No. C-08-00868 RMW

ORDER DENYING EAPPRAISEIT, LLC'S
MOTION FOR CERTIFICATION OF
INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL AND FOR A
STAY

[Re Docket No. 178]

Defendant eAppraiseIT (erroneously sued herein as First American eAppraiseIT) ("EA") moves for certification of interlocutory appeal and for a stay of proceedings pending appeal. For the reasons set forth below, the court denies the motion.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs bring this suit alleging that defendant-appraisers participated in a scheme to provide home-loan mortgage borrowers with inflated appraisals of the property they sought to purchase. On March 9, 2009, the court granted in part and denied in part EA's motion to dismiss the First Amended Complaint. In its order, the court granted EA's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' breach of contract claim, with leave to amend, and denied EA's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' Real Estate

ORDER DENYING EAPPRAISEIT, LLC'S MOTION FOR CERTIFICATION OF INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL AND FOR A STAY—No. C-08-00868 RMW
CCL

1 Settlement Practices Act ("RESPA") claim under 12 U.S.C. § 2607(a). In addition, the court
2 dismissed plaintiffs' 12 U.S.C. § 2607(b), Unfair Competition Law, and Consumer Legal Remedies
3 Act claims against EA with prejudice. Plaintiffs filed a Second Amended Complaint ("SAC")
4 containing allegations against EA for breach of contract and the same RESPA claim under 12 U.S.C.
5 § 2607(a). On August 30, 2009, the court granted EA's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' breach of 6 contract claim and again denied EA's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' RESPA claim under 12 U.S.C. §
7 2607(a). EA now moves the court to certify for an interlocutory appeal the portion of the court's 8 August 30, 2009 order denying EA's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' RESPA claim.

9 II. ANALYSIS

10 A. Timeliness of Motion

11 The court first considers the threshold issue of whether the motion for certification of 12 interlocutory appeal was timely filed. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b) requires the appealing party to file an 13 appeal within ten days after the court's certification of the order for interlocutory appeal. Though 14 there is no specified time limit for seeking certification, § 1292(b) provides for an "immediate 15 appeal," and "a district judge should not grant an inexcusably dilatory request," Richardson
16 Electronics, Ltd. v. Panache Broadcasting of Pennsylvania, Inc., 202 F.3d 957, 958 (7th Cir. 2000).
17 As explained by Judge Posner, though a district judge has the power to amend his orders at any time
18 to certify for interlocutory appeal, "[t]he ten-day limitation in section 1292(b) is not to be nullified
19 by promiscuous grants of motions to amend. An amendment that will have the effect of extending 20 the limitation is proper only if there is a reason for the delay." Weir v. Propst, 915 F.2d 283, 287
21 (7th Cir. 1990).

22 On March 9, 2009, the court denied EA's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' RESPA claim under 28
23 U.S.C. § 2607(a). EA did not seek certification for interlocutory appeal at this time. After plaintiffs
24 filed their SAC, EA again sought dismissal of the same RESPA claim, based on the following
25 grounds: (1) plaintiffs lacked standing; (2) plaintiffs failed to allege a "thing of value"; (3) the safe
26 harbor provision in § 2607(c)(2) defeats plaintiffs' claim; and (4) plaintiffs failed to allege a
27 "referral." EA's "thing of value" and safe harbor arguments had already been expressly considered
28 and rejected in the court's March 9, 2009 order. On August 30, 2009, the court again denied EA's

1 motion to dismiss plaintiffs' RESPA claim under § 2607(a). On November 13, 2009, EA filed a
2 motion for certification of the portion of the court's August 30, 2009 order denying EA's motion to 3 dismiss plaintiffs' RESPA claim.

4 EA has provided no reason for the two and a half month delay in seeking certification of the 5 court's August 30, 2009 order denying EA's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' RESPA claim under § 6 2607(a) (eight months from the court's March 9, 2009 order). Given the lack of any justification for 7 its delay in seeking certification, the court denies the motion as untimely. Weir, 915 F.2d at 287
8 (holding that later certification is proper "only if there is a reason for the delay").

