

1 QUINN EMANUEL URQUHART OLIVER & HEDGES, LLP
 Claude M. Stern (Bar No. 96737)
 2 claudestern@quinnemanuel.com
 Patrick Doolittle (Bar No. 203659)
 3 patrickdoolittle@quinnemanuel.com
 50 California Street, 22nd Floor
 4 San Francisco, California 94111
 Telephone: (415) 875-6600
 5 Facsimile: (415) 875-6700

6 Attorneys for Defendant Fusion Garage PTE. Ltd

7
 8 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
 9 NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
 10 SAN FRANCISCO DIVISION

12 INTERSERVE, INC. dba TECHCRUNCH, a
 Delaware corporation, and CRUNCHPAD,
 13 INC., a Delaware corporation,
 14 Plaintiffs,
 15 vs.
 16 FUSION GARAGE, PTE. LTD, a Singapore company,
 17 Defendant.
 18

CASE NO. 09-cv-5812 RS

DEFENDANT FUSION GARAGE'S OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Date: May 13, 2010
 Time: 1:30 p.m.
 Dept.: Hon. Richard Seeborg

[REDACTED VERSION]

19
 20
 21
 22
 23
 24
 25
 26
 27
 28

TABLE OF CONTENTS

		Page
1
2
3	PRELIMINARY STATEMENT .....	1
4	FACTS .....	3
5	ARGUMENT .....	8
6	I. PLAINTIFFS CANNOT SHOW THEY ARE ENTITLED TO A PRELIMINARY
7	INJUNCTION .....	8
8	A. Plaintiffs Cannot Show Likelihood of Success on the Merits.....	9
9	1. Plaintiffs' Claim for Breach of Fiduciary Duty Fails. ....	9
10	(a) Mr. Arrington's Declaration and [REDACTED] Is
11	Inconsistent with a Partnership .....	9
12	(b) Plaintiffs' [REDACTED] That No Partnership
13	[REDACTED] Existed .....	10
14	(c) A Partnership Could Not Exist Where Plaintiffs Had the
15	Unilateral Right to End It. ....	11
16	(d) Plaintiffs Present No Evidence that the Parties Were Co-
17	Owners of a Business. ....	12
18	(e) The Parties' Relationship Was Subject to Contingencies That
19	Never Took Place .....	13
20	(f) Plaintiffs Proposed an Agreement with a "No Shop"
21	Provision.....	14
22	(g) No Partnership Can Be Created by Mere Acquisition
23	Negotiations .....	15
24	(h) No Partnership Existed Because the Terms were
25	Impermissibly Vague or Disputed.....	16
26	2. Plaintiffs' Claim for Fraud and Deceit Fails .....	17
27	3. Plaintiffs' Lanham Act Claim Fails .....	18
28	4. Plaintiffs' Claim for "Misappropriation of Business Ideas" Fails .....	19
	B. Plaintiffs Will Not Suffer Irreparable Harm if the Injunction Is Denied .....	20
	C. The Balance of Equities Weighs Against Plaintiffs .....	23
	D. A Preliminary Injunction Would Harm the Public Interest.....	24
	CONCLUSION .....	25

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

Page

Cases

Baden Sports, Inc. v. Molten USA, Inc.,
556 F.3d 1300 (Fed. Cir. 2009).....18

Bank of Cal. v. Connolly,
36 Cal. App. 3d 350 (1973).....9

Bustamante v. Intuit, Inc.,
141 Cal. App. 4th 199 (2006).....13, 14, 15, 16, 17

In re CMR Mortg. Fund, LLC,
416 B.R. 720 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2009).....9

City Solutions, Inc. v. Clear Channel Comm'ns,
201 F. Supp. 2d 1035 (N.D. Cal. 2001) .....13

City Solutions, Inc. v. Clear Channel Comm'n's,
201 F. Supp. 2d 1048 (N.D. Cal. 2002) .....14, 15

Clean Energy v. Applied LNG Tech. USA, LLC,
No. 08-746, 2008 WL 4384179 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 3, 2008).....20

In re Dimas, LLC,
2007 WL 2127312 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. July 23, 2007) .....15

DuFour v. Be LLC,
No. 09-3770, 2009 WL 4730897 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 7, 2009) .....22

Freudenberg Household Prods. LP v. Time, Inc.,
No. 06-399, 2006 WL 1049569 (N.D. Ill. April 18, 2006) .....24

Green Book Intern. Corp. v. InUity Corp.,
2 F. Supp. 2d 112 (D. Mass. 1998) .....23

Gulf Coast Produce, Inc. v. Am. Growers, Inc.,
No. 07-80633, 2007 WL 2302109 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 8, 2007).....21

Jack Russell Terrier Network of N. Cal. v. Am. Kennel Club, Inc., 407 F.3d 1027 (9th Cir. 2005).....18

K.C. Multimedia, Inc. v. Bank of Am. Tech. & Operations, Inc.,
171 Cal. App. 4th 939 (2009).....19

Love v. The Mail on Sunday,
489 F. Supp. 2d 1100 (C.D. Cal. 2007).....12

Mazurek v. Armstrong,
520 U.S. 968 (1997) .....8

1	Natural Selection Foods, LLC v. Premium Fresh Farms, LLC, No. 07-197, 2007 WL 128230 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2007).....	22
2
3	Nelmida v. Shelly Eurocars, Inc., 112 F.3d 380 (9th Cir. 1997).....	23
4	Pellegrini v. Weiss, 165 Cal. App. 4th 515 (2008).....	10, 11
5
6	Reebok Intern. Ltd v. Marnatech. Enter., Inc., 970 F.2d 552 (9th Cir, 1992).....	22
7	Robert Bosch LLC v. Pylon Mfg. Co., 632 F. Supp. 2d 362 (D. Del. 2009).....	18
8
9	Smith v. MPIRE Holdings, LLC, No. 08-0549, 2009 WL 804069 (M.D. Tenn. March 25, 2009).....	21
10	In Re Tower Automotive Sec. Litig., 483 F. Supp. 2d 327 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).....	17
11
12	Weiner v. Fleischman, 54 Cal. 3d 476 (1991).....	9
13	Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 129 S. Ct. 365 (2008).....	8, 19, 20, 22
14

Statutes

15
16	Cal. Corp. Code § 16202.....	9
17

Miscellaneous

18
19	Charles Alan Wright & Arthur Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure § 2948 (2d ed. 1995).....	8 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

1 Preliminary Statement

2 Plaintiffs' Motion for a Preliminary Injunction (the "Motion") is baseless and should be
3 denied.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff Interserve, Inc. dba TechCrunch ("TechCrunch") is an Internet "blog" founded
4 by blogger Michael Arrington. Mr. Arrington also formed another company, Plaintiff
5 CrunchPad, Inc. ("CP Inc.") to acquire Defendant Fusion Garage PTE Ltd. ("Fusion Garage") and
6 its software and web tablet technology. After the parties' acquisition talks fell through, plaintiffs
7 filed this lawsuit.<sup>2</sup>

