, such issue is "joined" in and through the 17 opposition and reply papers. Yet, Facebook ignores individual defendants' reply when it contends 18 the Superior Court granted the Motion to Quash because of Mr. Narendra's ConnectU membership 19 status.

20 In summary, Facebook contends that this Court should conclude that the Superior 21 Court granted Defendants' Motion to Quash based on a doctrine long ago rejected by the United 22 States Supreme Court. Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S. 783, 790 (1984) (holding that a person's status as 23 employee "does not somehow insulate them from jurisdiction"). The Superior Court's Order itself 24 fails to confirm that it rejected binding Supreme Court precedent. Mosko Decl. Exh. XVI.
25 Facebook also urges that this Court find that the Superior Court relied upon Narendra's membership 26 status in ConnectU and subsequently applied the Corporate Shield doctrine in granting the motion.
27 Again, the Superior Court's Order fails to so confirm. Id. Neither premise is supported by the facts.
28 This motion must be denied.

1 C. Sanctions Cannot Issue as a Result of a Claimed Inconsistency in Testimony
2 Stemming From a Poorly Worded Interrogatory

3 The crux of Facebook's claim for sanctions stems from Mr. Narendra's response to 4 an interrogatory effectively shown in the section above to be irrelevant to the issues for which it was 5 purportedly propounded. This interrogatory was vague and poorly written. As demonstrated below, 6 sanctions cannot issue as a result of the response to this interrogatory. The response was accurate, 7 made in good faith, and as Judge Collings found was not inconsistent with subsequent testimony 8 submitted in the Massachusetts case.

9 Facebook claims that the source of the claimed inconsistent testimony is the response 10 to Interrogatory No. 14, which reads:

11 IDENTIFY current AND former directors, officers, employees, AND 12 agents of CONNECTU (including without limitation, Members, Managers 13 AND Board of Managers as defined in the Limited Liability Company
14 Operating Agreement of ConnectU, LLC -- bates numbers C011285
15 through 011335), HARVARDCONNECTION, AND WINKLEVOSS
COMPANIES, including without limitation, dates in these positions, duties, job descriptions, authorities AND responsibilities. Mosko Decl.
Exh. IX, at 8.

16 This interrogatory refers to the Limited Liability Company Operating Agreement, a copy of which is 17 attached as Exhibit XIV to the Mosko Declaration. Facebook argues that this interrogatory asks for 18 the dates the individual defendants became ConnectU LLC members. Facebook further contends 19 that individual defendants' responses to this interrogatory were so directly inconsistent with 20 subsequent testimony provided in the Massachusetts Court that this Court should issue sanctions.
21 However, the vague drafting of this interrogatory makes this contention meritless. Indeed, as shown 22 in section II.A, supra, Facebook made the same argument, i.e. that defendants' response to this 23 interrogatory was inconsistent with subsequent testimony, in Massachusetts, and that court rejected 24 the argument for the same reasons this Court should.

25 A review of Operating Agreement reveals that the company, ConnectU LLC was 26 created in 2004. Mosko Decl. Exh. XIV, at 2. However, the Agreement was signed in 2005. The 27 Agreement also contains a provision that states membership in the entity was retroactive to 2004. Id.
28 When Divya Narendra answered this interrogatory he reasonably believed it asked for his

1 interpretation of the Agreement. And, quite accurately and consistently with this Agreement, he 2 responded in pertinent part that based on this Agreement, he, along with the other individual 3 defendants in this case was a member “since ConnectU was formed.” Mosko Decl. Exh. X, at 5.

4 Although never questioned about this interrogatory during the jurisdictional 5 deposition in this case, Mr. Narendra was questioned extensively about it in the context of the 6 Massachusetts discovery dedicated to the issues in the Motion to Dismiss. During that deposition, 7 Mr. Narendra explained the circumstances surrounding the membership of ConnectU LLC. As Mr.
8 Narendra explained, in 2004, at the time ConnectU LLC was formed, he and Cameron and Tyler 9 Winklevoss orally agreed that the Winklevoss’s would be the only members for the time being. See 10 footnote 2. By 2005, when the Operating Agreement was signed, the circumstances surrounding the 11 membership issues had changed, which resulted in Mr. Narendra becoming a member. The 12 Operating Agreement was thereafter drafted to reflect that the Winklevoss’s and Mr. Narendra were 13 members.

