AMERICA, LLC,)
a Delaware limited liability company,) Defendants and Counterclaimants.)

On June 26, 2012, the Court preliminarily enjoined Samsung from “making, using, offering to sell, or selling within the United States, or importing into the United States, Samsung’s Galaxy Tab 10.1 tablet computer, and any product that is no more than colorably different from this specified product and embodies any design contained in U.S. Design Patent No. D504,889.” ECF No. 1135 (“June 26 Preliminary Injunction”) at 7. Samsung timely filed a notice of appeal that same day, and that appeal remains pending before the Federal Circuit. After the conclusion of a three-week trial in this case, the jury returned a verdict finding that the Galaxy Tab 10.1 does not infringe Apple’s D’889 Patent. ECF No. 1930 at 7; ECF No. 1931 at 7. Judgment was entered in favor of Apple and against Samsung on August 24, 2012. ECF No. 1933 (“August 24 Judgment”).

1 Based on what it claimed to be the Court’s “ent[ry of] final judgment reflecting the jury
2 verdict,” on August 26, 2012, Samsung filed a motion for the Court to dissolve the June 26
3 Preliminary Injunction and to retain the $2.6 million bond posted by Apple pending determination
4 of damages suffered by Samsung as a result of the injunction. ECF No. 1936 (“Mot.”) at 2.
5 Pursuant to the briefing schedule set by the Court, Apple filed an opposition on September 10,
6 2012, see ECF No. 1963 (“Opp’n”), and Samsung filed a reply on September 14, 2012, see ECF
7 No. 1967 (“Reply”). The Court finds this matter suitable for determination without oral argument
8 and thus VACATES the hearing set on Samsung’s motion scheduled for September 20, 2012. See
9 Civ. L.R. 7-1(b). Having considered the parties’ submissions, and for the reasons explained below,
10 the Court DENIES without prejudice Samsung’s motion to dissolve, and instead ISSUES an 11 indicative ruling pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 62.1 that Samsung’s motion raises a 12 substantial issue.

13 First, notwithstanding Samsung’s characterization of the August 24 Judgment as “final” in 14 its opening brief, the parties now agree that, because the August 24 Judgment referred simply to the 15 jury verdict and did not resolve all substantive remedies, including Apple’s requests for injunctive
16 relief and enhanced damages, the judgment is not “final” for purposes of appeal. See Opp’n at 3;
17 Reply at 1; see also Riley v. Kennedy, 553 U.S. 406, 419 (2008) (“[A]n order resolving liability
18 without addressing a plaintiff’s requests for relief is not final.”). Accordingly, the August 24
19 Judgment likewise is not a final judgment as would automatically dissolve the June 26 Preliminary 20 Injunction. Cf. U.S. Philips Corp. v. KBC Bank N.V., 590 F.3d 1091, 1093-94 (9th Cir. 2010) (“A
21 preliminary injunction imposed according to the procedures outlined in Federal Rule of Civil 22 Procedure 65 dissolves ipso facto when a final judgment is entered in the cause.”).

23 Second, the parties agree that Samsung’s pending appeal of the June 26 Preliminary 24 Injunction deprives the Court of jurisdiction to dissolve the injunction until and unless the Federal 25 Circuit returns jurisdiction to this Court. See Opp’n at 1-2; Reply at 1; see also Griggs v. Provident
26 Consumer Disc. Co., 459 U.S. 56, 58 (1982) (per curiam); Newton v. Consolidated Gas Co., 258
27 U.S. 165, 177 (1922); McClatchy Newspapers v. Cent. Valley Typographical Union No. 46, 686
28

1 F.2d 731, 734-35 (9th Cir. 1982). Because the Court lacks jurisdiction to grant Samsung’s motion,
2 the motion to dissolve must be denied.

3 Finally, Samsung seeks, in the alternative, an indicative ruling pursuant to Federal Rule of 4 Civil Procedure 62.1. See Reply at 1-2. Rule 62.1(a) provides:

5 If a timely motion is made for relief that the court lacks authority to grant because of 6 an appeal that has been docketed and is pending, the court may:

- 7 (1) defer considering the motion;
8 (2) deny the motion; or
9 (3) state either that it would grant the motion if the court of appeals remands for 10 that purpose or that the motion raises a substantial issue.

11 If the Court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue, the 12 movant must promptly notify the circuit clerk, and the Court of Appeals may then decide whether 13 to remand for further proceedings. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(b); Fed. R. App. P. 12.1(a) & (b).

14 Samsung asks this Court to indicate that it would grant the requested relief if the Federal 15 Circuit remanded for that purpose, and upon restoration of jurisdiction, to dissolve the injunction
16 and retain Apple’s bond pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 62.1(c). Reply at 3. Apple
17 opposes this request on grounds that “Samsung’s motion cannot fairly be decided without resolving
18 Apple’s motions for JMOL that the Tab 10.1 infringes the D’889 patent and for an injunction based 19 on the verdict that the Tab 10.1 infringes the ’381, ’915, and ’163 patents.” Opp’n at 4. Apple
20 argues that the parties are currently briefing motions that could entitle Apple to a permanent 21 injunction against the Galaxy Tab 10.1, and that, “[i]f the Tab 10.1 injunction were dissolved and 22 then reinstated, this would be confusing to the market and would undermine the orderly 23 administration of justice.” Opp’n at 5.