8 Plaintiffs' motivation in bringing the Motion was to use this Court to strangle Fusion
9 Garage's business. The ill-conceived Motion seeks specific, yet drastic, relief: plaintiffs seek to 10 impound Fusion Garage's revenues in a Court-controlled account, a move designed to kill Fusion
11 Garage. Plaintiffs present no competent evidence to support the Motion. To the contrary, the 12 declaration of Michael Arrington in support of the Motion contains—

13 [REDACTED] Rather than seeking legal
14 redress based on colorable claims, Mr. Arrington (through his companies) is acting like a jilted
15 girlfriend because he is embarrassed that he was unable to close an acquisition and offer a product
16 he had promised his Internet blogging community. Having failed to acquire Fusion Garage,
17 plaintiffs claim that, in the course of acquiring Fusion Garage, they became "partners" with Fusion
18 Garage. [REDACTED]

19 [REDACTED]
20 [REDACTED] Plaintiffs' argument that a partnership existed is absurd in light of Mr.
21 Arrington's own declaration. He attests that "[t]he parties agreed that each would bear its own 22 losses of time energy and money if the project was not successful, and share profits if it was."
23 (Arrington Decl. ¶ 31). A partnership is an agreement to share profits and losses—not, as Mr.
24 Arrington wants, an agreement for him to share in Fusion Garage's upside but have Fusion Garage
25 bear the entire downside risk. (Remarkably, although Mr. Arrington swore to this "partnership"

26
27 <sup>1</sup> To be blunt, the Motion constitutes sanctionable conduct.

28 <sup>2</sup> In discovery, plaintiffs have disavowed any intellectual property infringement claim.

1 relationship in his declaration, [REDACTED]
2 [REDACTED]. [REDACTED]
3 [REDACTED].

4 Those are not the actions of a partner. Plaintiffs nowhere define the terms of the supposed
5 partnership, either.<sup>3</sup>

6 Plaintiffs also cannot show irreparable injury. [REDACTED] Mr.
7 Arrington attests that “it is not inconceivable that TechCrunch could start over and develop a new
8 device.” (Arrington Decl. ¶ 33). This is almost comical: perhaps it is not inconceivable that Mr.
9 Arrington could one day become President of the United States, but this is no basis to seek a
10 recount of the 2008 Presidential election. The Ninth Circuit has not yet endorsed a “not 11 inconceivable” test for the award of injunctive relief. TechCrunch's 30(b)(6) witness (Mr.
12 Arrington) also admitted in deposition that [REDACTED]

13 [REDACTED]. Plaintiffs argue in conclusory
14 fashion that “Fusion Garage is a financially unstable start-up that can only remain viable by 15 dissipating revenues,” but they proffer no competent evidence to support this contention. In fact,
16 the opposite is true: Fusion Garage has raised significant funding and has released its product.

17 Finally, plaintiffs are asking this Court to do equity, but plaintiffs’ misconduct in this case
18 does not entitle them to equity. They supported the Motion with a lawyer-concocted declaration,
19 then proffered a 30(b)(6) deponent who [REDACTED]

20 [REDACTED] While
21 Plaintiffs have used their public position and blog to embark on a public relations campaign
22 designed to tarnish and embarrass Fusion Garage, they designated the entire 30(b)(6) deposition
23 confidential to shield the testimony. (Fusion Garage does not believe almost anything in the 24 transcript is confidential, but has lodged it under seal to comply with the Protective Order in the 25 case.) Equity is not in Plaintiffs' favor and the Motion should be denied.

26 _____
27 <sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs do not allege or argue the existence of any acquisition agreement, partnership
28 agreement, joint venture agreement, NDA, or any contract at all between the parties.

1 Facts

2 The TechCrunch Blog and Arrington's Public Offer regarding Development of a

3 Web Tablet. Plaintiff TechCrunch is a publisher of technology-oriented blogs and other web
4 media. (Cmpl. ¶ 3). Its founder and editor is Michael Arrington. (Arrington Decl. ¶ 1). In 5 July 2008, Mr. Arrington publicly posted a challenge on the Internet "to himself and the world" to 6 build "a dead simple web tablet for $200." (Cmpl. ¶ 11). He solicited the public at large to assist 7 on the project and stated "[i]f everything works well, we'd then open source the design and
8 software and let anyone build one that wants to." (Id.) (emphasis added). This point cannot be
9 over-emphasized: Mr. Arrington conceded in his deposition that [REDACTED]

10 [REDACTED]
11 [REDACTED] TechCrunch eventually planned to call the web tablet a "CrunchPad." (Cmpl. ¶¶4 & 13).
12 Mr. Arrington also formed a corporation CP Inc. to "commercialize the CrunchPad." (Id. ¶ 4).

13 Prototype A. Plaintiffs allege that by August 30, 2008, they had constructed a Prototype
14 A of the web tablet. The prototype was still crude as it "was still far from having beta units." (Id.
15 ¶ 12). Plaintiffs "posted pictures and a description" of the prototype on the Internet in a blog post.
16 (Id.) Plaintiffs revealed in that post that it was "[a] humble (and messy) beginning. Prototype A
17 has been built. It's in a temporary aluminum case that a local sheet metal shop put together."
18 (Rathakrishnan Decl., Ex. E).<sup>4</sup> Fusion Garage had no involvement with Prototype A. (Id. ¶ 31).

19 Fusion Garage Meets TechCrunch/Arrington in September 2008. Fusion Garage, a
20 Singapore-based software and technology company, formed in February 2008. (Id. ¶ 2). Fusion
21 Garage's CEO, Chandrasekhar Rathakrishnan, first met Arrington at a conference called
22 "TechCrunch 50" in September 2008. (Id. ¶ 10). Fusion Garage had already developed a
23 customized browser operating system by this point. (Id. ¶ 9). After learning about Fusion
24 Garage's technology and development efforts, TechCrunch eventually offered to pursue an 25 acquisition of Fusion Garage. (Id. ¶ 10).

26 _____
27 <sup>4</sup> In addition to his declaration, Fusion Garage is submitting certain excerpts of Mr.
28 Rathakrishnan's deposition transcript.

1           The Early Acquisition Negotiations. In December 2008, Plaintiffs sent a Letter of Intent
2 to acquire Fusion Garage. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 11 and Ex. B). The Letter of Intent contained a
3 60 day no-shop clause, clearly indicating that [REDACTED]
4 [REDACTED]). The parties never signed
5 this Letter of Intent, although they continued over the ensuing months to have on-and-off verbal
6 and email discussions about a potential acquisition. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 11). The parties’
7 acquisition discussions during this period were relatively limited, due in part to the fact that Mr.
8 Arrington took time off from TechCrunch for personal reasons in early 2009. (Id. ¶ 12).

9           Prototype B. In January 2009, while the parties were still in sporadic acquisition
10 discussions, TechCrunch published a blog post announcing “Prototype B” of the web tablet. (Id. ¶
11 32). Prototype B did not use Fusion Garage’s customized operating system, nor did Fusion Garage
12 have any input into the hardware for this prototype. (Id. ¶ 33). In fact, the hardware for Prototype
13 B was essentially components scavenged from personal computers and other devices, held
14 together by case that TechCrunch had designed. (Id. ¶ 34).