9 B. Substantial Ground for Difference of Opinion

10 Even if EA had presented sufficient justification for its delay in filing the motion seeking 11 certification, the court would still deny the motion on its merits. A district court may certify an order 12 for interlocutory appeal when the order involves: (1) a controlling question of law as to which there is 13 (2) a substantial ground for difference of opinion, and (3) where an immediate appeal from the order
14 may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). Plaintiffs do
15 not dispute that the controlling question of law and the material advancement of litigation requirements
16 have been met. They only dispute whether EA has met its burden of showing that a substantial ground
17 for difference of opinion exists. EA alleges that there is a substantial ground for difference of opinion
18 on each of its four arguments for dismissing plaintiffs' RESPA claim: (1) plaintiffs lacked standing; (2)
19 plaintiffs failed to allege a "thing of value"; (3) the safe harbor provision in § 2607(c)(2) defeats
20 plaintiffs' claim; and (4) plaintiffs failed to allege a "referral."

21 In determining whether a substantial ground for difference of opinion exists, it is worth noting 22 that 28 U.S.C. § 1292 was intended to be used "only in exceptional situations in which allowing an 23 interlocutory appeal would avoid protracted and expensive litigation." In re Cement Antitrust Litigation, 24 673 F.2d 1020, 1026 (9th Cir. 1982) (citing U.S. Rubber Co. v. Wright, 359 F.2d 784, 785 (9th Cir.
25 1966)). "It was not intended merely to provide review of difficult rulings in hard cases." U.S. Rubber
26 Co., 359 F.2d at 785.

1 1. Standing

2 In its August 30, 2009 order, the court held that plaintiffs need not allege an overcharge in order
3 to have standing to sue under RESPA. EA argues that there is a substantial ground for difference of 4 opinion on this issue because the Ninth Circuit has not ruled on this issue, and district courts have
5 disagreed on this issue. The mere fact that the Ninth Circuit has not yet ruled on this issue is insufficient
6 to establish a substantial ground for difference of opinion. See, e.g., White v. Nix, 43 F.3d 374, 378 (8th
7 Cir. 1994) ("substantial ground for difference of opinion does not exist merely because there is a dearth
8 of cases"). The two federal appeals courts that have thoroughly considered this issue have both held that
9 no overcharge allegation is required.¹ Alston v. Countrywide Financial Corp., 585 F.3d 753, 759-62
10 (3rd Cir. 2009); Carter v. Welles-Bowen Realty, Inc., 553 F.3d 979, 986-88 (6th Cir. 2009). Though
11 there had been disagreement on this issue among district courts prior to these appellate decisions, EA
12 has failed to point to any cases after Carter in which a court held that an overcharge is required for 13 standing to bring a RESPA claim. As stated in its August 30, 2009 order, the court finds Carter's
14 analysis to be sound. Because "the intent of Congress is clear" that there be no overcharge requirement
15 for standing to bring a RESPA claim, Alston, 585 F.3d at 762, there is no substantial ground for 16 difference of opinion on this issue.

17 2. "Thing of Value"

18 12 U.S.C. § 2607(a) states that "[n]o person shall give and no person shall accept any fee, 19 kickback, or thing of value pursuant to any agreement or understanding . . . that business incident to or 20 a part of a real estate settlement service involving a federally related mortgage loan shall be referred to 21 any person." In its March 9, 2009 order (and again in its August 30, 2009 order), the court held that the 22 allegedly inflated appraisals that Washington Mutual Bank received constituted "thing[s] of value"
23 within the meaning of 12 U.S.C. § 2607(a) since they allegedly allowed the bank to sell loans in higher
24 volume to financial institutions at higher prices. EA claims that there is a substantial ground for 25 difference of opinion on this issue based on another district court opinion, Cedeno v. Indymac Bancorp,

26 _____
27 ¹ In addition, the Fourth Circuit has also stated in passing that a claim under 12 U.S.C. § 2607(a)
28 "does not require an overcharge to a consumer." Boulware v. Crossland Mortgage Corp., 291 F.3d
261, 266 (4th Cir. 2002).

