| v. |) | MOTION TO DISMISS |
| LINKEDIN CORPORATION, a California Corporation, and DOES 1 to 50 inclusive, |) | |
| Defendants. |) | |

Plaintiffs Kevin Low (“Low”) and Alan Masand (individually, “Masand,” collectively “Plaintiffs”), bring this putative class action against LinkedIn Corp. (“LinkedIn” or “Defendant”) alleging that personal information of the putative class members, including “personally identifiable browsing histor[ies],” were allegedly disclosed by Defendant to third party advertising and marketing companies through the use of “cookies” or “beacons.” Defendant’s first motion to dismiss was granted on November 11, 2011 (“November 2011 Order”). ECF No. 28.

In the Amended Complaint (“AC”), Plaintiffs allege violations of the Stored Communications Act, 18 U.S.C. § 2701 et seq.; the California Constitution; the California False Advertising Law, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17500 et seq.; common law breach of contract; common law invasion of privacy; conversion; unjust enrichment; and negligence. Pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7-1(b), the Court deemed Defendants’ motion suitable for decision without oral argument. Thus, the hearing and case management conference set for July 12, 2012 were VACATED. For

1 the foregoing reasons, the Defendant's motion to dismiss is DENIED in part and GRANTED in 2 part.

3 I. BACKGROUND

4 A. Factual Background

5 Unless otherwise noted, the following allegations are taken from the Amended Complaint 6 and are presumed true for purposes of ruling on Defendant's motion to dismiss. Plaintiffs bring 7 this putative class action on behalf of all persons in the United States who registered for LinkedIn 8 services after March 25, 2007. AC ¶ 58. LinkedIn is a web-based social networking site that 9 presents itself as an online community offering professionals ways to network. Id. ¶ 8. Plaintiffs 10 allege that LinkedIn allows transmission of users' LinkedIn browsing history, as well as the user's 11 LinkedIn ID, to third parties, including advertisers, marketing companies, data brokers, and web 12 tracking companies. According to Plaintiffs, LinkedIn's practices allow these third parties to 13 identify both the individual LinkedIn user, and the user's browsing history in violation of federal 14 and state laws and in violation of LinkedIn's privacy policy. Id. ¶¶ 19-23.

15 The Amended Complaint sets forth allegations regarding LinkedIn's general policies and 16 practices related to the transmission of users' information to third parties. First, LinkedIn assigns 17 each registered user a unique user identification number. Id. ¶ 25. Second, when an internet user 18 visits a LinkedIn user's profile page, LinkedIn sends a command to the Internet user's browser that 19 designates a third party from which the browser should download advertisements and other 20 content. Id. ¶ 16. This command requires the internet user's browser to transmit two components 21 of information: (1) the third party tracking ID ("cookies") on the user's hard drive corresponding 22 with the designated third party, as well as (2) the URL of the LinkedIn profile being viewed, which 23 includes the viewed party's LinkedIn ID (a unique number generated by LinkedIn to identify 24 individual users). Id.

25 Plaintiffs allege that third parties can theoretically de-anonymize a user's LinkedIn ID 26 number. Although Plaintiffs' allegations are somewhat unclear, Plaintiffs allege that third parties 27 can associate a LinkedIn user ID and URL of the user's profile page with a user's cookies ID and 28 thus determine a LinkedIn user's identity. For example, Plaintiffs allege that third parties can

1 correlate a user’s LinkedIn ID and profile page with the corresponding cookies ID because 2 LinkedIn users generally view their page more than any other LinkedIn profile page. The 3 information transmitted to third parties includes the LinkedIn ID and URL of the page being 4 viewed as well as the cookies ID of the person viewing the LinkedIn page. Thus, third parties can 5 determine that a LinkedIn user ID corresponds with a specific internet user because the LinkedIn 6 user ID transmitted with the most frequency is likely the cookies ID owner’s profile page. Id. ¶ 34.
7 Similarly, Plaintiffs allege that when a LinkedIn user selects his or her own LinkedIn profile, a
8 unique “View Profile” URL is generated and transmitted to third parties, which contains that user’s
9 LinkedIn ID. From this transmission a third party could associate a LinkedIn user’s numeric 10 identification and profile page with the cookie ID of the LinkedIn user. Id. ¶ 35.

11 Once a third party can associate a LinkedIn ID and profile page with a cookies ID, 12 Plaintiffs allege that a third party can associate a de-anonymized LinkedIn user’s identity with the 13 user’s browsing history. An internet user’s cookies ID corresponds to a third party’s records of 14 Internet users’ internet histories. Plaintiffs allege that third parties can view a LinkedIn user’s 15 browser history, including the other LinkedIn profiles with which a user has interacted as well as 16 potentially sensitive information that may be gathered based on a user’s prior Internet history. Id.
17 ¶¶ 20-23. Moreover, Plaintiffs allege that these practices violate several parts of LinkedIn’s 18 privacy policy, including the provision that states that: “We do not sell, rent or otherwise provide 19 [user’s] personal identifiable information to any third parties for marketing purposes.” Id. ¶ 49.

20 Low and Masand allege that they are both registered users of LinkedIn. Id. ¶¶ 1-2.
21 Although Low has not paid money for the services LinkedIn provides, Masand purchased a “Job 22 Seeker Premium” subscription in November 2011, and his subscription remained active throughout 23 the relevant time period. Id. ¶ 2. Both Low and Masand allege that LinkedIn transmitted their 24 LinkedIn user ID to third parties, “linking [their personal identities] to [the third party’s] secretly 25 embedded tracking device that surreptitiously recorded Mr. Low’s [and Mr. Masand’s] internet 26 browsing history.” Id. ¶¶ 3, 36. Plaintiffs allege that as a result of the allegations explained above, 27 Plaintiffs suffered two types of harm. First, Plaintiffs allege that they were “embarrassed and 28 humiliated by the disclosure of his personally identifiable browsing history.” Second, Plaintiffs

1 allege that their personally identifiable browsing histories are valuable personal property; and that 2 they “relinquished [their] valuable personal property without the compensation to which [they 3 were] due.” Id. ¶ 5.

4 B. Procedural Background

5 The original complaint, brought only by Plaintiff Low, was filed on March 29, 2011. Low 6 alleged violations of the Stored Communications Act, 18 U.S.C. § 2701 et seq.; the California 7 Constitution; the California Unfair Competition Law, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17200 et seq.; the 8 California False Advertising Law, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17500 et seq.; the California Consumer 9 Legal Remedies Act, Cal. Civ. Code §1750 et seq.; common law breach of contract; breach of the 10 implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; common law invasion of privacy; conversion; and 11 unjust enrichment. On June 17, 2011, Defendant filed a motion to dismiss for lack of subject 12 matter jurisdiction and failure to state a claim. ECF No. 13. Plaintiff filed an opposition on 13 August 1, 2011. ECF No. 16. Defendant filed a reply on August 15, 2011. ECF No. 17. On 14 November 11, 2011, the Court found that Plaintiff had failed to establish Article III standing, and 15 granted Defendant’s motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction with leave to amend. ECF No. 28.

16 Shortly thereafter, Low filed an Amended Complaint that added Alan Masand as a named 17 plaintiff. ECF No. 31. The Amended Complaint also withdrew the claims based on the California 18 Unfair Competition Law, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17200 et seq., and the Consumer Legal 19 Remedies Act, but added a claim for negligence.