15           Fusion Garage Creates Its Own Web Tablet. Around February 2009, Louis Monier –
16 someone hired by TechCrunch to help build Prototype B – informed Fusion Garage that the 17 TechCrunch web tablet project “had no legs.” (Id. ¶ 35). Mr. Monier advised Fusion Garage to 18 figure out its own plans. (Id.) Before this exchange with Mr. Monier, Fusion Garage had largely 19 focused on developing its browser-based software rather than building hardware for a web tablet.
20 After this exchange, however, Fusion Garage started in earnest to develop both web tablet
21 hardware and software. (Id. ¶ 36).

22           “All the Credit Should Go to Fusion Garage.” Fusion Garage presented its new web
23 tablet (running software that Fusion Garage had begun developing in late 2008) to Mr. Arrington
24 and TechCrunch in April 2009. (Id. ¶ 37). Impressed with Fusion Garage’s web tablet, Mr.
25 Arrington wrote a blog post highlighting this device – which TechCrunch adopted and called 26 “Prototype C.” (Id. ¶ 38). Mr. Arrington’s blog post stated that “the ID and hardware work was 27 driven by Fusion Garage, “referred to Fusion Garage as “rock stars,” and stated that “[i]n fact, all
28 the credit should go to Fusion Garage.” (Rathakrishnan Decl., Ex. G). Indeed, TechCrunch itself

1 had played no role in the development of the web tablet that Mr. Arrington called "Prototype C."
2 The hardware and software for this device were designed and developed entirely by Fusion
3 Garage. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 40; [REDACTED])

4 The Continued Acquisition Negotiations. The successful demonstration of "Prototype
5 C" also had the effect of causing Mr. Arrington to reinvigorate acquisition discussions.
6 (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 37). Specifically, Mr. Arrington offered another deal in June 2009 in
7 which Fusion Garage would be acquired in exchange for equity in CP Inc. – the company
8 TechCrunch had set up to commercialize a web tablet. After Fusion Garage equivocated on 9 whether this deal would be acceptable to Fusion Garage, Arrington rescinded the offer on June 27.
10 (Cmpl. Ex. B) (e-mail from Arrington to Rathakrishnan, June 27, 2009 2:17 p.m.) ("You don't
11 seem to be able to speak authoritatively for your investors [sic] and creditors. For reputation
12 reasons I'm forced to notify our investors that the deal is off.") In response, Rathakrishnan
13 proposed a counteroffer whereby Fusion Garage would be acquired for 40% interest in CP Inc.,
14 although he also expressed willingness to go forward on a 35% equity offer, so long as the deal
15 addressed the treatment or repayment of certain loans. (Id.) (e-mail from Rathakrishnan to 16 Arrington, June 27, 2009 3:01 p.m.); see also Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 17). After this exchange, no
17 acquisition term sheet or letter of intent was sent to Fusion Garage, nor was one ever signed.
18 (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 18).

19 Nonetheless, throughout the middle of 2009, the parties continued engaging in meetings,
20 due diligence, and product demonstrations in hopes of consummating an acquisition. For instance,
21 Mr. Rathakrishnan spent time at TechCrunch's offices from April through June 2009 to engage in 22 acquisition discussions and meet with potential third-party investors to fund an acquisition. (Id. ¶¶
23 46-47). Likewise, TechCrunch personnel Brian Kindle and Nik Cubrilovic traveled to Fusion
24 Garage's Singapore offices in the summer of 2009 to conduct due diligence on both Fusion
25 Garage and Pegatron Corp., the designated original device manufacturer (ODM) for the web
26 tablet. (Id. ¶¶ 49-51). [REDACTED]

27 [REDACTED]
28 [REDACTED]

1           Arrington Threatens To Unwind “the Project.” Neither the Complaint nor any other
2 paper filed in this case defines the metes and bounds of what plaintiffs allege to be a joint venture
3 or partnership between themselves and Fusion Garage. However, Mr. Arrington has since
4 declared that the venture was only “joint” as to potential profits, not potential losses. (Arrington
5 Decl. ¶ 31) (“The parties agreed that each would bear its own losses of time, energy, and money if
6 the project was not successful, and to share profits if it was.”) Even more remarkably, the “joint
7 venture” was apparently terminable at will by plaintiffs, but not by Fusion Garage: While plaintiffs
8 have sued Fusion Garage for walking away from the supposed joint venture, Arrington threatened to 9 unilaterally “turn the project off” on at least two occasions. (Id. ¶ 21; Cmpl. ¶¶ 28 & 32).

10           The End of the Acquisition Negotiations. In October 2009, TechCrunch CEO Heather
11 Harde sent Fusion Garage a capitalization table proposing that CP Inc. acquire Fusion Garage for 12 23.5% equity. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 19 and Ex. D). This figure was obviously less than the 35%
13 that Plaintiffs swear (in the Arrington Declaration at ¶ 19) that Fusion Garage had previously
14 agreed to. Fusion Garage, in turn, counter-offered with a different deal structure whereby
15 TechCrunch and/or CP Inc. would obtain 10% equity in Fusion Garage as part of an acquisition.
16 (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 20). The parties never reached agreement on an acquisition. The parties
17 never even agreed on how much equity TechCrunch and Fusion Garage each would have in a new 18 acquiring entity, or whether TechCrunch would obtain an equity stake in Fusion Garage as part of 19 a different deal structure. (Id. ¶ 21). Nor was any non-disclosure agreement, development
20 agreement, or any other contract signed between the parties. (Id. ¶¶ 22-24).

21           The JooJoo Product. After discontinuing negotiations with TechCrunch, Fusion Garage
22 publicly announced the release of its web tablet, the JooJoo, on December 7, 2009. (Cmpl. ¶ 44).
23 Three days later, on December 10, 2009, plaintiffs filed this lawsuit.

24           TechCrunch's 30(b)(6) Deponent Refused to Answer Questions. Fusion Garage
25 noticed the deposition of TechCrunch's 30(b)(6) witness on a number of topics relevant to this 26 lawsuit. (Doolittle Decl., Ex. D (deposition notice)). TechCrunch designated Mr. Arrington—the 27 same person who submitted the declaration in support of the Motion—as its witness. ██████████,
28 ██████████

1 [REDACTED]
2 [REDACTED]
3 [REDACTED] on
4 [REDACTED]
5 [REDACTED]
6 [REDACTED]
7 [REDACTED]
8 [REDACTED]
9 [REDACTED]
10 [REDACTED]
11 [REDACTED]
12 [REDACTED]
13 [REDACTED] en
14 [REDACTED]
15 [REDACTED]
16 [REDACTED]
17 [REDACTED]
18 [REDACTED]
19 [REDACTED]
20 [REDACTED]
21 [REDACTED]
22 [REDACTED]
23 [REDACTED]
24 [REDACTED]

25
26
27
28

5

[REDACTED]