1 Inc., 2008 WL 3992304 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 26, 2008). However, the district court in Cedeno did not rule
2 on whether the plaintiff properly alleged a "thing of value." Rather, the court chose not to engage in this
3 analysis because it found that regardless of whether inflated appraisals constituted a "thing of value,"
4 the safe harbor provision of RESPA applied and barred the claim. Cedeno, 2008 WL 3992304, at *3.
5 In fact, Cedeno noted that "'thing of value' has been interpreted broadly to include various benefits that 6 an entity might receive in return for business referrals." Id. at *3 n.5. Therefore, EA has failed to 7 demonstrate a basis for finding a substantial ground for difference of opinion on this issue.

8 3. Safe Harbor Provision

9 The safe harbor provision in 12 U.S.C. § 2607(c)(2) states that "nothing in this section shall be 10 construed as prohibiting . . . the payment to any person of a bona fide salary or compensation or other 11 payment for goods or facilities actually furnished or for services actually rendered." In its March 9, 12 2009 order (and again in its August 30, 2009 order), the court held that this safe harbor did not bar
13 plaintiffs' claim. Because the district court in Cedeno reached the opposite conclusion in a case with 14 similar facts, EA contends there is a substantial ground for difference of opinion on this issue. It appears
15 that the plaintiff in Cedeno only argued that the appraisal was "faulty and inaccurate," rather than 16 pointing out, as the plaintiffs in this case have, that the payments alleged to violate RESPA are the 17 inflation of appraisals (not the payment for appraisal services). Cedeno, 2008 WL 3992304, at *4. As 18 alleged, this inflation of appraisals was not payment for goods or services actually rendered but rather 19 was payment for business referrals. Moreover, the mere fact that one district court came to a different 20 conclusion on the same issue is insufficient to establish a substantial ground for difference of opinion.
21 See In re Cement Antitrust Litigation, 673 F.2d at 1026 (limiting use of 28 U.S.C. § 1292 to 22 "exceptional situations").

23 4. "Referral"

24 A "referral" under RESPA occurs "whenever a person paying for a settlement service or business
25 incident thereto is required to use a particular provider of a settlement service or business incident
26 thereto." 24 C.F.R. § 3500.14(f). A "required use" occurs when "a person must use a particular 27 provider of a settlement service in order to have access to some distinct service or property, and the 28 person will pay for the settlement service of the particular provider or will pay a charge attributable, in

1 whole or in part, to the settlement service." 24 C.F.R. § 3500.2. Plaintiffs alleged that they were
2 required to use an appraiser chosen by Washington Mutual in order to obtain a loan and that they paid
3 for this appraisal service. SAC ¶¶ 34, 37, 60. In its August 30, 2009 order, the court held that plaintiffs
4 alleged a "referral" under RESPA. EA claims there is a substantial ground for difference of opinion on 5 this issue because no court has addressed this specific issue before. Mot. for Certification of 6 Interlocutory Appeal and for a Stay at 6. However, "the mere presence of a disputed issue that is a 7 question of first impression, standing alone, is insufficient to demonstrate a substantial ground for 8 difference of opinion." In re Flor, 79 F.3d 281, 284 (2nd Cir. 1996); see also White v. Nix, 43 F.3d at 9 378 ("substantial ground for difference of opinion does not exist merely because there is a dearth of 10 cases").

11 The one case that EA cites as suggesting that the court erred, Yeatman v. D.R. Horton, Inc., 577
12 F.3d 1329 (11th Cir. 2009), is inapposite. Plaintiffs in Yeatman were offered the option of a discount
13 on closing costs if they chose to use a particular mortgage lender but were not required to use that 14 mortgage lender as a condition of their contract to purchase a home. 577 F.3d at 1329-30. 24 C.F.R.
15 § 3500.2 provides that the offering of optional discounts does not constitute a "required use." Here,
16 plaintiffs alleged that they were required to use an appraiser chosen by Washington Mutual in order to 17 obtain a loan, not that they were offered the option of a discount if they used a particular appraiser. SAC
18 ¶¶ 34, 37, 60. Therefore, EA has failed to establish a substantial ground for difference of opinion.

19
20 III. ORDER

21 For the foregoing reasons, the court denies the motion for certification of interlocutory 22 appeal and for a stay of proceedings.
