proposal arguing that Spears has had plenty of time to complete discovery and the reason he has not timely completed discovery is his own lack of diligence in promptly seeking this information from Chase.

The court finds some merit in both arguments. The court's deadlines are necessary for the fair and efficient resolution of disputes and the court does not change them lightly. Nevertheless, the court is sympathetic to Spears' difficulty in compelling a third party to produce a large volume of critical documents that are apparently not readily available. Therefore, the court will extend the deadline as to the discovery from Chase until December 22, 2013, and extend some other dates to insure that defendant is not unfairly limited in its time to prepare its defense in response to additional analysis by plaintiffs of files produced by Chase. Spears will have to make his case with whatever information he can obtain by December 22, 2013.

Fact discovery remains closed as to all other matters except those, which the parties have previously agreed could extend beyond the October 15, 2013 deadline.<sup>3</sup> The court also recognizes that there are a number of motions to compel before the magistrate and leaves those issues to the magistrate's sound discretion to resolve and compel the discovery sought by the motions, if appropriate.

Defendant argues that the court should require a noticed motion before considering plaintiffs' request for a modification of the last stipulated scheduling order. The court is satisfied that it has enough information justifying the amendment set forth below without requiring additional paperwork. However, the court does agree with defendant that plaintiff must file a noticed motion before the court will consider any request to "bi-furcate [sic] the issues for trial such that liability issues be tried by the court at a date set by the court at this time, and that the issues related to statutory damages and class membership for the Class at large . . .be addressed at a later time if Plaintiffs are successful in establishing liability." &lt;sup>3</sup> EA stated in the case management statement that it did not oppose Spears' request for a limited extension of fact discovery for the deposition of Cheryl Feltgen. The parties may also complete any other limited discovery that they have agreed could be completed after the deadline.