1 [REDACTED]
2 [REDACTED]
3 [REDACTED]
4 [REDACTED]
5 [REDACTED]
6 [REDACTED]
7 [REDACTED]
8 [REDACTED]
9 [REDACTED]
10 [REDACTED]
11 [REDACTED] bt
12 [REDACTED]
13 [REDACTED]
14 [REDACTED]
15 [REDACTED]
16 [REDACTED]
17 [REDACTED]
18 [REDACTED] n.
19 [REDACTED]

20 Argument

21 I. PLAINTIFFS CANNOT SHOW THEY ARE ENTITLED TO A PRELIMINARY
22 INJUNCTION

23 A party seeking a preliminary injunction has the burden to establish the following four 24 elements: “[1] that he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable
25 harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4]

26 _____
27 <sup>6</sup> [REDACTED] n
28 [REDACTED]

1 that an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 129 S. Ct.
2 365, 374 (2008). A preliminary injunction is an “extraordinary and drastic remedy, one that
3 should not be granted unless the movant, by a clear showing, carries the burden of persuasion.”
4 Mazurek v. Armstrong, 520 U.S. 968, 972 (1997) (quoting 11A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur
5 Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure § 2948 (2d ed. 1995)) (emphasis in original). Plaintiffs do
6 not carry their burden of establishing any of the four elements necessary to secure an injunction.

7 A. Plaintiffs Cannot Show Likelihood of Success on the Merits

8 1. Plaintiffs' Claim for Breach of Fiduciary Duty Fails.

9 Plaintiffs’ breach of fiduciary duty claim arises from their contention that they were 10 members of a partnership or joint venture with Fusion Garage. Under California law, “the 11 association of two or more persons to carry on as coowners a business for profit forms a
12 partnership, whether or not the persons intend to form a partnership.” Cal. Corp. Code § 16202.
13 A “joint venture” is functionally similar to a partnership, except that a joint venture is usually 14 formed for a specific set of transactions while a partnership is more indefinite. See Bank of Cal. v.
15 Connolly, 36 Cal. App. 3d 350, 364 (1973). Due to the similarity of these two relationships, “the 16 courts freely apply partnership law to joint ventures when appropriate.” Weiner v. Fleischman, 54
17 Cal. 3d 476, 482 (1991).

18 (a) Mr. Arrington’s Declaration and Oral Testimony Is Inconsistent
19 with a Partnership

20 The declaration plaintiffs filed to support the Motion contains an admission that is fatal to 21 plaintiffs’ position that a partnership existed. See Arrington Decl. ¶ 31. Specifically, Mr.
22 Arrington attests that “[t]he parties agreed that each would bear its own losses of time, energy, and 23 money if the project was not successful, and to share profits if it was.” Id. [REDACTED]

24 [REDACTED]

25 [REDACTED] Nonetheless, Mr. Arrington’s statement, were it
26 true, conclusively establishes that there was no partnership, because a partnership is an agreement
27 to share profits and losses. See In re CMR Mortg. Fund, LLC, 416 B.R. 720, 733 (Bankr. N.D.
28 Cal. 2009) (“A partnership involves two or more people who contribute capital or labor with an

1 understanding that they will proportionately share profits and losses”). There is no agreement to
2 be partners if there is an upside and not be partners if there is a downside. Indeed, plaintiffs’
3 position is convenient, because it allows them to claim most of Fusion Garage’s profits if the
4 JooJoo is successful but disclaim any financial responsibility if the JooJoo’s costs end up
5 exceeding its revenues. Simply put, Mr. Arrington’s statements belie the existence of a
6 partnership, and without a partnership there can be no breach of fiduciary duty.

7 [REDACTED]
8 [REDACTED] For instance, Mr. Arrington’s declaration attests that “on November 17 –
9 in an email that Defendant concedes ‘came out of the blue’ – Fusion Garage aborted the 10 partnership.” (Arrington Decl. ¶ 25). [REDACTED]

11 [REDACTED]
12 [REDACTED]
13 [REDACTED]
14 [REDACTED]
15 [REDACTED]
16 [REDACTED]
17 [REDACTED]
18 [REDACTED]
19 [REDACTED]
20 [REDACTED]
21 [REDACTED]
22 [REDACTED] Perhaps we will never know. Mr. Arrington’s own [REDACTED]
23 shift [REDACTED] underscores why plaintiffs have
24 no likelihood of success on their partnership/fiduciary duty claim.

25 (b) Plaintiffs’ [REDACTED]
26 [REDACTED] Proves That No Partnership Existed

27 Fiduciary duties in a partnership are reciprocal. See Pellegrini v. Weiss, 165 Cal. App. 4th 28 515, 524-525 (2008) (“partners or joint venturers have a fiduciary duty to act with the highest good

1 faith towards each other regarding affairs of the partnership or joint venture.”) (emphasis added).

2 Yet plaintiffs’ own documents prove that [REDACTED]

3 [REDACTED]
4 [REDACTED]
5 [REDACTED]
6 [REDACTED]
7 [REDACTED]
8 [REDACTED]
9 [REDACTED]
10 [REDACTED]
11 [REDACTED]

12 [REDACTED] Given that fiduciary duties in a partnership are reciprocal, plaintiffs’
13 clear belief that they did not owe fiduciary duties to Fusion Garage demonstrates that no
14 partnership existed between the parties.

15 (c) A Partnership Could Not Exist Where Plaintiffs Had the
16 Unilateral Right to End It.

17 Plaintiffs’ allegations that Fusion Garage was working in a joint venture with them
18 contradict their allegations that Michael Arrington tried to control “the project” by unilaterally
19 threatening to end “the project” on numerous occasions. (Cmpl. ¶ 28 (“For reputational reasons I’m 20 forced to notify our investors the deal is off. At this point it looks like our position is to turn the 21 project off completely.”); id. ¶ 32 (“On August 31 . . . TechCrunch again threatened to shut down the

22 _____
23 [REDACTED]
24 [REDACTED]
25 [REDACTED]
26 [REDACTED]
27 [REDACTED]
28 [REDACTED]

1 collaboration.”)). Mr. Arrington specifically attests that in summer of 2009, “[t]here was significant
2 friction during this period, and TechCrunch seriously considered ending the joint project.”
3 (Arrington Decl. ¶ 21).

4 Plaintiffs’ breach of fiduciary duty claim, premised on a partnership or joint venture, is
5 flatly inconsistent with TechCrunch’s and Arrington’s position that they had the unilateral ability
6 to “turn the project off completely” or “end[] the joint project,” because the fiduciary duties in a
7 partnership or joint venture are reciprocal. Pellegrini, 165 Cal. App. 4th at 524-525. Yet plaintiffs’
8 position is that that Fusion Garage had a fiduciary duty to sustain the alleged partnership or joint 9 venture at the whim of TechCrunch while TechCrunch and Arrington could end the relationship at 10 any time. Such asymmetry is inconsistent with a partnership or joint venture under the law.

11 (d) Plaintiffs Present No Evidence that the Parties Were Co-Owners
12 of a Business.