14 Judge Collings credited this explanation as found in the Massachusetts court 15 deposition testimony of Mr. Narendra. Judge Collings concluded that Mr. Narendra’s interrogatory 16 response was not completely contradictory to the latter testimony, which accurately stated that in 17 2004, prior to the execution of the Operating Agreement, Mr. Narendra was not a member of 18 ConnectU LLC. In fact, in reaching his above-recited finding, Judge Collings quoted Mr.
19 Narendra’s testimony at length in his order:

20 Q. Responding to 14 you say the members of ConnectU
21 include Cameron Winklevoss, Tyler Winklevoss, Howard 22 Winklevoss and Divya Narendra, correct?

23 A. Correct.

24 Q. And then you say all those persons have all been members 25 since ConnectU was formed?

26 A. That’s what it says, yes. Can I just clarify something, 27 though?

28 Q. And when you say they had, these persons have all been members since ConnectU was formed, do you agree that conflicts with your statement that only Cameron and Tyler were members of ConnectU LLC prior to September 2nd, 2004 in your declaration?

A. I think this actually may be misstated. What I'm referring to here is the operation agreement. That -

Ms. Esquenet: Let the record reflect that by "here" the witness is referring to the response to interrogatory number 14.

A. Right, so in interrogatory response number 14 when I say, or when it says that these persons have all been members since ConnectU was formed, I'm referring to the [execution] date as of this Limited Liability Company Operating Agreement in the sentence before.

Q. And when you say ConnectU was formed what do you mean by "formed"?

A. I think that refers to the actual LLC, but -- or it sounds as if that's what it means, but when I'm saying that, you know, what was meant to be said here is that I was a member as of the operating agreement date, not the, not since the formation of the LLC.

Mosko Decl. Exh. XVII at 173:9-175:7; cited in Judge Collings' March 2, 2007 Report and Recommendation at 22-23. Additionally, Mr. Narendra has maintained that when he responded to Interrogatory No. 14, he was answering to the best of his abilities at that time:

Q. So even though you now acknowledge that this answer [to Interrogatory No. 14] is not quite accurate with respect to the duration of your membership in ConnectU, you nevertheless signed this document under the pains and penalty of perjury; is that right?

A. Right, because this, as it says here, I believed these responses to be true to the best of my knowledge. At the time.

Mosko Decl. Exh. XVII, at 278:13 - 279:12.

As shown, during his deposition Mr. Narendra outlined the problems with the interrogatory as drafted. And as shown, Judge Collings, in denying Facebook's motion for judicial estoppel, refused to estop ConnectU from arguing that Narendra was not a member on the filing date. Facebook's motion essentially asks this Court to reject Judge Collings' findings even though

1 the interrogatory was vague and the witness explained his interpretation of it, making his subsequent 2 statements about membership consistent with this answer. Sanctions are not appropriate. Moreover, 3 it bears noting that Facebook never questioned Mr. Narendra about this response during the 4 depositions it took in the California case. And, as shown, Facebook did not cite or rely on this 5 interrogatory response in the course of the Motion to Quash proceedings. In any event, for the 6 purpose of this motion, there is no inconsistency, and any issuance of sanctions based on this 7 interrogatory response would be improper.

8 D. The Court Is Not Vested With the Authority to Impose Sanctions in the Present
9 Circumstances

10 The Plaintiffs are requesting that the Court impose sanctions pursuant to 28 U.S.C.
11 §1927 and the Court's inherent powers. However, neither basis asserted will allow sanctions to 12 issue in this case. Pursuant to §1927, the Court is vested with the power to impose sanctions against 13 counsel who unreasonably or vexatiously multiplies the proceedings. Facebook has not shown any 14 wrongdoing much less activity that comes close to the high threshold this section requires for a 15 sanction award. Additionally, federal courts are vested with the inherent power to impose sanctions 16 based on the bad faith conduct committed by the parties or their counsel. Similarly, the cases 17 interpreting these inherent powers prevent a sanction award from issuing under these circumstances.