20 Defendant filed a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and failure to 21 state a claim on January 9, 2012. Motion to Dismiss (“MTD”), ECF No. 34. In the motion to 22 dismiss, Defendant argues that the Amended Complaint fails to remedy the defects identified in the 23 November 2011 Order. In particular, Defendant argues that this Court still lacks subject matter 24 jurisdiction because Plaintiffs have failed to establish that either Low or Masand has standing 25 under Article III of the United States Constitution. MTD at 1-2. In the alternative, Defendant 26 argues that Plaintiffs continue to fail to state a claim upon which relief can be granted as to all eight 27 claims alleged. Id. at 2-3. Plaintiffs filed an opposition to the motion to dismiss on February 2, 28

1 2012. ECF No. 37. Defendant filed a reply in support of the motion to dismiss on February 21, 2 2012. ECF No. 38.

3 II. LEGAL STANDARD

4 A. Motion to Dismiss Under Rule 12(b)(1)

5 A jurisdictional challenge may be facial or factual. Safe Air for Everyone v. Meyer, 373 6 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004). Where the attack is facial, the court determines whether the 7 allegations contained in the complaint are sufficient on their face to invoke federal jurisdiction, 8 accepting all material allegations in the complaint as true and construing them in favor of the party 9 asserting jurisdiction. See Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 501 (1975). Where the attack is factual, 10 however, “the court need not presume the truthfulness of the plaintiff’s allegations.” Safe Air for 11 Everyone, 373 F.3d at 1039. In resolving a factual dispute as to the existence of subject matter 12 jurisdiction, a court may review extrinsic evidence beyond the complaint without converting a 13 motion to dismiss into one for summary judgment. See id.; McCarthy v. United States, 850 F.2d 14 558, 560 (9th Cir.1988) (holding that a court “may review any evidence, such as affidavits and 15 testimony, to resolve factual disputes concerning the existence of jurisdiction”). Once a party has 16 moved to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under Rule 12(b)(1), the opposing party 17 bears the burden of establishing the Court’s jurisdiction. See Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 18 511 U.S. 375, 377 (1994); Chandler v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 598 F.3d 1115, 1122 (9th 19 Cir. 2010).

20 B. Motion to Dismiss Under Rule 12(b)(6)

21 A motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief 22 can be granted “tests the legal sufficiency of a claim.” Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 729, 732 (9th 23 Cir. 2001). Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) may be based on either: (1) the “lack of a cognizable 24 legal theory,” or (2) “the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory.” 25 Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep’t, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1990). While “detailed factual 26 allegations” are not required, a complaint must include sufficient facts to “state a claim to relief 27 that is plausible on its face.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009)
28 (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). “A claim has facial plausibility

1 when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that 2 the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Id.

3 For purposes of ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, the Court accepts all 4 allegations of material fact as true and construes the pleadings in the light most favorable to the 5 plaintiffs. Manzarek v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 519 F.3d 1025, 1031 (9th Cir. 2008). The 6 Court need not, however, accept as true pleadings that are no more than legal conclusions or the 7 “‘formulaic recitation of the elements’ of a cause of action.” Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1949 (quoting 8 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). Mere “conclusory allegations of law and unwarranted inferences are 9 insufficient to defeat a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim.” Epstein v. Wash. Energy Co., 10 83 F.3d 1136, 1140 (9th Cir. 1996); accord Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. at 1949–50.

11 C. Leave to Amend

12 Under Rule 15(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, leave to amend “shall be freely 13 given when justice so requires,” bearing in mind “the underlying purpose of Rule 15 to facilitate 14 decision on the merits, rather than on the pleadings or technicalities.” Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 15 1122, 1127 (9th Cir. 2000) (en banc) (internal quotation marks and alterations omitted). When 16 dismissing a complaint for failure to state a claim, “‘a district court should grant leave to amend 17 even if no request to amend the pleading was made, unless it determines that the pleading could not 18 possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts.’” Id. at 1127 (quoting Doe v. United States, 58 19 F.3d 494, 497 (9th Cir. 1995)). Generally, leave to amend shall be denied only if allowing 20 amendment would unduly prejudice the opposing party, cause undue delay, or be futile, or if the 21 moving party has acted in bad faith. Leadsinger, Inc. v. BMG Music Publ’g., 512 F.3d 522, 532 22 (9th Cir. 2008).

23 III. ANALYSIS

24 A. Article III Standing

25 An Article III federal court must ask whether a plaintiff has suffered sufficient injury to 26 satisfy the “case or controversy” requirement of Article III of the U.S. Constitution. To satisfy 27 Article III standing, plaintiff must allege: (1) injury-in-fact that is concrete and particularized, as 28 well as actual and imminent; (2) wherein injury is fairly traceable to the challenged action of the

1 defendant; and (3) it is likely (not merely speculative) that injury will be redressed by a favorable
2 decision. Friends of the Earth, Inc. v. Laidlaw Env'tl. Servs. (TOC), Inc., 528 U.S. 167, 180-81
3 (2000); Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561-62 (1992). A suit brought by a plaintiff
4 without Article III standing is not a “case or controversy,” and an Article III federal court there-
5 fore lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the suit. Steel Co. v. Citizens for a Better Environment, 6 523 U.S. 83, 101 (1998). In that event, the suit should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(1). See id. at 7 109-110. Moreover, at least one named plaintiff must have suffered an injury in fact. See Lierboe
8 v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 350 F.3d 1018, 1022 (9th Cir. 2003) (“[I]f none of the named 9 plaintiffs purporting to represent a class establishes the requisite of a case or controversy with the 10 defendants, none may seek relief on behalf of himself or any other member of the class.”). The 11 parties only dispute the first prong of the standing requirement: whether the injury is both 12 “concrete and particularized.” Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560; see MTD at 5-10; Opp’n at 3-9; Reply at 2-13 4.

14 As an initial matter, the Court notes that because “injury” is a requirement under both 15 Article III and Plaintiffs’ individual causes of action, “the threshold question of whether [Plaintiffs 16 have] standing (and the [C]ourt has jurisdiction) is distinct from the merits of [Plaintiffs’] claim.”
17 Maya v. Centex Corp., 658 F.3d 1060, 1068 (9th Cir. 2011). The issue of whether Plaintiffs have 18 established standing “in no way depends on the merits of the plaintiff’s contention that particular 19 conduct is illegal.” Warth, 422 U.S. at 500; accord Equity Lifestyle Props., Inc. v. Cnty. of San 20 Luis Obispo, 548 F.3d 1184, 1189 n.10 (9th Cir. 2008) (“The jurisdictional question of standing 21 precedes, and does not require, analysis of the merits.”). In other words “[a] plaintiff may satisfy 22 the injury-in-fact requirements to have standing under Article III, and thus may be able to ‘bring a 23 civil action without suffering dismissal for want of standing to sue,’ without being able to assert a 24 cause of action successfully.” In re Facebook Privacy Litig., 791 F. Supp. 2d 705, 712 n.5 (N.D.
25 Cal. 2011) (citing Doe v. Chao, 540 U.S. 614, 624-25 (2004)).

26 In the November 2011 Order, the Court determined that Plaintiff had failed to establish 27 standing under either of the two theories of harm asserted. The Court left open the possibility that 28 Plaintiffs would be able to establish Article III standing based upon the violation of a statutory

1 right, even though the issue was not fully briefed for the Court. See November 2011 Order at 8 2 n.1. In their opposition, Plaintiffs argue that Defendants’ conduct violates several statutory and 3 constitutional rights, and that the violation of these rights confers standing upon Plaintiffs. Opp’n 4 at 3-9.