13 Another fundamental reason that the parties’ relationship was not a partnership or a joint 14 venture is that they were not in business together. TechCrunch’s complaint is replete with 15 allegations that the parties jointly created the CrunchPad device and that TechCrunch made
16 contributions to the device. See, e.g., Cmpl. ¶¶ 35; 71 (“Defendant and TechCrunch personnel
17 collaborated to develop the CrunchPad’s hardware, software, and industrial components”).
18 However, a partnership is an association to carry on a business, and cannot simply be an 19 association to create a device. For instance, in Love v. The Mail on Sunday, 489 F. Supp. 2d 1100
20 (C.D. Cal. 2007), Beach Boys member Mike Love brought suit against bandmate Brian Wilson
21 alleging breach of fiduciary duty based on an alleged songwriting partnership. Id. at 1102. It was 22 undisputed that Love and Wilson co-wrote songs. Id. at 1106. However, there was no evidence
23 that they acted as co-owners of a business to sell or license those songs, and thus the court held
24 that there was no partnership as a matter of law. Id. at 1106-07.

25 As in Love, there was no business understanding between plaintiffs and Fusion Garage,
26 even assuming arguendo that they did collaborate to create the CrunchPad device. As discussed
27 further below, plaintiffs have failed to prove any mutual understanding between the parties
28 regarding: (a) how the profits from their alleged business would be divided; (b) how the equity in

1 the alleged business would be divided; or (c) who would have managerial control over the alleged
2 business. Absent any understanding on even the most basic aspects of a business, there could be
3 no partnership as a matter of law.

4 (e) The Parties' Relationship Was Subject to Contingencies That
5 Never Took Place

6 Plaintiffs' breach of fiduciary duty claim also fails because the alleged partnership was
7 contingent upon certain events that did not occur. The project to commercialize the CrunchPad
8 was contingent upon CP Inc. receiving adequate outside funding. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 13;

9 [REDACTED]
10 [REDACTED] Moreover, the project was contingent
11 upon CP Inc. acquiring Fusion Garage – at which point the software and hardware that Fusion
12 Garage had developed would be owned by the entity. Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 13; [REDACTED]

13 [REDACTED]
14 [REDACTED]

15 If the “partnership” was contingent upon outside finding or an acquisition of Fusion
16 Garage, and these events never occurred, then the partnership was stillborn and never truly
17 existed. Bustamante v. Inuit, Inc., 141 Cal. App. 4th 199 (2006). In Bustamante, plaintiff alleged 18 breach of a joint venture to develop software adapted for users in Mexico. Id. at 207. The court,
19 however, held that no enforceable joint venture existed. It reasoned that the alleged joint venture
20 was contingent upon the parties' receiving outside funding – and until that funding was in place,
21 there were no fiduciary obligations on the parties. See id. at 212-13 (“There could be no launch of
22 Intuit Mexico without its formation, no formation without funding, and no funding without a
23 commitment from venture capitalists or private investors. The failure of the parties' money-
24 raising efforts meant that they were unable to create a working relationship with each other, and 25 consequently, no obligation arose or could arise to ‘form and launch’ the company on any terms.”) 26 (emphasis in original); id. at 213 (“the parties always understood that it would not be possible to 27 ‘form and launch’ Intuit Mexico without significant third-party involvement in the enterprise.
28

1 Clearly there was no expression of mutual consent to create a company without investor
2 financing”).

3 Similarly, in City Solutions, Inc. v. Clear Channel Comm'ns, 201 F. Supp. 2d 1035 (N.D.
4 Cal. 2001), the court rejected plaintiff's argument that the parties had entered into a joint venture
5 to bid on a city contract to install newsracks. While the parties had several meetings about a joint
6 bidding arrangement, the court reasoned that their "agreement" to submit a joint bid was subject to 7 the condition that they also agree on what their joint business model would look like if they won
8 the contract and had to install the newsracks. See id. at 1042 ("The evidence here unmistakably
9 shows that plaintiff and Eller never reached a 'closed' and 'discrete' agreement to bid together on 10 April 13. Instead, it shows that any such agreement was always subject to agreement upon the 11 parties' eventual business relationship, making it nothing more than an unenforceable 'agreement
12 to agree.'") (emphasis added). Here, plaintiffs' sworn interrogatory responses reveal that, at most,
13 they had an agreement to collaborate—an "agreement to agree." Doolittle Decl., Ex. E
14 (Supplemental Response to Interrogatory No. 8) ("In late September 2008, the Interserve, Inc.
15 [sic] and Fusion Garage agreed to collaborate on the project.").

16 Under Bustamante and City Solutions, [REDACTED]
17 [REDACTED]
18 [REDACTED] no partnership
19 existed and the parties did not owe fiduciary duties to each other. At best, they had an agreement
20 to agree, which as a matter of law does not form a partnership.

21 (f) Plaintiffs Proposed an Agreement with a "No Shop" Provision

22 When the parties were in discussions for an acquisition, plaintiffs submitted a draft
23 acquisition agreement to Fusion Garage. (Rathakrishnan Decl., Ex. B). That agreement contained
24 a limited "no-shop" provision that allowed Fusion Garage to "shop" itself to other suitors if the 25

26 8
27 [REDACTED]
28 [REDACTED]

1 acquisition did not occur within 60 days. Id. This “no-shop” provision is flatly inconsistent with
2 plaintiffs’ partnership allegations. If the parties were in a partnership and owed fiduciary duties to
3 each other, then plaintiffs’ proposed language allowing Fusion Garage to abandon plaintiffs and
4 merge with a third party after 60 days would be nonsensical. In short, plaintiffs’ attempts to 5 impose a contractual 60-day “no-shop” period on Fusion Garage proves that the parties did not
6 have any extra-contractual fiduciary duties arising from a partnership or joint venture.

7 (g) No Partnership Can Be Created by Mere Acquisition
8 Negotiations

9 Plaintiffs’ breach of fiduciary duty claim also fails because the business relationship was 10 nothing more than a set of acquisition negotiations that went sour. As the City Solutions court
11 held (in a later opinion), mere negotiators are not subject to fiduciary duties. City Solutions, Inc.
12 v. Clear Channel Commn’s, 201 F. Supp. 2d 1048, 1051 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (“This Court will not
13 chill future negotiations (and severely limit eligible pools of bidders in the process) by making
14 negotiators subject to fiduciary duties, including an obligation not to compete for the same bid,
15 where such negotiations fall short of an agreement to bid together.”) At best, plaintiffs and Fusion
16 Garage engaged in a set of unsuccessful acquisition discussions that did not create fiduciary duties
17 between the parties.