18 Facebook's motion for sanctions itself comes far closer to satisfying several bases for 19 the imposition of sanctions, as the cases discussed below provide. The most frustrating part of 20 having to oppose this motion is the fact that these same arguments submitted to support sanctions 21 were already made before the Massachusetts Court in the context of Facebook's motion for judicial 22 estoppel. The Massachusetts Court already disagreed with Facebook's assertion that any 23 wrongdoing occurred. See Section II. A, supra. To say the least, based on the Massachusetts 24 Court's decision in Facebook's failed motion for judicial estoppel, this motion should never have 25 been filed. In any event, as shown below, neither §1927 nor the Court's inherent powers allow a 26 sanctions award against defendants' or their counsel.

1 1. Sanctions Cannot Be Imposed Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1927

2 28 U.S.C. § 1927 states:

3 Any attorney or other person admitted to conduct cases in 4 any court of the United States or any Territory thereof who 5 so multiplies the proceedings in any case unreasonably and 6 vexatiously may be required by the court to satisfy 7 personally the excess costs expenses and attorneys' fees 8 reasonably incurred because of such conduct.

9 Section 1927 sanctions are not appropriate unless an attorney is shown to have 10 acted in bad faith, with improper motive, or with reckless disregard of duty owed to the court.
11 Kanarek v. Hatch, 827 F.2d 1389, 1391 (9th Cir.1987); Toombs v. Leone, 777 F.2d 465, 471 (9th 12 Cir.1985); United States v. Associated Convalescent Enterprises, Inc., 766 F.2d 1342, 1346 (9th 13 Cir.1985). Section 1927 is permissive, not mandatory. The court is not obliged to grant sanctions 14 once it has found unreasonable and vexatious conduct. It may do so in its discretion.” Corley v.
15 Rosewood Care Ctr., 388 F.3d 990, 1014 (7th Cir.2004). Sanctions under § 1927 may be imposed 16 when: (1) the attorney unreasonably multiplied the proceedings; (2) the attorney's conduct was 17 unreasonable and vexatious; and (3) the conduct resulted in an increase in the cost of the 18 proceedings. See 28 U.S.C. § 1927; B.K.B. v. Maui Police Dep't., 276 F.3d 1091, 1107 (9th 19 Cir.2002); Pickern v. Pier 1 Imps. (U.S.), Inc., 339 F.Supp.2d 1081, 1091 (E.D.Cal.2004). As 20 demonstrated in the above sections in this brief, the defendants actions as they concerned the Motion 21 to Quash were reasonable and appropriate. The alleged inconsistent positions were not inconsistent.
22 The discovery responses and the subsequent testimony have already been examined by the 23 Massachusetts Court, and that Court declined a similar request to sanction defendants as a result of 24 these responses and testimony. The proceedings were not “unreasonably multiplied,” counsel’s 25 conduct was not “unreasonable and vexatious.” Nor has anything in the Superior Court resulted in 26 an improper “increase in the cost of the proceedings.” This motion must be denied.

27 None of the Ninth Circuit cases discussing sanctions comes close to 28 describing a basis for a sanction award against defendants. Even if the Superior Court discovery 29 responses were inconsistent with later Massachusetts testimony--and Judge Collings found they were 30 not inconsistent--defendants' reliance on such inconsistency falls far short of what the cases require

1 for sanctions. An award of sanctions under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 requires a finding of recklessness or 2 bad faith. B.K.B., 276 F.3d at 1107; Cline v. Industrial Maintenance Eng'g & Const. Co., 200 F.3d 3 1223, 1236 (9th Cir.2000). “The bad faith requirement sets a high threshold.” Primus Auto. Fin.
4 Serv. v. Batarse, 115 F.3d 644, 649 (9th Cir.1997). “Bad faith is present when an attorney 5 knowingly or recklessly raises a frivolous argument, or argues a meritorious claim for the purpose of 6 harassing an opponent.” Estate of Blas v. Winkler, 792 F.2d 858, 860 (9th Cir.1986) “We assess an 7 attorney's bad faith under a subjective standard.” Pacific Harbor Capital, Inc. v. Carnival Air Lines, 8 Inc., 210 F.3d 1112, 1118 (9th Cir.2000); see New Alaska Dev. Corp. v. Guetschow, 869 F.2d 1298, 9 1306 (9th Cir.1989). As the Ninth Circuit has explained,

10 Bad faith is present when an attorney knowingly or recklessly 11 raises a frivolous argument or argues a meritorious claim for the 12 purpose of harassing an opponent. Tactics undertaken with the 13 intent to increase expenses, or delay may also support a finding of 14 bad faith. Even if an attorney's arguments are meritorious, his 15 conduct may be sanctionable if in bad faith.

