The parties have asked for clarification regarding how certain claim terms should appear in the jury notebooks. The Court has considered the parties’ positions. There are five disputes that require a ruling. The parties shall use the claim constructions described below in the jury notebooks.

1. The ‘381 Patent

- The term “electronic document” means “a document stored in a digital format.” An “electronic document” includes, but is not limited to, a web page; a digital image; word process, spreadsheet or presentation document; or a list of items in a digital format.” An electronic document need not be stored in a single file.

- The term “translating the electronic document in a second direction” was not proposed for construction, and therefore has its plain and ordinary meaning.”
- 2. The ‘163 Patent
  - The Court has not construed any terms from this patent, and therefore the terms from this patent should be given their plain and ordinary meaning.
- 3. The ‘460 Patent
  - The Court has not construed any terms from this patent, and therefore the terms from this patent should be given their plain and ordinary meaning.
- 4. The ‘711 Patent
  - The term “applet” means “an application designed to run within an application module that need not be operating system-independent.”

IT IS SO ORDERED.