18 Plaintiffs attempt to portray the acquisition negotiations as successful, suggesting that 19 Fusion Garage agreed in June 2009 to merge into CP Inc. in exchange for 35% of CP Inc’s equity.
20 See Mot. at 3 (“By the end of June in 2009, the parties had agreed to the basic terms of their
21 eventual plan to merge Fusion Garage into CrunchPad, Inc., with Fusion Garage receiving 35% of 22 the merged company’s stock.”) Yet the parties’ later actions confirm that that there was never an
23 agreement to merge the companies on any terms. For instance, in October 2009 – four months
24 after the parties supposedly agreed to a acquisition with a 35-65% equity split – TechCrunch CEO
25 Heather Harde proposed an acquisition offer by which Fusion Garage would receive just 23.5%
26 equity in CP Inc. (Rathakrishnan Decl., Ex. D). Harde’s October 2009 counteroffer demonstrates 27 that the acquisition negotiations were not successful back in June 2009. Indeed, the acquisition
28 negotiations were not successful at any point. As City Solutions held, it is would be improper to

1 the Complaint alleges that “the project” existed before Mr. Rathakrishnan of Fusion Garage had
2 even been introduced to TechCrunch or Mr. Arrington in September 2008. (Id. ¶ 12). Mr.
3 Arrington attested in his declaration when the “partnership” ended, (Arrington Decl. ¶ 25). [REDACTED]

4 [REDACTED]
5 [REDACTED]
6 Because plaintiffs’ breach of fiduciary duty claim is hopelessly ambiguous as to what the 7 terms of the partnership were, as to whom Fusion Garage owed a fiduciary duty, and [REDACTED]
8 [REDACTED] this claim cannot succeed as a matter of law. See, e.g., Bustamante, 141 Cal.
9 App. 4th at 211.

10 2. Plaintiffs’ Claim for Fraud and Deceit Fails

11 Plaintiffs’ fraud claim also has no likelihood of success – not least because Fusion Garage
12 never made any misrepresentations. For instance, plaintiffs’ Motion alleges that “Fusion Garage
13 repeatedly promised to merge with TechCrunch” (Mot. at 10) and further specifies that “Mr.
14 Rathakrishnan confirmed that he had spoken with his investors and creditors and they would agree
15 to merge with CrunchPad in exchange for 35 percent equity in the new company.” (Id. at 11). Yet
16 this allegation is belied that fact that, just weeks before the acquisition talks broke down for good
17 in November 2009, TechCrunch CEO Heather Harde sent Fusion Garage a written acquisition
18 offer of 23.5% just equity. (Rathakrishnan Decl., Ex. D). As discussed above, this October 2009
19 counteroffer by Harde shows that Fusion Garage had never “promised” to be acquired at any 20 previous juncture. The parties were still in acquisition negotiations until the bitter end.

21 Plaintiffs also allege fraud based on the fact that Fusion Garage registered the domain name
22 “thejoojoo.com” on November 10, roughly a week before Rathakrishnan informed Arrington that 23 the negotiations were seemingly at an impasse. (Mot. at 10). Yet by this point, the acquisition
24 negotiations had been dragging on for months with no deal in sight. Fusion Garage’s registry of 25 “thejoojoo.com” was simply part of Fusion Garage’s contingency plan for striking out alone, given 26 the increasingly likely chance that it might never reach an agreeable business deal with plaintiffs.
27 (Rathakrishnan Decl., ¶ 59). [REDACTED]
28 [REDACTED]

1 [REDACTED]
2 [REDACTED]
3 Likewise, the fact that Fusion Garage set up a contingency plan in case acquisition negotiations fell
4 through does not show that Fusion Garage engaged in any fraudulent conduct. See In Re Tower
5 Automotive Sec. Litig., 483 F. Supp. 2d 327, 347-48 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (holding that company did not 6 engage in fraud for failing to disclose its “contingency plan” of possibly filing for bankruptcy).

7 Plaintiffs next argue that Fusion Garage fraudulently concealed the loss of Pegatron as an 8 ODM in October 2009. (Mot. at 10). But this argument makes no sense in light of plaintiffs'
9 allegations and arguments. If TechCrunch was involved in the development of Fusion Garage's
10 product as it claims, and provided leadership, ongoing support, and contributions on a daily basis as 11 it claims, it would have known that Fusion Garage parted ways with Pegatron. (Rathakrishnan Decl.
12 ¶ 57).

13 Finally, plaintiffs allege that Fusion Garage fraudulently “claimed to have developed a
14 browser-based operating system that turned out to be an off-the-shelf browser with minor
15 variations.” (Mot. at 10). Plaintiffs are wrong. It is true – not false – that Fusion Garage developed
16 its own operating system. While this operating system did include a common Linux kernel, it
17 merged this kernel with a webkit rendering engine to create a unique operating system.
18 (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 40).

19 3. Plaintiffs’ Lanham Act Claim Fails

20 Plaintiffs’ Lanham Act claim has no likelihood of success for the threshold reason that 21 plaintiffs cannot show a “competitive injury” (as they have no competing product) and therefore
22 lack standing. See Jack Russell Terrier Network of N. Cal. v. Am. Kennel Club, Inc., 407
23 F.3d 1027, 1037 (9th Cir. 2005). Fusion Garage addressed plaintiffs’ lack of standing in its Motion
24 to Dismiss, to Strike, and for a More Definite Statement (“Motion to Dismiss”) and incorporates
25 those arguments by reference. [REDACTED] t

26 [REDACTED]
27 [REDACTED] s
28 [REDACTED]

1 undetermined future time. Arrington Decl., ¶33 (“it is not inconceivable that TechCrunch could
2 start over and develop a new device for the same market Fusion Garage presently is trying to
3 misappropriate for itself.”) (emphasis added). [REDACTED]

4 [REDACTED]’s
5 [REDACTED] are not “harmful to the plaintiffs’ ability to compete with the defendant.”
6 Jack Russell Terrier, 407 F.3d at 1037.

7 Fusion Garage also explained in their Motion to Dismiss that the Lanham Act claim fails
8 because statements that merely take credit for the creation of a product cannot give rise to false
9 advertising liability under the Lanham Act. See Baden Sports, Inc. v. Molten USA, Inc., 556
10 F.3d 1300, 1307 (Fed. Cir. 2009); Robert Bosch LLC v. Pylon Mfg. Co., 632 F. Supp. 2d 362, 366
11 (D. Del. 2009). Fusion Garage further explained in its Motion to Dismiss that the Lanham Act
12 claim fails because plaintiffs are complaining about true statements. For instance, Fusion Garage
13 did design the hardware for the JooJoo. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 40). For the reasons explained in 14 the Motion to Dismiss, the Lanham Act claim fails and certainly does not warrant injunctive relief.

15 4. Plaintiffs’ Claim for “Misappropriation of Business Ideas” Fails

16 Tellingly, plaintiffs’ Motion does not even allege a likelihood of success on their 17 “misappropriation of business ideas” claim. The Motion does not even mention this claim, except 18 to argue defensively in two sentences that this claim is not pre-empted by the California Uniform
19 Trade Secrets Act (CUTSA). (Mot., 13).

20 Because plaintiffs do not allege a likelihood of success on the “business ideas” claim,
21 Fusion Garage will not address this claim at length here and respectfully refers the Court to Fusion
22 Garage’s Motion to Dismiss for a more complete analysis of why this claim fails as a matter of 23 law. Nonetheless, it should be noted that plaintiffs’ attempt to avoid CUTSA pre-emption is 24 unfounded. It would wholly vitiate the principles of CUTSA pre-emption if plaintiffs were 25 allowed to repackage their would-be trade secrets as “business ideas” and bring a common-law
26 “business ideas” claim, especially given that “CUTSA’s ‘comprehensive structure and breadth’
27 suggests a legislative intent to occupy the field.” K.C. Multimedia, Inc. v. Bank of Am. Tech. &
28 Operations, Inc., 171 Cal. App. 4th 939, 957 (2009). The Court should reject plaintiffs’ artful

1 attempt to plead around CUTSA and should find that the “misappropriation of business ideas”
2 claim is pre-empted.