5 The injury required by Article III may exist by virtue of “statutes creating legal rights, the 6 invasion of which creates standing.” See Edwards v. First Am. Corp., 610 F.3d 514, 517 (9th Cir.
7 2010) (quoting Warth, 422 U.S. at 500). In such cases, the “standing question . . . is whether the 8 constitutional or statutory provision on which the claim rests properly can be understood as 9 granting persons in the plaintiff’s position a right to judicial relief.” Id. (quoting Warth, 422 U.S.
10 at 500)). The Ninth Circuit recently clarified that a suit brought alleging violations of surveillance 11 statutes, including the Stored Communications Act, establishes a “concrete” injury with respect to 12 the first prong of the Article III standing inquiry. See Jewel v. National Security Agency, 673 F.3d 13 902, 908 (9th Cir. 2011). Moreover, the invasion of a personal constitutional right – such as the 14 First Amendment right to freedom of association, or a Fourth Amendment right to be free from 15 unreasonable searches and seizures – may also establish a “concrete” harm for the purposes of 16 Article III standing. Id. at 909.

17 In this case, Plaintiffs have alleged a violation of their statutory right under the Stored 18 Communications Act, 18 U.S.C. §§ 2701, et seq., as well as a violation of the California
19 constitutional right to privacy. See AC ¶¶ 65-86. The Stored Communications Act generally 20 prohibits providers from, among other things, “knowingly divulg[ing] to any person or entity the 21 contents of a communication.” 18 U.S.C § 2702(a)(1)-(2); see id. § 2707 (creating a private right 22 of action). Similarly, the California Constitution creates a privacy right that protects individuals 23 from the invasion of their privacy by private parties. Am. Acad. of Pediatrics v. Lungren, 16 Cal.
24 4th 307 (1997). Thus, Plaintiffs have articulated harm which is “concrete” for the purposes of 25 Article III standing. See, e.g. Jewel, 673 F.3d at 908-09; Gaos v. Google, Inc., 5:10-CV-4809-EJD, 26 2012 WL 109446, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 29, 2012) (“Thus, a violation of one’s statutory rights 27 under the SCA is a concrete injury.”); cf. In re Facebook Privacy Litig., 791 F. Supp. 2d at 711-12.
28

1 In addition to establishing a “concrete” injury, Plaintiffs must also establish that the alleged 2 injury is “sufficiently particularized.” Jewel, 673 F.3d at 909. In other words, the Court must 3 determine whether Plaintiffs have “a particularized grievance,” such that Plaintiffs have “a personal 4 stake in the outcome of the controversy as to warrant . . . invocation of federal court jurisdiction.”
5 Id. (citing Summers v. Earth Island Inst., 555 U.S. 488, 493 (2009)).

6 The Court agrees with Defendant that many of the allegations in the Amended Complaint 7 relate only to LinkedIn’s practices generally. Moreover, the allegations that third parties can 8 potentially associate LinkedIn identification numbers with information obtained from cookies and 9 can de-anonymize a user’s identity and browser history are speculative and relatively weak.
10 Nonetheless, Plaintiffs have alleged enough to articulate a “particularized grievance” by Plaintiffs 11 here. For example, like Jewel, Plaintiffs describe not only LinkedIn’s general practices, but also 12 allege that Plaintiffs were likely impacted by LinkedIn’s conduct. For example, Plaintiffs are both 13 registered LinkedIn users. See AC ¶¶ 1-2. Moreover, Low alleges that LinkedIn browsing 14 histories and user identification numbers, sent in connection with third party cookie identification 15 numbers, were transmitted to third parties by LinkedIn. See id. ¶ 3. Low gives specific examples 16 of the information allegedly transmitted to third parties when he visited the LinkedIn website. See 17 id. ¶¶ 3-4. Because Plaintiffs have alleged that their information has been disclosed to third parties 18 by LinkedIn’s policies, Plaintiffs have sufficiently articulated, with particularity, injury as to 19 themselves for the purposes of Article III standing. See Jewel, 673 F.3d at 910 (“Significantly, 20 [Plaintiff] alleged with particularity that her communications were part of the dragnet.”). The 21 Court finds that Plaintiffs have established Article III standing. Therefore, Defendant’s motion to 22 dismiss under Rule 12(b)(1) is DENIED.

23 B. Rule 12(b)(6) Motion to Dismiss Causes of Action

24 In light of the Court’s finding that Plaintiffs have established Article III standing, the Court 25 will turn to whether Plaintiffs have plausibly stated a claim as to each cause of action alleged in the 26 Amended Complaint. See In re Facebook Privacy Litig., 791 F. Supp. 2d at 712.

27 1. Stored Communications Act

1 Plaintiffs' first cause of action alleges that LinkedIn violated the federal Stored 2 Communications Act, 18 U.S.C. § 2701, et seq. ("SCA"). See AC ¶¶ 65-78. Enacted in 1986 as 3 Section II of the Electronic Communications Protection Act ("ECPA"), the SCA creates criminal 4 and civil liability for certain unauthorized access to stored communications and records. See 5 Konop v. Hawaiian Airlines, Inc., 302 F.3d 868, 874 (9th Cir. 2002). "The SCA was enacted
6 because the advent of the Internet presented a host of potential privacy breaches that the Fourth 7 Amendment does not address." Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Company, Inc., 529 F.3d 892, 8 900 (9th Cir. 2008), rev'd on other grounds by City of Ontario v. Quon, 130 S.Ct. 2619 (2010).
9 Despite this purpose, the SCA has a narrow scope: "[t]he SCA is not a catch-all statute designed to 10 protect the privacy of stored Internet communications;" instead "there are many problems of 11 Internet privacy that the SCA does not address." Orin S. Kerr, A User's Guide to the Stored
12 Communications Act, and a Legislator's Guide to Amending It, 72 GEO. WASH. L. REV. 1208, 1214 13 (2004). Generally, the SCA prohibits providers from (1) "knowingly divulg[ing] to any person or 14 entity the contents of a communication." 18 U.S.C § 2702(a)(1)-(2); see id. § 2707 (creating a 15 private right of action); see also Quon, 529 F.3d at 900 ("[T]he SCA prevents 'providers' of 16 communication services from divulging private communications to certain entities and/or 17 individuals.").

18 The SCA covers two types of entities: (1) "remote computing services" ("RCS"), and (2) 19 "electronic communication services" ("ECS"). 18 U.S.C § 2702(a)(1)-(2). The non-disclosure 20 obligations depend on the type of provider at issue. See, e.g. Quon, 529 F.3d at 900-902. Plaintiffs 21 contend in their opposition that LinkedIn is an RCS for the purposes of its SCA liability. See 22 Opp'n at 14-15. The SCA prohibits an entity "providing remote computing service to the public" 23 from "knowingly divulge[ing] to any person or entity the contents of any communication which is 24 carried or maintained on that service." 18 U.S.C § 2702(a)(2).

25 The SCA only creates liability for a provider that is an RCS or an ECS. A provider of e-26 mail services is an ECS. Quon, 529 F.3d at 901. On the other hand, under the SCA the term 27 "remote computing service" means "the provision to the public of computer storage or processing 28 services by means of an electronic communications system." 18 U.S.C § 2711(2) (emphasis

1 added). A “remote computing service” refers to “the processing or storage of data by an offsite
2 third party.” Quon, 529 F.3d at 901. In defining RCS, “Congress appeared to view ‘storage’ as a 3 virtual filing cabinet.” Id. at 902. Indeed, the Ninth Circuit has explained that “[i]n light of the 4 Report’s elaboration upon what Congress intended by the term ‘Remote Computer Services,’ it is 5 clear that, before the advent of advanced computer processing programs such as Microsoft Excel, 6 businesses had to farm out sophisticated processing to a service that would process the 7 information.” Id. at 902 citing Kerr, 72 GEO. WASH. L. REV. at 1213-14.

