SUPPLEMENTAL SUBMISSION IN SUPPORT OF EMERGENCY
 MOTION BY NONPARTY
 MOTOROLA MOBILITY LLC TO
 SEAL EXHIBITS, CLOSE
 COURTROOM, AND SEAL
 PORTIONS OF TRANSCRIPT

[Civ. L.R. 79-5]

Date: Expedited Request
 Courtroom: 8, 4th Floor
 Judge: Hon. Lucy H. Koh

1 On Friday, July 27, 2012, the Court held a case management conference. During that 2 conference, among other things, the Court discussed motions filed by various third parties, which
3 included the Emergency Motion by Nonparty Motorola Mobility LLC to Seal Exhibits, Close
4 Courtroom, and Seal Portions of Transcript (Dkt. No. 1400) (“Motorola’s Motion”). During the 5 conference, the Court ruled that third parties, including Motorola could file supplemental 6 declarations to establish that documents concerning expired license agreements should be 7 entitled to trade secret protection:

8 The Court: So far as the third parties are concerned, your request to protect 9 those, you know, royalty rate and the no payment term, compensation term,
10 however it’s structured and the duration pricing, that’s fine.

11 Mr. Hemminger: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

12 The Court: So any of the other third party who wishes to be heard?

13 Mr. McCauley: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Robert McCauley on behalf of 14 Philips Electronics.

15 I’m sorry, Your Honor. There’s been some discussion about licenses that have 16 been expired and I’m wondering whether, in view of the Court’s comments that 17 you just made, the staleness issue, as the Court called it, is not going to override a 18 declaration that says that this is competitively sensitive information, and that if it
19 were acquired by competitors, it could irreparably harm, for instance, my client.

20 The Court: If you can make the appropriate showing in your declaration that the 21 expiration of the license is not dispositive, yeah, that’s right.

22 Transcript of Case Management Conference at 27:15-28:14 (July 27, 2012), Apple v. Samsung,
23 No. 11-CV-01846-LHK (N.D. Cal.). The Court invited third parties to make supplemental 24 submissions in support of their motions to seal: “The Court: So who wants to redo their sealing
25 motion, other than the two parties and Intel? Anyone else? Or is everyone else satisfied with 26 what they have submitted?” Id. at 29:20-23. Motorola sought and was granted approval to 27 supplement its motion to seal. Id. at 35:23-36:6. See also Minute Order and Case Management
28 Order (Dkt. No. 1426) at p. 2 (the Court ordered that “Intel, and possibly RIM, IBM, Motorola
29 Mobility, and Philips may also file supplemental declarations in support of the motions to seal by 30 July 30, 2012 at 5:00 p.m.”).

31 In accordance with the Court’s rulings, Motorola submits herewith the Declaration of 32 Brian C. Blasius in further support of Motorola’s Motion (“Blasius Decl.”). This declaration,

1 and the Declaration of Thomas V. Miller filed on July 26, 2012, Dkt. No. 1400-1, establish that
2 disclosure of the sensitive terms of the license agreements between Motorola and Samsung that 3 are identified in Samsung's proposed Trial Exhibits Nos. 77, 630, and 631, even though the 4 referenced licenses are now expired, as well as analogous information in proposed Trial Exhibit
5 No. 82 would be harmful to Motorola Mobility in its ongoing licensing activities. See Blasius
6 Decl. Rather than restating the contents of the Blasius Declaration, Motorola refers the Court to 7 that Declaration. Accordingly, Motorola renews the request set forth in its Motion.