3 B. Plaintiffs Will Not Suffer Irreparable Harm if the Injunction Is Denied

4 A plaintiff cannot show it will suffer irreparable harm in the absence of a preliminary
5 injunction “based only on a possibility of irreparable harm.” Winter, 129 S. Ct. at 375. Rather,
6 “plaintiffs seeking preliminary relief [must] demonstrate that irreparable injury is likely in the 7 absence of an injunction.” Id. (emphasis in original). Moreover, a plaintiff must make a “clear
8 showing” that it is entitled to the “extraordinary remedy” of injunctive relief. Id. at 376. Plaintiffs
9 cannot come close to satisfying this standard. To the contrary, Fusion Garage would suffer
10 irreparable injury if an injunction issue, and plaintiffs face no irreparable injury if one does not.

11 First, plaintiffs have no product, yet claim “it is not inconceivable that TechCrunch could 12 start over and develop a new device.” (Arrington Decl. ¶ 33). Such a mere possibility is 13 insufficient. Winter, 129 S. Ct. at 375

14 The only “irreparable injury” that plaintiffs argue is that Fusion Garage may “dissipate” its 15 assets and leave plaintiffs with no money to collect should plaintiffs ultimately win this case on 16 the merits. See Mot. at 7 (“Fusion Garage is a financially unstable foreign start-up that can only 17 remain viable by dissipating revenues from sales of the JooJoo.”)

18 [REDACTED]
19 [REDACTED]
20 [REDACTED] To the
21 contrary, the evidence shows that Fusion Garage is a well-capitalized company. For instance,
22 Fusion Garage has raised $3.4 million in funding to date and expects to close on another round of 23 $3 million funding within a month. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 64). This significant funding belies
24 plaintiff’s suggestion that Fusion Garage is so “financially unstable” that the Court must freeze its 25 revenues to preserve plaintiffs’ hypothetical recovery down the road. See Clean Energy v. Applied
26 LNG Tech. USA, LLC, No. 08-746, 2008 WL 4384179, *4, 7 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 3, 2008) (denying 27 preliminary injunction and rejecting argument that defendant would be unable to satisfy a money
28 judgment given that defendant had recently acquired $2.1 million “that has improved [defendant’s

1 ] financial condition”).<sup>9</sup> Fusion Garage has also entered into an arrangement with a company,
2 CSL Group, regarding the manufacturing of the JooJoo device. Under the arrangement, CSL
3 advances the manufacturing costs to make the JooJoo device, and obtains recoupment on the 4 backend. Fusion Garage does not need to incur large manufacturing costs since they are being
5 advanced by CSL. However, if the Court impounded Fusion Garage’s revenues, Fusion Garage
6 would not be able to meet its obligations to CSL. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 62).

7           Unable to show that Fusion Garage is undercapitalized, plaintiffs next argue that
8 “payments for JooJoo pre-orders are going directly into a PayPal account in the name of Fusion
9 Garage’s CEO, not in the company’s name.” (Mot. at 7). Plaintiffs do not explain the relevance of 10 this information, but presumably they mean to suggest Fusion Garage would be unable to draw
11 upon a PayPal account in Mr. Rathakrishnan’s name to satisfy an eventual money judgment.

12           However, plaintiffs are wrong that the PayPal account holding the JooJoo’s revenues is 13 “not in the company’s name.” Rather, the account specification sheet – which plaintiffs attached
14 to their own Motion – clearly lists the “Account Type” as “Business,” not personal. (Bloch Decl., 15 Ex. A). Moreover, “FusionGarage” is listed as the business for which the account was created. Id.
16 Mr. Rathakrishnan is simply registered as the “user” of the account, and only because PayPal
17 requires at least one individual person to register as a user whenever a business account is created.
18 (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 67). In any event, Fusion Garage is not even using PayPal for payment
19 processing any more. (Id.)

---

22           <sup>9</sup> Plaintiffs’ allegations that Fusion Garage “was on a shoestring budget” and “[o]n several 23 occasions, TechCrunch even paid Fusion Garage’s bills” (Mot. at 14) does not show that Fusion
24 Garage is presently so undercapitalized that the Court should take the extraordinary step of 25 freezing its revenues. These allegations refer to a prior time period, before Fusion Garage began
26 marketing the JooJoo and received millions of dollars in funding. See Clean Energy, 2008 WL
27 4384179 at *7 (citing defendant’s “improved [ ] financial condition” as reason why plaintiff could 28 not show defendant’s inability to satisfy a money judgment). In any event, the allegation that TechCrunch “paid Fusion Garage’s bills on several occasions” is vastly exaggerated. In fact,
TechCrunch advanced just a single $23,500 payment to a touchscreen vendor on Fusion Garage’s behalf, back in 2009. (Rathakrishnan Decl., ¶ 44).

1 In short, plaintiffs have offered no competent evidence to support their “bare concerns”
2 that Fusion Garage is financially unstable or is likely to dissipate the JooJoo revenues. See Smith
3 v. MPIRE Holdings, LLC, No. 08-0549, 2009 WL 804069, *7 (M.D. Tenn. March 25, 2009)
4 (denying preliminary injunction motion to freeze defendant’s assets where “plaintiffs have offered
5 no evidence beyond their bare ‘concerns’ that any particular defendant is presently absconding
6 with or dissipating assets that might be required to satisfy a judgment.”) Conversely, Mr.
7 Rathakrishnan has offered evidence that Fusion Garage is adequately capitalized, which only
8 strengthens the conclusion that plaintiffs have failed to show irreparable injury. See Gulf Coast
9 Produce, Inc. v. Am. Growers, Inc., No. 07-80633, 2007 WL 2302109, *2 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 8, 2007)
10 (“Glenn C. Thomason, principal of American Growers, testified that American Growers is solvent
11 and has sufficient funds to pay all accounts payable, including Gulf Coast Produce's claim in its 12 entirety . . . Gulf Coast Produce had no evidence to suggest that Thomason's representations were 13 inaccurate. The conclusion of dissipation or threat of dissipation based on an allegation of a rumor
14 about flagging profitability with no personal knowledge or supporting evidence is plainly
15 insufficient to satisfy the burden of proving irreparable damage.”)