14 New Alaska, 869 F.2d at 1306 (internal citations omitted). Further, “if a filing is submitted 15 recklessly, it must be frivolous, while if it is not frivolous, it must be intended to harass.... Reckless 16 nonfrivolous filings, without more, may not be sanctioned” under §1927. B.K.B., 276 F.3d at 1107, 17 quoting In re Keegan Mgmt. Co, Sec. Lit., 78 F.3d 431, 436 (9th Cir.1996). Where no previous court 18 has considered a particular or novel issue, sanctions under §1927 generally are disfavored. See 19 Proctor & Gamble Co. v. Amway Corp., 280 F.3d 519, 531-32 (5th Cir.2002); Serrato by & 20 Through Serrato v. John Hancock Life Ins. Co., 31 F.3d 882, 887 n. 2 (9th Cir.1994). If sanctions 21 are awarded, §1927 “authorizes the taxing of only excess costs incurred because of an attorney's 22 unreasonable conduct; it does not authorize imposition of sanctions to reimburse a party for the 23 ordinary costs of trial.” United States v. Associated Convalescent Enterprises, Inc., 766 F.2d 1342, 24 1347 (9th Cir.1985); see New Alaska, 869 F.2d at 1306; Kirshner v. Uniden Corp. of Am., 842 F.2d 25 1074, 1081 (9th Cir.1988). Simply stated, for each of the reasons stated in Sections II. A - II. C of 26 this brief, incorporated herein, none of the cases discussing §1927 support a finding of sanctions 27 here.

1 2. Sanctions Cannot Be Imposed Pursuant to This Court's Inherent Powers

2 Federal courts are vested with the inherent power to assess attorney's fees 3 against a party who has acted in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons.
4 Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 45-46 (1991); Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. v. Wilderness
5 Soc., 421 U.S. 240, 258-59 (1975); Espinoza-Gutierrez v. Smith, 94 F.3d 1270, 1279 (9th Cir.1996).
6 The Supreme Court has stated that "[b]ecause of their very potency, inherent powers must be 7 exercised with restraint and discretion . . . [a] primary aspect of that discretion is the ability to 8 fashion an appropriate sanction for conduct which abuses the judicial process" Chambers, 501 at 9 44-45. Awarding attorney fees based on bad faith conduct is punitive in nature, and generally is 10 warranted only in exceptional cases and for dominating reasons of justice. Brown v. Sullivan, 916 11 F.2d 492, 495 (9th Cir. 1990). Mere recklessness, without more, does not justify sanctions under the 12 court's inherent powers. Fink v. Gomez, 239 F.3d 989, 991-94 (9th Cir.2001). In sum, "sanctions 13 are available if the court specifically finds bad faith or conduct tantamount to bad faith. Sanctions 14 are available for a variety of types of willful actions, including recklessness when combined with an 15 additional factor such as frivolousness, harassment, or an improper purpose. Fink v. Gomez, 239
16 F.3d 989, 994 (9th Cir.2001). For the same reasons that sanctions are not possible under Section 17 1927, they should not be imposed pursuant to this Court's inherent powers.

18 3. The Court's Sanctioning Power Does Not Extend to Actions in a Separate 19 Court Proceeding

20 In GRiD Systems Corp. v. John Fluke Mfg. Co., Inc., 41 F.3d 1318 (9th 21 Cir.1994), the Ninth Circuit held that "§1927 limits a federal court's ability to sanction an attorney 22 for conduct before another court." Id at 1319. In GRiD, the John Fluke Manufacturing Company, 23 Inc. ("Fluke") initially filed suit in federal district court against GRiD's subcontractor Dynatec 24 Systems Corporation ("Dynatec") for breach of contract. Fluke also filed an arbitration action 25 seeking indemnification from GRiD. Subsequently, GRiD filed suit against Fluke and Dynatec in 26 state court. Fluke removed GRiD's state court action to the federal district court on diversity 27 grounds and filed notice of the related action between Fluke and Dynatec. The multiple proceedings 28 resulted in Fluke's motion for sanctions pursuant to Section 1927, which the district court granted,

1 reasoning that GRiD's state court complaint, which had been removed to federal court by Fluke, 2 unreasonably and vexatiously multiplied the proceedings.

