Joojoo Tablet: These Court Docs Show Only 90 Preorders (With 15 returned)

2. On February 11, 2010, Plaintiffs served a subpoena on PayPal, requesting records concerning PayPal accounts held in the name of Chandrasekar Rathakrishnan and Fusion Garage. According to the records Plaintiffs received from PayPal, Defendant Fusion Garage PTE Ltd. has received about 90 pre-orders for the Joojoo. Approximately 15 of these pre-orders already have been charged back or refunded. Based on these records, it appears that the pre-order monies go to an account in the name of Fusion Garage's CEO, Chandrasekar Rathakrishnan, rather than in the name of Fusion Garage, the company. Exhibit A is a true and correct copy of portions of these PayPal records summarizing the Joojoo payment account. We have redacted phone and account numbers in the interests of protecting Mr. Chandrasekar's privacy. The records showing chargebacks are lengthy and include information sufficient to identify individual buyers, so we have not attached them to this declaration.

These Paypal documents from the JooJoo/Techcrunch lawsuit show that only 90 preorders for the $500 device, roughly $44k worth, were made. This is what happens when you launch a tablet the same month as Apple, at the same price.

And 15 of those turned into cancellations (which were hard to do, we hear.) That doesn't seem like it's enough money to cover legal fees or kick production into high gear. I'm going to reiterate our stance: It seems like a great device, but you should wait for things to shake out before putting down more money. And remember, this costs as much as an iPad.