16 For this reason, the cases that plaintiffs cite to support their “irreparable injury” argument
17 are inapposite. In each cited case, it was either undisputed or painfully obvious that the defendant
18 was wasting its assets or would otherwise be unable to pay any adverse judgment. For instance, in 19 DuFour v. Be LLC, No. 09-3770, 2009 WL 4730897 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 7, 2009), one defendant
20 admitted to being “on the verge of bankruptcy” when the Court ordered its assets placed into trust.
21 Id. at *3. Notably, the Court refused to freeze the assets of the other defendants, given that 22 “[t]here is no evidence that these other defendants are on similarly weak financial footing.” Id. In 23 Natural Selection Foods, LLC v. Premium Fresh Farms, LLC, No. 07-197, 2007 WL 128230
24 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2007), the Court found that “Defendants are presently engaged in dissipating
25 assets it [sic] is required to keep in trust.” Id. at *1 (emphasis added). And in Reebok Intern. Ltd
26 v. Marnatech. Enter., Inc., 970 F.2d 552 (9th Cir, 1992) the principal defendant did not dispute that 27 it and the other defendants “may hide their allegedly ill-gotten gains if their assets are not frozen.”
28 Id. at 563 (internal quotation marks omitted). There is nothing besides plaintiffs’ say-so to suggest

1 that Fusion Garage will improperly dissipate assets in the future. Similarly, plaintiffs' assertions
2 about Fusion Garage's "financial instability" are devoid of evidentiary support. Accordingly,
3 plaintiffs have failed to establish a likelihood of "irreparable injury" if Fusion Garage's revenues
4 are not placed into trust, and plaintiffs' Motion should be denied.

5 C. The Balance of Equities Weighs Against Plaintiffs

6 To decide whether the balance of equities tips in plaintiffs' favor, the Court "must balance
7 the competing claims of injury and must consider the effect on each party of the granting or
8 withholding of the requested relief." Winter, 129 S. Ct. at 376 (internal quotes and citation
9 omitted). Here, an improperly granted injunction would result in substantially more harm to 10 Fusion Garage than plaintiffs would face in the absence of an injunction.

11 An injunction would cause Fusion Garage severe harm by likely forcing it out of business.
12 A company cannot survive for long without revenues, and plaintiffs seek to freeze and impound
13 the revenues from Fusion Garage's only product. Moreover, while Fusion Garage has obtained
14 significant third-party investment to support it during its nascent phase, this investment would dry
15 up quickly if the JooJoo's revenues were impounded. In other words, an injunction would likely
16 kill Fusion Garage altogether by choking the revenue stream of its only product and deterring
17 continued third-party investment in Fusion Garage. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶¶ 60-63). Driving
18 Fusion Garage out of business would also end the jobs of Fusion Garage's employees. The severe
19 harm that an injunction would inflict on Fusion Garage and its employees strongly suggests that 20 the equities tip in favor of Fusion Garage, not plaintiffs. See Green Book Intern. Corp. v. InUnity
21 Corp., 2 F. Supp. 2d 112, 125 (D. Mass. 1998) ("even if GBIC had made a minimally sufficient
22 showing of likelihood of success, the balance of equities would still tip in InUnity's favor, given 23 that an injunction would likely put it out of business, resulting in a loss of approximately forty
24 jobs and a large portion of whatever remains of a $2 million private placement that it recently
25 completed.")

26 Plaintiffs, however, face little hardship from the denial of an injunction. They may 27 continue to prosecute their claims against Fusion Garage and seek monetary relief absent an 28

1 injunction, and plaintiff TechCrunch's blogging business will not be harmed in the interim if an
2 injunction is denied.<sup>10</sup> The equities therefore tip heavily in Fusion Garage's favor.

3 Furthermore, plaintiffs have engaged in repeated wrongful conduct both before and after 4 this suit was filed, and equity will not support a plaintiff who has engaged in such wrongdoing.
5 See generally Nelmda v. Shelly Eurocars, Inc., 112 F.3d 380, 384 (9th Cir. 1997) ("A cardinal
6 maxim of equity jurisprudence is that he who comes into equity must come with clean hands.")
7 Here, plaintiffs' wrongdoing has deprived them of clean hands both before and after suit was filed.

8 [REDACTED]
9 [REDACTED] Moreover, after this suit was filed, plaintiffs publicized
10 Fusion Garage's business information in an attempt to tar Fusion Garage in the media. Most 11 notably, plaintiffs' Motion publicly disclosed that there were 90 pre-orders for the JooJoo as of 12 last month – a fact that several media sources picked up on to suggest that the JooJoo will not 13 succeed in the marketplace. (Doolittle Decl., Ex. F). There can be no legitimate purpose for 14 plaintiffs to parade the JooJoo's pre-order numbers in a public filing without even attempting to 15 place this information under seal. Indeed, the only apparent reason for this action is that plaintiffs
16 wanted to embarrass Fusion Garage and create negative publicity for the JooJoo. [REDACTED]

17 [REDACTED]
18 [REDACTED]
19 obtained [REDACTED]. Simply put, plaintiffs do not deserve equitable relief.

20 In sum, plaintiffs' wrongful conduct tips the equities even further towards Fusion Garage
21 and away from plaintiffs. Plaintiffs should not be entitled to the extraordinary equitable remedy of 22 a preliminary injunction when they have behaved in such an inequitable manner.

23 D. A Preliminary Injunction Would Harm the Public Interest

24 Finally, a preliminary injunction would not be in the public interest. As stated above, the 25 injunction would likely drive Fusion Garage out of business, thereby removing the JooJoo from

26 _____
27 <sup>10</sup> [REDACTED]
28 [REDACTED]

1 the market and harming the public's interest in a diverse marketplace of competing products. See
2 Freudenberg Household Prods. LP v. Time, Inc., No. 06-399, 2006 WL 1049569, *9 (N.D. Ill.
3 April 18, 2006) (denying preliminary injunction given the public interest in "the natural
4 competition in the marketplace, from which the consumers ultimately benefit in the form of lower
5 prices and higher-quality goods.") Removing the JooJoo from the marketplace would be
6 particularly inimical to the public interest given that plaintiffs do not even accuse this product of 7 infringing their intellectual property or trade secrets. Doolittle Decl., Ex. E (TechCrunch's
8 Supplemental Interrogatory Response No. 7). Moreover, driving Fusion Garage and the JooJoo
9 from the marketplace would particularly harm those members of the public who already purchased
10 JooJoos, since the product comes with a warranty. (Rathakrishnan Decl. ¶ 63).

11 For these reasons, plaintiffs' arguments about the public interest are particularly misguided
12 and ironic. Plaintiffs argue that "an injunction benefits the public by ensuring that pre-order funds
13 are available to be refunded in the event Fusion Garage cannot deliver the JooJoo as promised"
14 (Mot. at 7) and "sequestering pre-order and sales revenues will ensure that early JooJoo buyers can 15 be made whole." (Id. at 15). This argument is paternalistic; plaintiffs are not suing for the benefit
16 of consumers. Moreover, early JooJoo buyers would not be served by an injunction that seeks to 17 kill Fusion Garage altogether.

18 Conclusion

19 For the foregoing reasons, Defendant Fusion Garage respectfully requests that the Court
20 deny the Motion.

21
22 DATED: April 26, 2010

QUINN EMANUEL URQUHART &
SULLIVAN, LLP

23
24
25 By /s/ Patrick Doolittle

Patrick C. Doolittle

Attorney for Defendant Fusion Garage PTE. LTD