8 Whether an entity is acting as an RCS or an ECS (or neither) is context dependent, and 9 depends, in part, on the information disclosed. See In re U.S., 665 F. Supp. 2d 1210, 1214 (D. Or.
10 2009) (“Today, most ISPs provide both ECS and RCS; thus, the distinction serves to define the 11 service that is being provided at a particular time (or as to a particular piece of electronic 12 communication at a particular time), rather than to define the service provider itself. The 13 distinction is still essential, however, because different services have different protections.”); Kerr, 14 72 GEO. WASH. L. REV. at 15-16 (“The classifications of ECS and RCS are context sensitive: the 15 key is the provider’s role with respect to a particular copy of a particular communication, rather 16 than the provider’s status in the abstract. A provider can act as an RCS with respect to some 17 communications, an ECS with respect to other communications, and neither an RCS nor an ECS 18 with respect to other communications.”).

19 Although many allegations within the Amended Complaint relate to information that third 20 parties would be able to infer, the Amended Complaint limits the information LinkedIn allegedly 21 disclosed to third parties. The Amended Complaint alleges that LinkedIn transmits to third parties 22 the LinkedIn user ID and the URL of the LinkedIn profile page viewed by the internet user. See 23 AC ¶¶ 28, 66-68. Even taking Plaintiffs’ allegations as true, it does not appear that LinkedIn was 24 functioning as an RCS¹ when it disclosed the LinkedIn user ID and the URL of the profile pages 25 the user had viewed to third parties. LinkedIn was not acting as a “remote computing service” with 26 respect to the disclosed information because it was not “processing or stor[ing] [] data by an offsite
27

28 ¹ Nor was LinkedIn an ECS under the SCA as the alleged disclosures did not include e-mail transmissions or relate to LinkedIn’s functionality as an electronic communication service.

1 third party [in this case LinkedIn].” Quon, 529 F.3d at 901. LinkedIn IDs are numbers generated
2 by LinkedIn and were not sent by the user for offsite storage or processing. See 18 U.S.C. § 3 2702(a)(2)(A). LinkedIn was not acting “as a virtual filing cabinet,” or as an offsite processor of 4 data with respect to the user IDs it created. Similarly, the URL addresses of viewed pages were not 5 sent to LinkedIn by Plaintiffs for storage or processing. See 18 U.S.C. § 2702(a)(2)(A)-(B).
6 LinkedIn was not functioning as either a “filing cabinet” or “an advanced computer processing 7 program such as Microsoft Excel,” that allows businesses to “farm out sophisticated processing to 8 a service that would process the information,” with respect to the LinkedIn user IDs or the URLs of 9 users’ profile pages. Quon, 529 F.3d at 902.

10 At least one commentator has seriously doubted the conclusion that a website, such as 11 LinkedIn, provides “processing services” for its customers, qualifying it as an RCS. Kerr, 72 GEO.
12 WASH. L. REV. at 1229-31. This view is supported by the legislative history of the SCA. Congress 13 established liability for “remote computing services to include services that store and process 14 information. S. Rep. No. 99-541, at 3 (1986), reprinted in 1986 U.S.C.C.A.N. 3555, 3557 15 (“[C]omputers are used extensively today for the storage and processing of information. With the 16 advent of computerized recordkeeping systems, Americans have lost the ability to lock away a 17 great deal of personal and business information. For example, physicians and hospitals maintain 18 medical files in offsite data banks, businesses of all sizes transmit their records to remote 19 computers to obtain sophisticated data processing services.”). Therefore, the Court finds that 20 Plaintiffs have not stated a claim for relief pursuant to the SCA because Plaintiffs have not 21 established that LinkedIn was acting as an RCS when it disclosed LinkedIn IDs and URLs of 22 viewed pages to third parties.² Therefore, Defendants’ motion to dismiss the SCA claim is 23 GRANTED.

24 Plaintiff Low also alleged a violation of the SCA in the original complaint. Compl. ¶¶ 41-25 53. Plaintiff’s original complaint did not articulate a coherent theory regarding its SCA claim.
26 Specifically, the original complaint’s SCA claim failed to identify what information was

27 _____
28 ² In light of this conclusion, the Court need not address LinkedIn’s alternative arguments that the SCA statutory exception applies, or that the disclosed information was not “content” of a communication and thus did not violate the SCA.

1 transmitted to third parties. Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint now identifies what information was 2 transmitted to third parties and how, theoretically, a LinkedIn user's information can be de-3 anonymized. However, the additional factual allegations in the Amended Complaint establish that 4 Plaintiffs' SCA claim fails to establish a cause of action. This defect is based on a failure of theory 5 and not on a failure of pleading. Additional factual allegations are unlikely to establish that 6 Defendant was an RCS in light of the legislative history of the SCA. Because further amendment 7 would be futile, Defendant's motion to dismiss the SCA claim is granted with prejudice.

8 2. Invasion of Privacy Under the California Constitution and Common Law

9 Plaintiffs' second cause of action alleges that Defendant's conduct violates their right to 10 privacy pursuant to Article I, Section 1 of the California Constitution. Additionally, Plaintiffs' 11 fifth cause of action alleges that Defendant's conduct constitutes a common law invasion of 12 privacy. Because the parties present arguments relating to both causes of action together, and 13 because both causes of action suffer similar defects, the Court will discuss both claims together.

14 The California Constitution creates a privacy right that protects individuals from the 15 invasion of their privacy by private parties. Am. Acad. of Pediatrics, 16 Cal. 4th 307; Leonel v.
16 Am. Airlines, Inc., 400 F.3d 702, 711-12 (9th Cir. 2005), opinion amended on denial of reh'g, 03-
17 15890, 2005 WL 976985 (9th Cir. Apr. 28, 2005). To establish a claim under the California 18 Constitutional right to privacy, a plaintiff must first demonstrate three elements:³ (1) a legally 19 protected privacy interest; (2) a reasonable expectation of privacy under the circumstances; and (3) 20 conduct by the defendant that amounts to a serious invasion of the protected privacy interest. Hill
21 v. Nat'l Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 7 Cal. 4th 1, 35-37 (1994). These elements do not constitute a 22 categorical test, but rather serve as threshold components of a valid claim to be used to "weed out 23 claims that involve so insignificant or de minimis an intrusion on a constitutionally protected 24 privacy interest as not even to require an explanation or justification by the defendant." Loder v.

25 ³ Plaintiffs argue that the intent of the voters in passing the Privacy Initiative establishes that the 26 constitutional right of privacy under the California Constitution is designed to prevent 27 "unnecessary information gathering, use, and dissemination by public and private entities" 28 including the "collecting and stockpiling [of] unnecessary information." See Opp'n at 9 (citing Hill, 7 Cal. 4th at 21). Even in light of this ballot history, the subsequent case law regarding the Constitutional right to privacy establishes that only serious invasions of privacy give rise to a private right of action.

1 City of Glendale, 14 Cal. 4th 846, 893 (1997). “Actionable invasions of privacy must be 2 sufficiently serious in their nature, scope, and actual or potential impact to constitute an egregious
3 breach of the social norms underlying the privacy right.” Hill, 7 Cal. 4th at 37 (emphasis added).
4 Thus, if the allegations “show no reasonable expectation of privacy or an insubstantial impact on 5 privacy interests, the question of invasion may be adjudicated as a matter of law.” Pioneer
6 Electronics, Inc. v. Sup. Ct. of L.A., 40 Cal. 4th 360, 370 (2007) (citing Hill, 7 Cal. 4th at 40).
7 Plaintiff’s claim for common law invasion of privacy must meet similarly high standards for the 8 type of invasion that is actionable. Under a claim for common law “invasion of privacy” tort, 9 Plaintiff must allege: (1) intrusion into a private place, conversation or matter (2) in a manner
10 highly offensive to a reasonable person. Shulman v. Group W Prods, Inc., 18 Cal. 4th 200, 231 11 (1998) (emphasis added).