3 In reversing the decision to impose sanctions, the Ninth Circuit stated "[w]e 4 agree with the Fifth Circuit that §1927 limits a federal court's ability to sanction an attorney for 5 conduct before another court." Id. at 1319. Matter of Case, 937 F.2d 1014 (5th Cir.1991). The 6 Ninth Circuit further stated that "the suit filed in state court is an entirely separate action, not subject 7 to the sanctioning power of the district court." Id. In Matter of Case, the Fifth Circuit stated that 8 "[t]he language of §1927 limits the court's sanction power to attorney's which multiply the 9 proceedings in the case before the court. §1927 does not reach conduct that cannot be construed as 10 part of the proceedings before the court issuing §1927 sanctions." Matter of Case, 937 F.2d at 1023.
11 Additionally, the court stated "§1927 cannot reach conduct occurring in a separate state court 12 proceeding no matter how vexatious or multiplicitous that conduct may be." Id.

13 Because the issue was not properly before the court in GRiD, the Ninth Circuit 14 did not address whether the court could impose sanctions pursuant to the court's inherent powers.
15 GRiD Systems Corp, 41 F.3d at 1320. If the issue were properly before the court, however, it is 16 likely that the Ninth Circuit would have again adopted the rationale of the Fifth Circuit and found 17 that the court's inherent power to impose sanctions does not extend to conduct occurring in another 18 court. See Matter of Case, 937 F.2d 1014, 1023 (1991). In Matter of Case, the Fifth Circuit found 19 that a "[federal] court's inherent power to punish bad-faith conduct does not extend to actions in a 20 separate state court proceeding." Id. at 1023. "The conduct of the parties in the state court action 21 cannot be said to affect the exercise of the judicial authority of the [federal] court or limit the 22 [federal] Court's power to control the behavior of parties and attorneys in the litigation before it.
23 Inherent power must arise from the litigation before that court." Id. at 1023-24.

24 In its motion for sanctions, Facebook claims a fraud was committed on the 25 court. As shown, that accusation is wrong, making this motion meritless. The discovery responses, 26 which Facebook contends are wrong, were in fact consistent and supportable pursuant to the 27 Operating Agreement. See Section II. C, supra. The discovery was not inconsistent with subsequent 28 testimony. See Section II. A, supra. But even if defendants did take inconsistent positions in their

1 discovery responses as compared to their subsequent Massachusetts Court testimony, and this 2 inconsistent position was for the unsupportable reasons Facebook proffers, GRiD and Matter of Case
3 prevent sanctions from being imposed here. As demonstrated above, the Court cannot take into 4 consideration the actions taken by the Defendants in Massachusetts no matter how “vexatious or 5 multiplicitous that conduct may be.” GRiD Systems Corp., 41 F.3d at 1319. Even if the Defendants 6 took inconsistent positions and the court deemed their conduct sanctionable, the Ninth Circuit is not 7 vested with the authority to issue sanctions based on the what occurred in the Massachusetts action.
8 See Id.; Matter of Case, 937 F.2d at 1023. This motion must be denied.

9 E. Even if the Discovery Responses Were To Be Found Inconsistent With 10 Subsequent Testimony, These Circumstances Do Not Rise to the Required High 11 Levels of Egregiousness to Support an Award of Sanctions

12 Facebook cites numerous cases in support of its motion for sanctions, however, the 13 sanctionable conduct present in the cited cases is clearly distinguishable from the alleged 14 inconsistencies in the instant case. To even reach this inquiry, the court must find that: 1) the 15 positions taken by the Defendants in the California and Massachusetts actions were inconsistent; 2) 16 the California Superior Court relied on the inconsistent positions in granting Defendants’ Motion to 17 Quash; 3) the court is vested with the authority to impose sanctions based on conduct occurring in 18 the Massachusetts proceedings despite the holdings of GRiD and Matter of Case; and 4) the alleged 19 inconsistent positions were taken recklessly or in bad faith by the Defendants. Even if the court gets 20 this far, it must still deny the motion based on the authority cited by Facebook.