24 The Court agrees with both parties, in part. The Court agrees with Samsung that the sole
25 basis for the June 26 Preliminary Injunction was the Court’s finding that Samsung likely infringed
26 the D’889 Patent. The jury has found otherwise. Thus, the sole basis for the June 26 Preliminary 27 Injunction no longer exists. Based on these facts alone, the Court at this time would dissolve the 28 June 26 Preliminary Injunction if the Court had jurisdiction. “Because injunctive relief is drafted in light of what the court believes will be the future course of events, . . . a court must never ignore

1 significant changes in the law or circumstances underlying an injunction lest the decree be turned
2 into an ‘instrument of wrong.’”¹ Salazar v. Buono, 130 S. Ct. 1803, 1816 (2010) (plurality
3 opinion) (quoting 11A C. Wright, A. Miller, & M. Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2961, at 4 393-94 (quoting United States v. Swift & Co., 286 U.S. 106, 115 (1932))); see Sys. Fed’n No. 91 v.
5 Wright, 364 U.S. 642, 647-48 (1961) (holding that a district court has “wide discretion” to modify
6 an injunction based on changed circumstances or new facts); A&M Records, Inc. v. Napster, Inc.,
7 284 F.3d 1091, 1098 (9th Cir. 2002) (same). The jury’s finding of non-infringement based on all
8 the evidence presented at trial clearly constitutes such a significant change in circumstances. Cf.
9 Amazon.com, Inc. v. Barnesandnoble.com, Inc., 239 F.3d 1343, 1350-51 (Fed. Cir. 2001) (holding 10 that a preliminary injunction should not issue if the non-moving party “raises a substantial question
11 concerning either infringement or invalidity, i.e., asserts an infringement or invalidity defense that 12 the patentee cannot prove ‘lacks substantial merit’” (quoting Genentech, Inc. v. Novo Nordisk, A/S, 13 108 F.3d 1361, 1364 (Fed. Cir. 1997)).

14 Moreover, the Court does not agree with Apple that Samsung’s motion for dissolution of 15 the June 26 Preliminary Injunction cannot be fairly decided without resolving Apple’s post-trial
16 motions. Even if Apple ultimately prevails on its post-trial motions, any permanent injunction
17 would be prospective and not retroactive.² Furthermore, the public has no interest in enjoining a 18 non-infringing product, and thus any market disruption caused by dissolution would be 19 insignificant compared to Samsung’s interest in restoring its product to market.

20 Nonetheless, the Court agrees with Apple that based on the post-trial motions, the Court
21 could, potentially, issue a permanent injunction on the Galaxy Tab 10.1. Thus, whether the Court
22 would dissolve the June 26 Preliminary Injunction may depend on the timing of when the Federal 23 Circuit issues the mandate restoring jurisdiction to this Court. Accordingly, the Court cannot issue

24
25 ¹ As noted by the Ninth Circuit, a party may be “wrongfully enjoined” without a preliminary 26 injunction having been “wrongfully issued.” See Nintendo of Am., Inc. v. Lewis Galoob Toys, Inc.,
27 16 F.3d 1032, 1036 n.4 (9th Cir. 1994) (affirming execution of bond upon determining defendant 28 had been wrongfully enjoined, despite having upheld the district court’s issuance of the preliminary injunction in an earlier appeal).

² The Court is not in any way commenting on the merits of any of the parties’ post-trial motions.

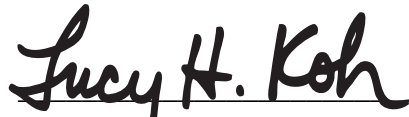

1 an indicative ruling that it would dissolve the June 26 Preliminary Injunction under all
2 circumstances.

3 However, under all circumstances, Samsung's motion raises a substantial issue, and the 4 Court therefore issues such an indicative ruling. "A statement that the motion raises substantial
5 issues does not tie the district court to a particular ruling on the motion after remand." In re
6 DirectTV Early Cancellation Fee Mktg. & Sales Practices Litig., 810 F. Supp. 2d 1060, 1066 (C.D.
7 Cal. 2011), rejected on other grounds by Kilgore v. KeyBank, Nat'l Ass'n, 673 F.3d 947 (9th Cir.
8 2012).

9 Accordingly, the Court DENIES without prejudice Samsung's motion to dissolve the June 10 26 Preliminary Injunction for lack of jurisdiction, and ISSUES an indicative ruling pursuant to 11 Rule 62.1(a)(3) that the motion raises a substantial issue.