12 The California Constitution and the common law set a high bar for an invasion of privacy 13 claim. Even disclosure of personal information, including social security numbers, does not 14 constitute an “egregious breach of the social norms” to establish an invasion of privacy claim. See, 15 e.g., In re iPhone Application Litig., ___ F.3d ___, Case No. 11-MD-02250-LHK, 2012 WL 16 2126351, at *15-16 (holding that the disclosure to third parties of unique device identifier number, 17 personal data, and geolocation information did not constitute an egregious breach of privacy); Ruiz 18 v. Gap, Inc., 540 F. Supp. 2d 1121, 1127-28 (N.D. Cal. 2008) aff’d, 380 F. App’x. 689 (9th Cir.
19 2010) (holding that the theft of a retail store’s laptop containing personal information, including the 20 social security numbers, of job applicants did not constitute an egregious breach of privacy and 21 therefore was not sufficient to state a claim for the California Constitutional right to privacy); 22 Fogelstrom v. Lamps Plus, Inc., 195 Cal. App. 4th 986, 992 (2011) (“Here, the supposed invasion
23 of privacy essentially consisted of [Defendant] obtaining plaintiff’s address without his knowledge 24 or permission, and using it to mail him coupons and other advertisements. This conduct is not an 25 egregious breach of social norms, but routine commercial behavior.”).

26 Under either formulation of Plaintiffs’ claims for invasion of privacy, Plaintiffs have failed 27 to allege sufficient facts to establish a highly offensive disclosure of information or a “serious 28 invasion” of a privacy interest. Plaintiffs allege that Defendant disclosed to third parties the

1 LinkedIn ID and the URL of the LinkedIn profile page that the user viewed (which in the aggregate 2 discloses a user’s browsing history among LinkedIn profiles). See AC ¶¶ 5, 20, 28. Although 3 Plaintiffs postulate that these third parties could, through inferences, de-anonymize this data, it is 4 not clear that anyone has actually done so, or what information, precisely, these third parties have 5 obtained. See AC ¶¶ 31-36. The information disclosed to third parties by LinkedIn, including a 6 numeric code associated with a user and the URL of the profile page viewed, does not meet the 7 standard set by California courts. Plaintiffs have failed to establish that Defendant’s conduct 8 “amounts to a serious invasion” of the protected privacy interest. See Hill, 7 Cal. 4th at 26.
9 Therefore, Defendant’s motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ invasion of privacy claims is GRANTED.

10 Plaintiff Low also alleged claims for invasion of privacy based on the California 11 Constitution and the common law in the original complaint. Compl. ¶¶ 54-59; 102-107. In the 12 original motion to dismiss, Defendant asserted the same arguments in favor of dismissing the 13 invasion of privacy claims that it now asserts in the second motion to dismiss. Compare Motion to 14 Dismiss at 19-21, ECF No. 13 with Mot. to Dismiss at 20-22, ECF No. 34. Thus, Plaintiffs were 15 on notice that their California privacy claims were required to meet a high standard to establish a 16 claim for invasion of privacy. Despite this notice, Plaintiffs’ Amended Complaint still fails to 17 allege facts establishing a serious invasion of privacy or an invasion that is highly offensive to a 18 reasonable person. Accordingly, the Court finds amendment would be futile, and Defendant’s 19 motion to dismiss counts two and four are granted with prejudice.

20 3. False Advertising Law

21 Plaintiffs’ third cause of action alleges that LinkedIn violated the False Advertising Law, 22 Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500, et seq. (“FAL”). The FAL provides that “[i]t is unlawful for any 23 person . . . corporation or association, or any employee thereof . . . to disseminate or cause to be so 24 made or disseminated [,] any such statement as part of a plan or scheme with the intent not to sell 25 that personal property or those services, professional or otherwise, so advertised at the price stated 26 therein, or as so advertised.” Cal. Bus. & Prof. § 17500. California courts have noted that the FAL 27 prohibits “not only advertising which is false, but also advertising which[,], although true, is either 28

1 actually misleading or which has a capacity, likelihood or tendency to deceive or confuse the 2 public.” See e.g., Leoni v. State Bar, 39 Cal. 3d 609, 626 (1985).

3 In 2004, Proposition 64 amended the standing requirements under the FAL so that a private 4 plaintiff has standing to bring an FAL action if the plaintiff “has suffered injury in fact and has lost 5 money or property as a result of the unfair competition.” Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535. Courts 6 have interpreted Proposition 64’s “as a result of” language to require an allegation of reliance on 7 the alleged unfair competition or false advertising. See Laster v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., 407 F. Supp.
8 2d 1181, 1194 (S.D. Cal. 2005) aff’d, 252 F. App’x 777 (9th Cir. 2007). Thus, actual reliance is 9 required to have standing to sue under the FAL. See Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Court, 51 Cal. 4th 10 310, 326–27 (2011) (applying the actual reliance standard to a FAL claim). To establish actual 11 reliance, “plaintiff is not required to allege that [the challenged] misrepresentations were the sole or 12 even the decisive cause of the injury-producing conduct,” however, “a plaintiff must show that the 13 misrepresentation was an immediate cause of the injury-producing conduct.” Id. (internal 14 quotations and citations omitted).

15 The Court agrees with Defendant that with respect to Low, the threshold requirement of 16 “lost money or property” has not been met. Unlike Masand, Low does not allege that he paid any 17 money to LinkedIn and relies solely upon a theory that the alleged loss of personal property can 18 constitute “lost money or property.” Reply at 11, Opp’n at 22. For reasons discussed in detail in 19 the November 2011 Order, “personal information” does not constitute money or property under 20 Proposition 64.

21 Low’s failure to meet the threshold requirement of a loss of money or property is not in 22 itself fatal to Plaintiffs’ FAL claim. Defendant does not contest that Masand meets the threshold 23 requirement of lost money or property. Plaintiffs allege that Masand paid $24.99, for a “Job 24 Seeker Platinum” LinkedIn subscription. AC ¶¶ 2, 24; Opp’n at 24. Masand meets the first 25 requirement of “lost money or property” to establish standing to pursue the FAL claim on behalf of 26 the represented class. See In re Tobacco II Cases, 46 Cal. 4th 298, 314 (2009).

27 However, the Court ultimately agrees with Defendant that neither Low nor Masand have 28 alleged reliance on false advertisements or misrepresentations made by Defendant. Plaintiffs argue

1 that the Amended Complaint pleads sufficient reliance on two occasions. First, Plaintiffs allege 2 that Masand paid for LinkedIn’s services “in exchange for Defendant’s promises that it would not 3 make ‘[a]ny information provided to third parties through cookies . . . personally identifiable’ and 4 that it ‘does not provide personally identifiable information to any third party ad network.’” AC ¶ 5 57; Opp’n at 25. Second, Plaintiffs alleged that “had [they] known Defendant was not keeping 6 their personal information from third parties, they would not have consented [to the dissemination 7 of this information] and Defendant would not have gained commercial advantage from third 8 parties.” AC ¶ 117; Opp’n at 25. Because these misrepresentations were material, Plaintiffs argue 9 they are entitled to an inference of reliance. In re Tobacco II Cases, 46 Cal. 4th at 327.