21 Facebook cites a number of cases including Chambers v. NASCO, Inc.; 501 U.S. 32, 22 112 S.Ct. 12 (1991), Fink v. Gomez, 239 F.3d 989 (9th Cir.2001) and B.K.B. v. Maui Police Dept., 23 276 F.3d 1091 (9th Cir.2002) in support of its Motion for Sanctions. In Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 24 petitioner Chambers, the sole shareholder of a company that operated a television station in 25 Louisiana, agreed to sell the station's facilities and broadcast license to respondent NASCO, Inc. Id.
26 at 36. Chambers soon changed his mind regarding the sale and engaged in a series of actions that 27 were designed to frustrate the sale’s consummation. Despite the issuance of a preliminary 28 injunction and numerous temporary restraining orders, Chambers continuously abused the judicial process and disregarded the District Judge’s warnings that his, and his lawyer’s behavior was 1 unethical. Id. at 38. Undeterred, Chambers proceeded with “a series of meritless motions and 2 pleadings and delaying actions” which triggered further warnings from the court. Id. After the 3 District Court entered judgment in favor of NASCO and after Chambers new attorney was warned 4 that further unethical behavior would not be tolerated, Chambers again ignored the warnings and 5 refused to comply with the terms of the judgment entered against him. Id. at 39. Chambers

6 appealed and immediately following oral argument, the Appeals Court imposed appellate sanctions 7 for the frivolous appeal and remanded to the district court to determine whether further sanctions
8 were warranted. Id. at 40. The Appeals Court and the Supreme Court both affirmed the District 9 Court’s conclusion that full attorney’s fees were warranted due to the frequency and severity of 10 Chambers’ abuses of the judicial system and the resulting need to ensure that such abuses were not 11 repeated. Id. at 56. Indeed, the Court found Chambers’ actions were “ part of [a] sordid scheme of 12 deliberate misuse of the judicial process” designed “ to defeat NASCO’s claim by harassment, 13 repeated and endless delay, mountainous expense and waste of financial resources.” Id. at 56-57.

14 Fink v. Gomez, 239 F.3d 989 (9th Cir.2001), was a habeas action stemming from an 15 altercation between the Fink and several prison guards in which Fink was left permanently disabled.
16 Id. at 990. Fink also lost good conduct credits due to the altercation with the guards. Id. In Fink v.
17 *Ylst*³, the first action filed by Fink after the altercation, the district court issued a conditional 18 judgment requiring the State to restore Fink’s good conduct credits unless the State held a new 19 disciplinary hearing within 60 days. Id. Some months after the conditional judgment, the district
20 court held an off-the-record phone conversation in which Ylst counsel made a number of factually 21 incorrect representations to the court. Id. Ylst counsel’s misrepresentations resulted in a needless 22 disciplinary hearing and further adverse consequences for Fink, despite contrary assurances to the 23 court. Id. at 991.

24 The district court specifically found that “[a]ll claims by Ylst Counsel . . . [were] 25 meritless,” resulting in adverse consequences for Fink. Id. In addition, the court noted that 26 “[i]nformation obtained by the court since the 1998 Disciplinary Hearing, including admissions by 27

28 ³ A civil action brought by Fink against Ylst and other prison guard defendants.

1 Ylst Counsel, has led the court to the inevitable conclusion that the 1998 Disciplinary Hearing was 2 orchestrated by Ylst Counsel for the purpose of gaining [a] tactical advantage in the Ylst case.” Id.
3 These findings led the Court to impose sanctions stating that “Ylst Counsel has attempted repeatedly 4 to mislead the court by making misrepresentations regarding the state of the record, the orders of the 5 court, and the actions taken by respondent and the CDC.... It appears that the entire 1998
6 Disciplinary Hearing, and the events that followed, have been orchestrated by Ylst counsel in bad 7 faith with a view to gaining an advantage in the Ylst case.” Id.

8 In B.K.B. v. Maui Police Dept., 276 F.3d 1091 (9th Cir.2002), the Plaintiff, a female 9 police officer, sued the police department and county alleging race and sex discrimination. Id. at 10 1095. Prior to trial, defense counsel unsuccessfully filed two separate Rule 412 motions seeking to 11 introduce evidence regarding the plaintiff’s sexual practices or fantasies. Id. at 1104-05. “Having 12 failed in two previous motions to obtain the court’s approval to introduce Rule 412 material, the 13 defendants simply sprang the offending testimony upon the court and then misrepresented the nature 14 of [witnesses] testimony to the trial judge in response to plaintiff’s objections that the defense 15 intended to violate Rule 412.” Id. The Ninth Circuit upheld the issuance of sanctions under both the 16 inherent powers and under §1927. Id. at 1107-09. The Ninth Circuit found “[d]efense counsel’s 17 sidebar statement to the district court . . . highly misleading.” Id. at 1107. Further, the court stated 18 “[w]e cannot help but conclude that defense counsel’s introduction of [witnesses] testimony was a 19 knowing and intentional violation of Rule 412.” Id. Finally, the court concludes that “[d]efense 20 counsel’s egregious conduct in introducing [the witness] testimony subverted the fundamental 21 purpose of Rule 412 and deprived Plaintiff of a fair trial.” Id. at 1109.

