Chinese manufacturers piggyback off of successful products by cranking out thousands of copies, nowhere is this truer than with the success of the iPhone. There are literally hundreds of iPhone knockoffs, ranging from empty shells with the LED Apple logo lit up to exact copies (until the phone stops working and you crack it open to find all the parts are in the wrong place).

Here are our ten favorite wannabe phones:

10. Prada

We had to start the list off with the Prada for two reasons: one, because the name is so closely associated with great design, and two, because the design here is so flagrantly an iPhone it's hilarious.

Seriously, Prada? How often do you complain about those evil pirates stealing your clothes, and then you turn around and do this? We're going to buy knockoff handbags without wincing, now.

9. LG Dare

LG, on the other hand, should really know better. So, your big innovation on the iPhone is...to mess up the icons on the screen? Really? That's your big sales innovation? Sheesh.

8. oPhone

The oPhone is the first of many fine Chinese products that will make this list, but it comes first because this is from a respectable manufacturer. Lenovo is what IBM's computer division used to be before IBM became a trivia question. And, we see they're carrying on the torch of innovation that led to IBM being taken over by a Chinese company in the first place. We think they just recycled the case from a Palm for this one.

7. The tPhone

Of all the competitors on this list, the tPhone gets the praise for being the most gutsy. They don't even pretend they're not ripping off the iPhone, they just get right in there and even steal the Apple logo, flipping it around so that, well, we guess that if you look in the mirror you can pretend you own an iPhone (image: chineseornot.com).

6. The 200 Fashion Mobile Phone

The 200 Fashion, on the other hand, is just kind of sad. It's like they wanted to do an iPhone knockoff, they were so close, but the touch screen thing just wasn't affordable, so they kind of stuffed a keypad down at the bottom and called it a day. There's nothing sadder than piracy that fails.

5. The A88

On the other end of the spectrum is the A88, a knockoff so perfect you won't even notice it's a knockoff until you look more closely at the icons on the screen, and try to use the phone (which isn't exactly a zippy, fun-filled experience) and realize you've been had. As counterfeits go, this one is awesome. Also, illegal.

4. The HiPhone

Second place in the fairly convincing knockoff sweepstakes is the HiPhone, which is just like the iPhone, but not quite enough for Apple to sue, because other than looking exactly like it, it's one letter off. Somehow, we don't think the Jimmy Hart Version laws really apply to consumer electronics, guys.

3. The C-002

The C-002 missed first place for one reason; that screen is terrible! Even in the few ugly as heck JPEGs we found of this thing, it looked like somebody had run over a monitor from 1995 with a steamroller. Who was this going to fool? The blind? The technophobic? It's the details that make a forgery, people! I mean, really, if you don't even care enough to get the details right...

2. Meizu M8

Of all our knockoffs, the Meizu M8 deserves credit for actually bothering to inject some of its own design elements. Instead of just looking completely like an iPhone, it injects a little bit of its own style into the mix. Granted that style makes it look like it's from the late '90s, but it's a start, anyway.

1. CECT P168

Our number one phone gets the top position for a very simple reason. It's kind of exactly what you imagine when you imagine "iPhone knockoff;" something with the same design that's just not quite as good as the original.

For us, the hilarious part is the speaker grills drilled into each corner. They kept the speaker grill from the original iPhone design, but added another four. It makes this thing look like it's made out of Lego. Or that it's a kid's toy. But this is apparently a fully functional phone. It's just kind of ridiculous looking.

Although that pretty much describes all of the phones on this list...

Just FYI. The Prada is actually an LG phone that was designed by Prada. It came out in 2006 whereas the Iphone came out in 2007. Therefore not an iphone ripoff.

YES! thankyou! I was about to write that in a comment.

You'd think someone writing this sort of artical would have look up their facts.

Its good to see someone with sense.

Shock and horror. Information on the 'net turns out to be inaccurate.

So, the Prada phone is not a ripoff copycat, but the rest are.

And yes, every 'android' whatever phone IS a knockoff. Anyone can do a tear-down-and-copy job.

So do you want a Hyundai Sonata or a 328i?

Ok let me get this straight. So every phone that comes out from now on with a touchscreen (and even a full keypad in the case of #6) is inevitably a rip off of the iphone? Yes I know there are truly full-out Chinese copies, but LG and ALL Androids? There where many phones that came out earlier than the iphone with similar features. My next list will be titled “Top Ten LG Prada Ripoffs” and take a HUGE guess with phone will be #1! If you want to argue that LG still ripped off Apple by use of a time machine or something, (probably also made by Apple right?) there are plenty of others that predate the Iphone. The Siemens SX56 (HTC Wallaby) was introduced all the way back in 2002 and came equipped with the Microsoft Pocket PC 2002 Phone Edition, an Intel CPU, and a Flash ROM, and what else but a touchscreen! Go buy another black turtleneck and a pair of old-man jeans Mr. Jobs.

Yeah the LG prada was in SK and came out way before the Iphone, you need to get your facts straight before posting stuff like this on the Internet.

I'm sorry but yeah if you're going to publish something online on a site that is well read, get your facts straight. the iphone is more or less a knock-off of this prada phone by LG

What about the Droid Incredible? total iPhone knockoff.

Reply

- o Ethan says:

How is it, exactly?

Its more powerful than any iphone ever made.

Better camera, better calling capabilities.

Uses a truly open source OS insted of being tied down to crapple.

So how is it a knockoff? Because it has a touch screen and a candy bar shape (apple knocked them off other companies...)

Just because something is (arguably) an improvement over it's predecessor, doesn't mean it's not a knock off...

I'm not the writer of this list, but I am an editor for toptenz and thought I better check out the facts behind #10 before anyone's head completely pops off over the controversy. Yes, it looks like the LG Prada was available for sale before the iPhone. In that case it doesn't qualify as a knock-off, unless there is an iTimeMachine coming out soon that I don't know about.

On another note, the lists on this site are written by humans just like you, which means mistakes are made. The Internet is full of all sorts of intentionally misleading information- why not save your time (and your name-calling) for that instead of picking on this writer?

I also challenge any of you to write your own top 10 list and submit it... come on, you know you secretly want to participate – and it can be a lot of fun! I often invite the harshest critics to send in their own list and I haven't received one yet – prove me wrong and send it in! (Check out the guidelines from the home page).

the only real knockoffs on this list

oPhone – name

tPhone – name and logo

A88 – design

HiPhone – name

the rest is your run of the mill subpar smartphones, beeing a smartphone does not makes it a iphone rippoff

I purchased the CECT P168++ a few years ago. The worst cell phone I have ever had. So what do you think I did this time? I bought another CECT phone of course. This time I did a lot of research and praying. I was not going to spend $400+ for a phone just because it is an American phone company selling it. Crap for five times what the makers of most of those phones want for their products.

So this time I bought a CECT N97. So far it is a great cell phone. The best I have ever had. I'm a close to a true geek so I love discovering new things my gadgets can do now and then. This phone has so many I am still finding them. TV, WIFI, Radio, Two cameras (front and back), flash and flash light, okay, I will stop there but the list goes on and on. It all words very well. All this for $117. I bought two. One for me and one for my wife. I'm not sure why they used N96 software but then, what difference does it make? I guess the big question anyway is can you get reception on your new Iphone?

does anyone really care about the iphone clones anymore? china produce tons of iphone clones that some of my pals are using it on day to day basis.

The Prada phone was already announced BEFORE the iPhone was released. And; LG Dare SO does not look like the iPhone. Many other OS use the same interface as the iPhone does.