10 The Court finds multiple flaws in Plaintiffs’ assertion that they have pleaded sufficient facts 11 and allegations for an inference of reliance. A careful reading of the Amended Complaint reveals 12 that Plaintiffs never alleged reliance on any specific representation or advertising in registering for 13 or using the LinkedIn website. Although Plaintiffs describe “advertisements and inducements . . .
14 made within the State of California” and “promotional materials [] intended as inducements to 15 purchase and use products and services” that “misrepresented and/or omitted the truth about the 16 extent to which Defendant would share valuable information with third parties,” Plaintiffs never 17 identify any advertisements or promotional materials exhibiting the alleged misrepresentations or 18 omissions or allege that Plaintiffs viewed and subsequently relied on these materials. AC ¶ 90. As 19 noted by Defendant, although the Amended Complaint describes the terms of Defendant’s privacy 20 policy in detail, Plaintiffs never allege that they were aware of the privacy policy, let alone saw or 21 read it. Other courts have found the lack of allegations that a plaintiff had read an alleged false 22 representation to be fatal to an FAL claim. See e.g., Durell v. Sharp Healthcare, 183 Cal. App. 4th 23 1350, 1363 (2010) (“ the [complaint] does not allege Durell ever visited Sharp’s Web site or even 24 that he ever read the Agreement for Services.”). Without an allegation that Plaintiffs were 25 somehow aware of contents of Defendant’s privacy policy, this Court finds that Plaintiffs cannot 26
27
28

1 allege Defendant’s misrepresentations were an “immediate cause of the injury-causing conduct.”⁴
2 Accordingly, Defendant’s motion to dismiss the FAL claim is GRANTED.

3 Plaintiff Low alleged a violation of the FAL in the original complaint. Compl. ¶¶ 69-75.
4 Defendant asserted the same arguments to dismiss the FAL claim in its initial motion to dismiss 5 that it now asserts in the second motion to dismiss. Compare Motion to Dismiss at 13-16, ECF No.
6 13 with Mot. to Dismiss at 19-20, ECF No. 34. Specifically, Defendant argued that Plaintiff’s FAL
7 claim failed because Plaintiff had failed to establish both a loss of money or property and reliance
8 on the allegedly false advertising. Motion to Dismiss at 13-16, ECF No. 13. Plaintiffs cured one 9 of the defects by adding Plaintiff Masand, a paid subscriber to LinkedIn’s services, and thus 10 established that at least one of the named Plaintiffs could have lost money or property in the 11 transaction. However, despite Defendant’s argument in the first motion to dismiss that reliance 12 was a necessary element to establish an FAL violation, Plaintiffs failed to establish actual reliance 13 by either Plaintiff in the Amended Complaint. Accordingly, the Court finds amendment would be 14 futile, and thus grants Defendant’s motion to dismiss count three with prejudice.

15 4. Breach of Contract

16 Plaintiffs’ fourth cause of action is for breach of contract. Under California law, to state a 17 claim for breach of contract a plaintiff must plead “the contract, plaintiffs’ performance (or excuse 18 for nonperformance), defendant’s breach, and damage to plaintiff therefrom.” Gautier v. General 19 Tel. Co., 234 Cal. App. 2d 302, 305 (1965). To establish contractual damages, a Plaintiff must 20 establish “appreciable and actual damage.” Aguilera v. Pirelli Armstrong Tire Corp., 223 F.3d 21 1010, 1015 (9th Cir. 2000); Patent Scaffolding Co. v. William Simpson Const. Co., 256 Cal. App.
22 2d 506, 511 (1967) (“A breach of contract without damage is not actionable.”). Nominal damages, 23 speculative harm, or threat of future harm do not suffice to show legally cognizable injury. See 24 Aguilera, 223 F.3d at 1015; see also Ruiz, 622 F. Supp. 2d at 917.

26 _____
27 ⁴ Plaintiffs attempt to circumvent their failure to adequately plead reliance by creatively 28 characterizing their FAL claim as one premised on omissions. Plaintiffs argue that it was Defendant’s nondisclosure of its practice of providing user’s personal information to third parties that serves as the basis of Plaintiff’s theory of harm, as opposed to affirmative representations that were false or misleading. This theory is unpersuasive because Plaintiffs still have failed to allege that Plaintiffs were aware of, read, and relied on Defendant’s privacy policy.

1 Plaintiffs allege two theories of damages in the Amended Complaint. First, Plaintiffs allege 2 that they suffered “embarrass[ment] and humiliat[ion caused] by the disclosure of their personally 3 identifiable browsing history[ies].” AC ¶ 5. Second, Plaintiffs allege that their “personal 4 information is valuable property” that they “exchange[d] for LinkedIn’s services.” According to 5 Plaintiffs, because their personal information has a market value, and as a result of Defendant’s 6 breach of contract, “Plaintiffs relinquished this valuable personal property without compensation to 7 which they were each due.” Id.

8 Neither theory of harm is sufficient to state a claim for breach of contract under California 9 law. Plaintiffs’ first theory that they suffered “embarrassment and humiliation,” in addition to 10 being implausible in light of the specific factual allegations in the Amended Complaint, is clearly 11 foreclosed by California law. Emotional and physical distress damages are not recoverable on a 12 California contract claim. Gibson v. Office of the Attorney Gen., 561 F.3d 920, 929 (9th Cir.
13 2009); Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd., 7 Cal. 4th 503, 516 (1994).

14 Secondly, as discussed extensively in the November 2011 Order, the premise of Plaintiffs’ 15 alternative theory that their personal information has independent economic value is unsupported 16 by decisions of other district courts, which have held that unauthorized collection of personal 17 information does not create an economic loss. See In re iPhone Application Litig., No. 11-MDL-
18 02250 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 20, 2011); In re Doubleclick, Inc., Privacy Litig., 154 F. Supp. 2d 497, 525 19 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (holding that unauthorized collection of personal information by a third-party is 20 not “economic loss”); see also In re JetBlue Airways Corp., Privacy Litig., 379 F. Supp. 2d 299, 21 327 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (explaining that airline’s disclosure of passenger data to third party in 22 violation of airline’s privacy policy had no compensable value). Neither the Amended Complaint 23 nor Plaintiff’s Opposition to the Motion to Dismiss cite legal or statutory authority to the contrary, 24 and the Court is unconvinced by the technical reports cited by Plaintiffs in support of this theory.
25 AC ¶¶ 44-46.

26 Furthermore, the Court agrees with Defendant that even accepting the Plaintiffs’ theory that 27 personal information does have independent economic value that has been diminished by 28 Defendant’s alleged breach of contract, this loss in value would not be a cognizable form of 1 contract damages. A basic principle of contract law is that the “purpose of contract damages is to 2 put a plaintiff in the same economic position he or she would have occupied had the contract been 3 fully performed.” Katz v. Dime Sav. Bank, FSB, 992 F. Supp. 250, 255 (W.D.N.Y. 1997).

4 Plaintiffs have not persuasively alleged that they “reasonably expect[ed] that they would be 5 compensated for the ‘value’ of their personal information.” In re Jetblue Airways Corp. Privacy 6 Litig., 379 F. Supp. 2d at 327. Plaintiffs have not alleged that they, or any other LinkedIn users, 7 have been foreclosed from opportunities to capitalize on the value of their personal data. Although 8 Plaintiffs cite to Allow Ltd. as an example of a company that offers to sell people’s personal 9 information on their behalf and gives them 70% of the sale, Plaintiffs do not allege that they have 10 made any attempt to do so through Allow Ltd. or any similar service. In sum, the alleged decrease 11 in the value of Plaintiffs’ personal information does not constitute cognizable contract damages for 12 the purposes of a breach of contract claim.

13 In their Opposition, Plaintiffs do not address any of Defendant’s substantive arguments on 14 this issue of contract damages. They simply reallege that Plaintiffs entered into a contract with 15 Defendant, Defendant breached the contract, and therefore “Plaintiffs are entitled to contractual 16 damages.” Opp’n at 26. However such a conclusory statement is insufficient to state a claim for 17 breach of contract. In re Facebook Privacy Litig., 791 F. Supp. 2d at 717; Patent Scaffolding Co., 18 256 Cal. App. 2d at 511. Accordingly, Defendant’s motion to dismiss the breach of contract claim 19 is GRANTED.