22 The offending parties in Chambers, Fink and B.K.B. all demonstrated a level of 23 egregious conduct not found in the present case. Clearly, the “sordid scheme of deliberate misuse of 24 the judicial process” committed by Chambers does not approach the alleged inconsistent positions 25 taken by the defendants in the two separate proceedings. Unlike Chambers, the Individual 26 Defendants never blatantly disregarded restraining orders, preliminary injunctions and clear 27 warnings from a judge that their behavior was unethical. In Fink, an inmate lost his liberty due to 28 the egregious conduct of counsel. In B.K.B., counsel for the defendant put a victim’s right to a fair

1 trial in jeopardy. Blatantly disregarding judicial orders, making intentional misrepresentations to a 2 court resulting in a loss of liberty, and recklessly jeopardizing a victim's right to a fair trial are the 3 types of conduct the court looks for when imposing sanctions. No equivalent conduct has been 4 alleged by the Plaintiffs, therefore the Motion for Sanctions must be denied.

5 The Plaintiffs also relied on the recent Qualcomm decisions to support their Motion 6 for Sanctions. See Qualcomm, Inc. v. Broadcom, Corp., 2007 WL 2296441; Qualcomm, Inc. v.
7 Broadcom, Corp., 2007 WL 2261799. In Qualcomm, the patentee, its employees and its attorneys 8 repeatedly failed to disclose documents relevant to the enforceability of its patents. Id. at 5-35.
9 After a verdict was entered in favor of Broadcom, Qualcomm turned over 230,000 pages of emails, 10 company correspondence and memoranda that demonstrated Qualcomm's inequitable conduct 11 throughout the litigation. The court found by "clear and convincing evidence that Qualcomm and its 12 employees orchestrated a plan to ignore Qualcomm's duty to disclose these patents to the JVT (Joint 13 Video Team - the standards setting body that created the H.264 standard), in order to become an 14 indispensable licensor of the H.264 standard." Id. at 14. Qualcomm produced hundreds of emails 15 which directly contradicted employee testimony. Id. at 16-19. The court found that "Qualcomm's 16 wrongful conduct is further supported by evidence of widespread and undeniable misconducts of 17 Qualcomm, its employees, and its witnesses throughout the present litigation, including during 18 discovery, pre-trial motions practice, trial and post-trial proceedings." Id. at 16. Additionally, the 19 court found that "Qualcomm's counsel participated in an organized program of litigation misconduct 20 and concealment throughout discovery, trial, and post-trial before new counsel took over lead role in 21 the case on April 27, 2007." Id. at 21.

22 Broadcom brought a motion for attorney's fees pursuant to 35 U.S.C. Sec. 285, which 23 states "[t]he court in exceptional cases may award reasonable attorney's fees to the prevailing party."
24 2007 WL 2261799 at 1. In granting full attorney's fees and costs to Broadcom, the District Court 25 found that "[b]ased on the egregiousness of Qualcomm's conduct regarding the JVT and throughout 26 the present litigation, the court FINDS an exceptional case status has been established." Id. at 2. To 27 compare the conduct of Qualcomm and its employees to the actions of ConnectU, its founders and 28 counsel is outrageous. Numerous Qualcomm employees were exposed as perjurers who took part in

1 an orchestrated conspiracy to withhold documents and lie at every opportunity to protect their patent 2 rights. At no time during the California or Massachusetts litigation has ConnectU, its founders or its 3 counsel ever committed an act equivalent to the widespread injustice found in Qualcomm.

4 As demonstrated, even Facebook's cases require that this motion be denied.

5 III. CONCLUSION

6 For the foregoing reasons, this motion must be denied, and Facebook should be admonished 7 for misrepresenting court proceedings, and bringing a motion that case law does not support.