20 The original complaint included a breach of contract cause of action. Compl. ¶¶ 86-92.
21 Defendant asserted the same arguments in support of its motion to dismiss the breach of contract 22 claim in its initial motion as it now asserts in the second motion to dismiss. Compare Motion to 23 Dismiss at 21-23, ECF No. 13 with Mot. to Dismiss at 22-23, ECF No. 34. Specifically, in the 24 original motion, Defendant argued that Plaintiff failed to establish appreciable and actual damages 25 in his breach of contract claim. Despite this, Plaintiffs did not allege appreciable or actual damages 26 in the Amended Complaint.

27 Moreover, in the November 2011 Order, the Court identified several problems with 28 Plaintiff’s theory of harm. Specifically, the Court explained that the theory of economic harm

1 advanced by Plaintiff was too abstract and speculative to support Article III standing. Although 2 Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint has satisfied the Article III standing requirement based on statutory 3 standing, the issues the Court initially identified with respect to the theory of harm also apply to the 4 breach of contract claim and were not cured in the Amended Complaint. Therefore, leave to 5 amend would likely be futile as to the breach of contract claim, and Defendant's motion to dismiss 6 is granted with prejudice.

7 5. Conversion

8 Plaintiffs' sixth cause of action alleges that Defendant's conduct constitutes conversion 9 under California law. California law defines conversion as "any act of dominion wrongfully 10 asserted over another's personal property in denial of or inconsistent with his rights therein." In re 11 Bailey, 197 F.3d 997, 1000 (9th Cir. 1999). "The conversion of another's property without his 12 knowledge or consent, done intentionally and without justification and excuse, to the other's injury, 13 constitutes a willful and malicious injury within the meaning of § 523(a)(6)." In re Bailey, 197 14 F.3d at 1000 (citing Transamerica Comm. Fin. Corp. v. Littleton, 942 F.2d 551, 554 (9th Cir.
15 1994)). To establish conversion, a plaintiff must show "ownership or right to possession of 16 property, wrongful disposition of the property right and damages." Kremen v. Cohen, 337 F.3d 17 1024, 1029 (9th Cir. 2003). The court applies a three part test to determine whether a property 18 right exists: "[f]irst, there must be an interest capable of precise definition; second, it must be 19 capable of exclusive possession or control; and third, the putative owner must have established a 20 legitimate claim to exclusivity." Id. at 1030; Boon Rawd Trading Int'l Co. v. Paleewong Trading 21 Co., 688 F. Supp. 2d 940, 955 (N.D. Cal. 2010).

22 Plaintiffs allege that Defendant "unlawfully exercised dominion" over "Plaintiffs' personal 23 browsing history and other personally identifiable information – including full name, email 24 address, mailing address, zip code, telephone number, and credit card number" and that such 25 information is "valuable property owned by Plaintiffs." AC ¶¶ 110-111. Plaintiffs' claim fails to 26 establish the requisite "property interest" to state a claim for conversion. See Opp'n at 24-25 27 (Plaintiffs' opposition conflates the invasion of a privacy interest (discussed above), with the 28 conversion of a property interest). As an initial matter, this court has already rejected a similar

1 argument because the weight of authority holds that a plaintiff’s “personal information” does not 2 constitute property. See, e.g., In re iPhone Application Litig., ___ F.3d ___, Case No. 11-MD-02250-3 LHK, 2012 WL 2126351, at *27 (holding that “personal information” is not property); see also 4 Thompson v. Home Depot, Inc., No. 07cv1058 IEG, 2007 WL 2746603, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 18, 5 2007); In re Facebook Privacy Litig., 791 F. Supp. 2d at 715.

6 Additionally, although Plaintiffs allege that “personally identifiable information – including 7 full name, email address, mailing address, zip code, telephone number, and credit card number” 8 was disclosed to third parties, these statements are not supported by the factual allegations in the 9 Amended Complaint. Indeed, the factual allegations only establish disclosure of limited 10 information. This information includes the LinkedIn user identification number, the URL of the 11 viewed LinkedIn profile pages, and allegedly the subsequent LinkedIn browser history. Plaintiffs 12 do not have a property interest in the information disclosed to third parties. For one, the LinkedIn 13 user identification number generated by LinkedIn is not property over which Plaintiffs have 14 “established a legitimate claim to exclusivity.” Kremen, 337 F.3d at 1030. Similarly, information 15 such as what LinkedIn profile pages are viewed by a user is not “capable of exclusive possession or 16 control.” Id.

17 Finally, Plaintiffs have failed to establish the requisite claim for damages necessary to 18 establish a claim for conversion. Kremen, 337 F.3d at 1029. As explained in the November 2011
19 Order and as described above, “Low has failed to allege how he was foreclosed from capitalizing 20 on the value of his personal data or how he was ‘deprived of the economic value of [his] personal 21 information simply because [his] unspecified personal information was purportedly collected by a 22 third party.’” November 2011 Order at 7 (citing LaCourt v. Specific Media, Inc., No. SACV10-23 1256-GW(JCGx), 2011 WL 1661532 at *5 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2011)). The Amended Complaint 24 fails to cure this deficiency, and therefore, Plaintiffs have not established a necessary element of 25 their claim for conversion. Accordingly, Defendant’s motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ sixth cause of 26 action is GRANTED.

27 The original complaint also included a claim for conversion. Compl. ¶¶ 108-111.
28 Defendant asserted the same arguments in its initial motion to dismiss as it asserts in the second

1 motion to dismiss. Compare Motion to Dismiss at 23-24, ECF No. 13 with Mot. to Dismiss at 23-2 24, ECF No. 34. In the original motion to dismiss the conversion claim, Defendant argued that 3 Plaintiffs failed to establish a property interest in the personal information transmitted to third 4 parties and resulting damages in order to state a claim for conversion. Despite this notice, 5 Plaintiffs did not cure these defects in the Amended Complaint. Therefore, leave to amend 6 Plaintiffs' claim for conversion would likely be futile, and Defendant's motion to dismiss is 7 granted with prejudice.

8 6. Unjust Enrichment

9 Plaintiffs' seventh cause of action against Defendant is for unjust enrichment. AC ¶¶ 113-10 121. Plaintiffs' opposition failed to address their claim for unjust enrichment. Accordingly, the 11 Court deems this claim abandoned. See In re TFT-LCD Antitrust Litig., 586 F. Supp. 2d 1109, 12 1131 (N.D. Cal. 2008).

13 Moreover, California does not recognize a stand-alone cause of action for unjust 14 enrichment: "[u]njust enrichment is not a cause of action, just a restitution claim." Hill v. Roll Int'l 15 Corp., 195 Cal. App. 4th 1295, 1307 (2011); accord Levine v. Blue Shield of Cal., 189 Cal. App.
16 4th 1117, 1138 (2010); Melchior v. New Line Prods., Inc., 106 Cal. App. 4th 779, 793 (2003); 17 Durell v. Sharp Healthcare, 183 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1370 (2010). Both this Court, as well as other 18 federal district courts, have previously determined that "there is no cause of action for unjust 19 enrichment under California law." Fraley v. Facebook, 830 F. Supp. 2d 785, 2011 WL 6303898, 20 at *23 (N.D. Cal. 2011); accord Ferrington v. McAfee, Inc., No. 10-cv-01455-LHK, 2010 WL
21 3910169, at *17 (N.D. Cal. 2010); see also Robinson v. HSBC Bank USA, 732 F. Supp. 2d 976, 22 987 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (Illston, J.) (dismissing with prejudice plaintiffs' unjust enrichment claim 23 brought in connection with claims of misappropriation and violation of the UCL because unjust 24 enrichment does not exist as a stand-alone cause of action); Specific Media, Inc., 2011 WL 25 1661532 at *8 (dismissing unjust enrichment claim because it "cannot serve as an independent 26 cause of action"); In re DirecTV Early Cancellation Litig., 738 F. Supp. 2d 1062, 1091-92 (C.D.
27 Cal. 2010) (same). Thus, Plaintiffs' unjust enrichment claim does not properly state an 28 independent cause of action and must be dismissed. See Levine, 189 Cal. App. 4th at 1138.

1 Accordingly, Defendant’s motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ seventh cause of action is GRANTED.
2 Because this claim is not recognized in California as a matter of law, Defendant’s motion to 3 dismiss is granted with prejudice.

4 7. Negligence

5 Plaintiffs’ eighth cause of action is a claim for negligence against Defendant. The elements 6 of negligence under California law are: “(a) a legal duty to use due care; (b) a breach of such legal 7 duty; [and] (c) the breach as the proximate or legal cause of the resulting injury.” Evan F. v.
8 Hughson United Methodist Church, 8 Cal. App. 4th 828, 834 (1992) (italics in original). Plaintiffs 9 allege that “LinkedIn owed a duty to Plaintiffs and Class members to comply with its stated 10 privacy policy and terms of service, and to protect its users’ information from disclosure to or 11 access by unauthorized third parties.” AC ¶ 123. Plaintiffs allege that LinkedIn breached that duty 12 by allowing disclosure of LinkedIn IDs to third parties and allowing access to users’ LinkedIn 13 profile pages. AC ¶ 124.

14 Even assuming that LinkedIn owes an affirmative duty not to disclose the LinkedIn user 15 identification numbers, or to allow third parties access to users’ LinkedIn profile pages, Plaintiffs 16 have not alleged an “appreciable, nonspeculative, present injury.” See Aas v. Super. Ct., 24 Cal.
17 4th 627, 646 (2000) superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Rosen v. State Farm Gen.
18 Ins. Co., 30 Cal. 4th 1070, 1079-80 (2003). Plaintiffs allege that “LinkedIn’s negligent actions 19 directly and proximately caused Plaintiffs and Class members harm.” AC ¶ 125. Beyond this 20 allegation, Plaintiffs have not identified what the “appreciable, nonspeculative, present injury” is.
21 Indeed, as explained above, the Amended Complaint fails to allege how either Plaintiff was 22 foreclosed from capitalizing on the value of his personal data. Moreover, although Plaintiffs 23 theorize that third parties could de-anonymize this data, it is not clear that anyone has actually done
24 so, or what information, precisely, these third parties have obtained. Therefore, Defendant’s 25 motion to dismiss the eighth cause of action for negligence is GRANTED.

26 The original complaint did not include a claim for negligence. Although a claim for 27 negligence was not addressed in the November 2011 Order, the Court’s reasoning in dismissing 28 the original complaint put Plaintiffs on notice that they had to articulate a nonspeculative theory of 1 actual harm in the Amended Complaint. In the November 2011 Order, the Court found that 2 Plaintiff’s original complaint failed to establish harm under Article III standing. Specifically, the 3 Court explained that Plaintiff’s theory of emotional harm was deficient because “Plaintiff has not 4 alleged that his browsing history, with embarrassing details of his personal browsing patterns, was 5 actually linked to his identity by LinkedIn” and that “Plaintiff’s allegation that his sensitive 6 information may be transmitted via his browser history is too theoretical.” November 2011 Order 7 at 4-5. Similarly, the Court explained that Plaintiff “failed to allege facts that demonstrate that he 8 was economically harmed by LinkedIn’s practices” and that that Plaintiff “failed to allege how he 9 was foreclosed from capitalizing on the value of his personal data or how he was ‘deprived of the 10 economic value of [his] personal information simply because [his] unspecified personal 11 information was purportedly collected by a third party.” Id. at 7 (citing Specific Media, 2011 WL 12 1661532 at *5).

13 Although the Amended Complaint and opposition to the second motion to dismiss clarified
14 that Plaintiffs have statutory standing in this case, Plaintiffs still have not established a cognizable 15 theory of appreciable, nonspeculative injury to state a claim for negligence. Given that Plaintiffs 16 were on notice of this Court’s concerns regarding the theory of harm and failed to cure the defects 17 in the Amended Complaint, it appears that leave to amend would likely be futile. Accordingly, 18 Defendant’s motion to dismiss the negligence claim is granted with prejudice.

19 C. Leave to Amend

20 In order to determine whether leave to amend should be granted, the Court must consider 21 “undue delay, bad faith or dilatory motive on the part of the movant, repeated failure to cure 22 deficiencies by amendments previously allowed, undue prejudice to the opposing party by virtue of 23 allowance of the amendment, [and] futility of amendment, etc.” Eminence Capital, LLC v.
24 Aspeon, Inc., 316 F.3d 1048, 1051-52 (9th Cir. 2003) (quoting Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182 25 (1962)). Leave to amend need not be granted where doing so would be an exercise in futility. See 26 Nordyke v. King, 644 F.3d 776, 788 n.12 (9th Cir. 2011) (leave to amend). “A district court may 27 deny a plaintiff leave to amend if it determines that allegation of other facts consistent with the 28 challenged pleading could not possibly cure the deficiency, or if the plaintiff had several

1 opportunities to amend its complaint and repeatedly failed to cure deficiencies.” Telesaurus VPC, 2 LLC v. Power, 623 F.3d 998, 1003 (9th Cir. 2010) (citations and quotation marks omitted).

3 All of the asserted claims in the Amended Complaint, with the exception of Plaintiffs’ 4 claim for negligence, were raised in the original complaint. As explained above, with respect to 5 each cause of action, Plaintiffs’ claims are dismissed without leave to amend either (1) because the 6 claim is legally defective, (2) because Defendant raised the same issue in the initial motion to 7 dismiss which Plaintiff failed to cure in the Amended Complaint, and/or (3) because the Plaintiff
8 failed to cure deficiencies regarding Plaintiff’s theory of harm as identified in the November 2011 9 Order.

10 In the first category of claims, the Court finds that Plaintiffs’ SCA claim and the claim for 11 unjust enrichment are legally defective and cannot be cured by amendment. As explained above, 12 these claims fail because the theory upon which the claims are based are legally defective.

13 In the second category of claims, the Court finds that Plaintiffs’ claims if invasion of 14 privacy, breach of contract, violation of the FAL, and conversion are dismissed with prejudice 15 because any amendment would likely be futile. Defendant’s first motion to dismiss placed 16 Plaintiffs on notice regarding the deficiencies of these claims in the complaint, and Plaintiffs failed 17 to cure the defects in the Amended Complaint.

18 Finally, in the third category, the Court finds that amendment of Plaintiffs’ breach of 19 contract, conversion and negligence claims would be futile because each claim fails to establish 20 cognizable harm and to cure the deficiencies identified in the November 2011 Order.

21 For the foregoing reasons, the Court finds that leave to amend would be futile as to each of 22 the claims in the Amended Complaint. Therefore, Defendant’s motion to dismiss for failure to 23 state a claim is granted with prejudice.

24 III. CONCLUSION

25 For the foregoing reasons the Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss is DENIED in part and 26 GRANTED in part.

27 Defendant’s motion to dismiss for lack of Article III standing is DENIED.

28 Defendant’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s SCA claim is GRANTED, with prejudice.
